VOLUME XX.

1.—PRAKRIT INSCRIPTIONS FROM A BUDDHIST SITE AT NAGARJUNIKONDA.

BY PROFESSOR J. PH. VOGEL, PH. D., LEIDEN.

In March 1926 Mr. A. R. Sarasvati, Telugu Assistant in the office of the Assistant Archaeological Superintendent for Epigraphy at Madras, made a discovery of great interest at the hill of Nāgārjunikoṇḍa which belongs to the Palnāl taluk of the Guṇṭūr district of the Madras Presidency.¹ The hill, which is described as a big flat-topped hill some 200 acres in extent, overhangs the right bank of the river Kistna or Kṛishṇā, the Kaṇṇapennā or Kaṇṇavaṇṇā (Skt. Kṛishṇavarṇā) of Pali literature, at a distance of some 15 miles from Mācherla and on the border of the Nizam's Dominions. The top of the hill shows traces of fortifications, now in ruins. The find of a Buddhist sculpture led to the discovery of three vast mounds of large bricks in different parts of the valley, each, apparently, marking the site of a stūpa. In the vicinity of these mounds marble pillars were found, some of them standing erect in rows. Several more were reported to lie scattered in the neighbouring villages and on the other side of the river. Among the pillars left on the site there were three, one on each mound, bearing inscriptions in Prakrit and in Brāhmī characters.

At the request of Dr. Hīrānanda Śāstrī, Government Epigraphist, I undertook to edit the inscriptions in the Epigraphia Indica. A set of excellent estampages prepared under instructions from that officer, reached me in September 1926; but it was not until the end of that year that I could find the necessary leisure to decipher and study them. Early in March 1927, Dr. Hīrānanda Śāstrī informed me that trial excavations carried out on the site of Nāgārjunikoṇḍa by Mr. Hamid Kuraishi, then officiating as Superintendent of Archaeology in the Southern Circle, had yielded no less than eighteen more inscriptions and that their estampages would be sent to my address, in case I should be willing to edit them. I gladly consented to undertake this laborious but attractive task. As, however, there was a likelihood of the recently discovered inscriptions being of some help in elucidating doubtful points in those found previously, I suggested that the epigraphical finds of Nāgārjunikoṇḍa might be best dealt with in one article. Dr. Hīrānanda Śāstrī accepted this proposal and in October 1927 supplied me with a complete set of estampages admirably executed.

During the cold season of 1927-28 the excavations at Nāgārjunikoṇḍa were continued under the supervision of Mr. A. H. Longhurst, Superintendent of the Archaeological Survey, Southern Circle. These explorations have resulted in the discovery of a number of very remarkable Buddhist sculptures, some of them bearing inscriptions. The style which they exhibit is clearly that of

Amarāvati, although perhaps they cannot boast of the high artistic merit which we admire in the best work from that place. Among the sculptural decoration of the two pillars discovered by Mr. Longhurst there are figures which clearly betray Roman influence. The full report of his excavations will be received with the greatest interest. There cannot be the slightest doubt that Nāgārjunikoṇḍa represents, next to Amarāvati, the most important Buddhist site hitherto found in Southern India. The results which Amarāvati might have yielded have, for a large part, been irreparably lost owing to the deplorable vandalism perpetrated on that monument more than a century ago. It is all the more gratifying that the site of Nāgārjunikoṇḍa is now being systematically explored so that no piece of evidence is likely to be overlooked. Mr. Longhurst estimates that the complete excavation of the site will require three years more.

When in February 1882 Dr. Burgess excavated the site of the Jaggayyapeta stūpa, on the Pālēr river, a tributary of the Kṛishṇā and about four miles north of their junction, he chanced upon three inscribed pillars, bearing each an identical dedicatory inscription in Prakrit.¹ These epigraphs record the gift of five āyaka-khaṁbhas at the eastern gate of the Mahāchetiya or Great Chaitya by a certain artisan (āvesani) Siddhattha in the twentieth year of King Māḍhariputa Sirī-Virapurisadatta of the Ikṣhāku dynasty. The corresponding form in Sanskrit would be Māḍhariputra Śrī-Virapurushadatta. Dr. Burgess expressed the opinion that the Jaggayyapeta inscriptions "belong to about the third or fourth century A.D., but are possibly earlier." Dr. Bühler², while editing them, placed the reign of King Purisadatta in the third century of our era, and "before the accession of the Pallavas to the throne of Veṅgi."

The position of such āyaka-pillars on the monument to which they once have belonged becomes perfectly clear from the chaitya-slabs which have been found in such remarkable numbers on the site of Amarāvati. These chaitya-slabs exhibit the effigy in relief of a chaitya or stūpa in all its details, in other words, they represent the great monument which they once adorned. Now, one of the most prominent features of the main edifice—a feature not met with, as far as we are aware, in other parts of India—is a row of five columns surmounting a kind of projecting balcony which seems to form part of the procession-path running around the body of the monument. These pillars invariably occupy a position right opposite the entrances to the sacred enclosure, and as the stone railing surrounding the sanctuary has an entrance on each of the four cardinal points, it follows that the monument, when entire, must have had four sets of such pillars. They do not appear to have had any structural function as supporting members, but, besides carrying well-known Buddhist emblems, they were utilised for dedicatory inscriptions, as have been noticed at Jaggayyapeta. The word āyaka-khaṁbha mentioned in these epigraphs is evidently the technical term by which they were known³.

There can be little doubt that the great stūpa of Amarāvati, when entire, was decorated with such pillars, but only a few fragments have been recovered.⁴ In the case of the monument of ¹ J. Burgess, The Buddhist Stupas of Amaravati and Jaggayyapeta; London, 1887, pp. 110 f., plates LXII and LXIII. Cf. H. Lüders, List of Brahmi Inscriptions, Nos. 1202-1204 (Ep. Ind., Vol. X, app., pp. 139 f.); G. Bühler, Indische Palaeographie, p. 44.

² Ind. Ant., Vol. XI (1882), pp. 256 ff.

Jaggayyapeta three inscribed specimens were found, only one of them being complete. These, as we have seen, must have belonged to a set of five such pillars which were placed on the east side. Dr. Burgess noticed large pillars or stelæ at three of the sides of the stūpa, but it would seem that those found on the other sides were uninscribed.

The explorations at Nāgārjunikoṇḍa have brought to light no less than seventeen specimens of āyaka-pillars, all inscribed. In thirteen cases the inscription is complete or nearly so. The technical execution of these epigraphs is as remarkable as the state of their preservation. Evidently, these pillars once served the purpose of adorning the main monument of the site, mentioned in the inscriptions under the name of Mahāchetiya (Skt. Mahāchaitya), i.e., the Great Chaitya. It is clear that here, too, there must have stood a row of five such pillars at each of the four cardinal points, their total number being twenty. The original position which each of the seventeen columns so far recovered once occupied, could still be ascertained. A complete list of the inscriptions will be given below.

The mound which covered the ruins of the Mahāchetiya is nowadays known by the name of Nibaguṭṭa. Close to the east side of the great monument the excavations revealed the remains of an apsidal temple containing a small chaitya as an object of worship. The floor of this shrine retains the record of its foundation in an inscription (E) of two very long lines, remarkably well preserved.

At a distance of about a furlong to the east of the Great Chaitya there is another mound called Nāharāḷlabōḍu. According to Mr. Longhurst, this site contains the most important group of monastic buildings, including a large monastery built of brick and plaster, and the remains of two stūpas. At the side of the former building were found the remnants of another apsidal shrine or chaitya-hall. Here, too, a long inscription (F), incised on the floor of the temple, was found to be the record of its foundation.

There is a third mound known by the name of Itikarāḷlabōḍu to the north-west of the Great Chaitya and at a distance of about two furlongs from it. Here a number of stone pillars, apparently still occupying their original position, indicate the existence of another ancient building. From the inscription (G) found on one of these pillars (this inscription is one of the three recovered in March 1926), it appears that the edifice in question was a vihāra somewhat later in date than the buildings previously noticed. If this conclusion is correct, the stone pillars may have formed part of the verandah enclosing the central court-yard of the convent.

A third vihāra must have stood in a locality now known as Koṭṭampalugu to the north of Nāgārjunikoṇḍa. Here, too, the record of its foundation is inscribed on a stone pillar. The inscription (H), which is one of the three copied in March 1926, is probably the latest in date, the writing being smaller and less distinct than in the case of the earlier inscriptions.

The Jaggayyapeta inscriptions, as we have noted above, are dated in the twentieth year of the reign of a king who calls himself Māḍhariputa Ikhākunaṁ Siri-Virapurisadata. The epigraphical records now recovered on the Buddhist site of Nāgārjunikoṇḍa refer to the same Ikhāku dynasty of Southern India. They mention not only Māḍhariputa Siri-Virapurisadata,¹ in whose reign the principal sanctuaries of this locality were founded, but also his father, Vāsethiputa Siri-Chāmtamūla, and his son and successor Vāsethiputa Siri-Ehuvuḷa-Chātamūla.² In a passage which occurs in several of the inscriptions, the former is eulogized as a performer of the

² It is somewhat difficult to decide whether Chāmtamūla or Chātamūla is the correct form of these two names. In some cases there appears to be the sign of the anusvāra over the ā. We may, therefore, assume, that elsewhere it has been omitted by mistake.

Vedic sacrifices Agnihōtra, Agnishtōma, Vājapēya and Aśvamēdha. It follows that Siri-Chāntamūla was a devotee of Brahmanism. His son, Siri-Virapurisadata, though partaking in the religious merit, does not seem to have had an active part in the foundation of the religious monuments of Nāgārjunikoṇḍa. They owed their existence to the piety of certain queens and princesses belonging to the royal house of Ikshāku and evidently devotees of the Buddhist faith.

The principal founder was a lady called Chāntisiri¹ (*siriṇikā in inscr. B 3) who is praised for her munificence in a passage which recurs in not less than nine of the āyaka-pillar inscriptions. In these inscriptions she is called the uterine sister of Siri-Chāntamūla and the paternal aunt of Siri-Virapurisadata. She was married to the Mahāsēnāpati, the Mahātālavara Vāsithīputa Kāṁdasiri of the Pūkiya² family, and, in consequence, she herself bears the title of Mahātālavarī. Moreover, she is called the mother of Kāṁdasāgaramnaka. In one of the pillar inscriptions (B 5) it is distinctly stated that it was she who erected the Great Chaitya of the Great Vihāra or Monastery. It is curious that here the instrumental plural (mahātālavarīhi Chāntisiriṇikāhi) is employed, but it will be noted that several ladies of that name took part in the donation. Or, can it be a pluralis majestatis? The date regularly found at the end of the pillar inscriptions—the sixth year of Siri-Virapurisadata, the sixth fortnight of the rainy season, the tenth day—marks, no doubt, the time when the great monument was consecrated. Chāntisiri was, moreover, the foundress of the apsidal shrine (No. I), built opposite the eastern or principal side of the Great Chaitya.³ This is distinctly stated in the long inscription (E) cut on the floor of that building. In this document the edifice founded by Chāntisiri is designated first as a chētiya-ghara, and subsequently as a stone maṇḍapa surrounded by a cloister (chatusāla-parigahitaṁ sela-maṇḍapam).⁴ The building was dedicated to the āchāryas of the Aparamahāvīnaseliya sect. The time of the dedication is expressed by the date found at the end of the inscription—the eighteenth year of Siri-Virapurisadata, the sixth fortnight of winter, the fifth day. The date is given both in words and in figures.

It deserves notice that in the earlier inscriptions Chāntisiri is called the paternal aunt (pituchhā)⁵ of the reigning king, whereas in the later inscription (E), noted above, she refers to the king as her son-in-law. It would seem that Siri-Virapurisadata between the 6th and the 18th years of his reign had married the daughter of his aunt and consequently his cousin.

Two of the pillar inscriptions (C 2 and 4) mention another sister (sōlarā bhaginī) of King Siri-Chāntamūla, whose name was Hāmmasiri or Hāmmasiriṇikā, and two of her daughters named Bapisiriṇikā and Chhaṭhisiri. Both these princesses were married to the reigning king, their cousin, and consequently bear the title of Mahādēvī.

The same title of Mahādēvī is borne by a lady, Rudradharabhaṭārikā, whose name occurs in the inscription on the fifth pillar of the southern row (B 5). It may be concluded that she, too, was a consort of the reigning king, though in the inscription she is not expressly designated as such. She appears to have been a princess from Ujjain (Skt. Ujjayinī), the well known town in Central India, if at least we are justified in correcting the reading Ujanikā mahārabalīkā of the text into Ujenikū mahārāja-bālīkā. Among the rulers of the house of Chashtana, the so-called Western Kshatrapas, whose capital was Ujjain, we find a certain preference for personal names containing the name of the god Rudra, such as Rudradāman, Rudrasēna and Rudrasimha. This renders it all the more plausible to assume that the Queen Rudradharabhaṭārikā mentioned in the inscription belonged to that illustrious house.

² Inscr. E has Pūgiya.

The pillar inscriptions acquaint us with three more noble ladies who were associated with Chāmtisiri in her pious foundation. The one mentioned on the second pillar of the south side (B 2) is called Aḍavi (?)—Chā[m]tisiri. The inscription calls her the daughter of King Siri-Chāmtamūla, the sister of King Siri-Virapurisadata, and the wife of the Mahāsēnāpati Mahātalavara Mahādaṇḍanāyaka Khamdavisākhamāka (= Skt. Skandaviśākha) of the house of the Dhanakas. She herself is distinguished by the title of Mahātalavari.

The other lady, who was the donor of the fourth pillar of the southern row (B 4), is called Chula-Chā[m]tisiriṇikā, i.e., Chā[m]tisiriṇikā the Less or the Younger, the adjective chula evidently being added to distinguish her from her namesake, the foundress of the Mahāchetiya. The junior Chā[m]tisiriṇikā, as stated in the inscription, was a daughter of the Kulahakas and the spouse of the Mahāsēnāpati Mahātalavara Vāsithīputa Kharidachalikireṇimaṇaka of the Hiramānakas. She herself bears the title of Mahāsēnāpatinī.

The fifth pillar of the western side (C 5) was dedicated by a lady whose personal name is not mentioned, but who is called the wife of the Mahāsēnāpati Mahātalavara Vāsithīputa Mahākaṇḍasiri of the Pūkiyas and the mother of the Mahāsēnāpati Mahātalavara Viṇḥusiri (=Skt. Viṣṇuśrī). She is, moreover, distinguished by the title Mahātalavari. If we may assume that Mahākaṇḍasiri and Kaṇḍasiri are one and the same person, it would follow that the anonymous lady of the pillar-inscription C 5 was a co-wife (sapatnī) of Chāmtisiri.

We must now consider the two separate pillar-inscriptions G and H which, as we have noted above, must belong to a somewhat later date. The inscription G is found on one among a number of pillars, decorated with lotus-rosettes, which were found standing about two furlongs to the north-west of the Mahāchetiya. Mr. Longhurst informs me that the tops of these pillars are each provided with a mortice evidently meant to receive the beams of a wooden roof. This would well agree with our supposition that these stone columns once belonged to the verandah enclosing the central court of the vihāra. The inscribed stone shows several cracks running through the inscribed surface and the letters are worn owing to exposure.

The inscription records the foundation of a vihāra by Mahādēvī Bhaṭidevā who is called the daughter-in-law of Siri-Chā[m]tamūla, the wife (?) of Siri-Virapurisadata, and the mother of a Mahārāja, whose name appears to be Siri-Ehuvuḷa-Chātamūla. The three syllables which we read—huvuḷa—are uncertain. The same is the case with the one or two initial syllables of the word following the name Siri-Virapurisadata, so that it is doubtful what relation existed between that king and the lady Bhaṭidevā. The word in question, however, can be hardly anything but bhayāya. Thus it would follow that Bhaṭidevā was the consort of the king. The last two lines of the document seem to have contained a date, but unfortunately this part of the inscription has been obliterated to such an extent that our reading must be regarded as conjectural. Evidently the vihāra was founded during the reign of Bhaṭidevā's son, the Mahārāja whose name is mentioned in the inscription.

The inscribed pillar of Kottāmpalugu is also the foundation record of a vihāra. The foundress was a Mahādēvī who was the granddaughter of Siri-Chā[m]tamūla, the daughter of Siri-Virapurisadata, and the sister of Mahārāja Vāsethīputa Siri-Ehuvuḷa-Chā[m]tamūla. It is, moreover, stated in the inscription that she was the consort of the Mahārāja of Vanavāsa. Her personal name is somewhat indistinct but may be read as Kodabalisiri. It will be noted in the sequel that Vanavāsa, the ancient name of North Kanara, occurs also among the countries which in the chaitya-inscription F are stated to have been converted to Buddhism by the Ceylonese monks.

The pillar inscription of Koṭṭampalugu is dated in the eleventh year of the reign of Siri-Ehuvuḷa-Chāṁtāmūla.

The historical information furnished by these inscriptions regarding the three rulers of the Southern Ikhāku dynasty, whom they mention, is very meagre. Siri-Chāntāmūla is extolled in a passage which recurs in several of the inscriptions but which appears to be entirely conventional. It has been pointed out above that the king must have been an adept of Brahmanism. From the expression Virūpakhapati-Mahāsena-parigahitasa, which is applied to Chāntāmūla, it may perhaps be concluded that he was a votary of the god Mahāsena or Skanda, "the lord of the Virūpakhas". The term Virūpakha (=Skt. Virūpāksha) seems to be used here to indicate the hosts of which Skanda is the lord and leader.¹ Dr. Bühler's assumption, based on palaeographical evidence, that Siri-Virapurisadata flourished in the third century of our era, may be accepted as probably correct.

Although the inscriptions tell us nothing about the faits et gestes of these kings, it is interesting to meet with a line of rulers, settled in the Telugu country, which claimed descent from Ikhāku, i.e., Ikkhāku (=Skt. Ikshvāku), the mythical progenitor of the famous Solar dynasty of Ayōdhya. It is well known that not only Rāma belonged to that illustrious house, but the Buddha, too, is called a scion of the race of Ikshvāku (Pali Okkāka). It is clear, in any case, that these Southern Ikhākus were rulers of some importance, as they formed matrimonial alliances not only with the Mahārājas of Vanavāsa, but also with the kings, presumably the descendants of the Satrap Chashṭana, who resided at Ujjayini in Central India. The nomenclature of these Southern Ikhāku kings, coupling their personal names with metronymics like Māḍhariputa and Vāsīthiputa seems to be a practice borrowed from the earlier rulers of the Āndhra dynasty. It will hardly be necessary to quote the instance of Vāsīthiputa Siri-Puḷumāyi and Gotamiputa Sātakaṇṇi. On the other hand, there are in these inscriptions certain expressions which are also found in the Prakrit copper-plate grants of the early Pallavas, as will be pointed out in our glossary.

There are two more points to be noted in connection with these kings. We see that the name Chāntāmūla, borne by the father of Siri-Virapurisadata, re-occurs in the name of the latter's son. This seems to point to the custom of naming a child after its grandfather, which, as far as we are aware, is not an indigenous practice in India.² It further deserves notice that among the consorts of king Siri-Virapurisadata we meet with two of his cousins.

Chāntisiri, the sister of king Chāntāmūla, was married to a personage who bore the titles of Mahāsēnāpati and Mahātālavara. The same is stated with reference to other princesses of the ruling house. The title Mahāsēnāpati (lit. "great chief of the army" or general) denoted feudatory chieftains in charge of rāshṭras or districts under the Āndhras, and the same meaning may perhaps be assumed here. The word is, therefore, to be taken as a title of nobility. We may compare the Anglo-Saxon heretoga (Dutch hertog, German herzog), which etymologically means an army-leader, but has become a title of nobility. The word mahāsēnāpati could, therefore, be best rendered by "duke."

The curious term mahātālavara which is also met with in other inscriptions of Southern India, must likewise denote a high dignitary whose exact function, however, is not clear. The second member of the compound is not a Sanskrit word, but seems to be a term borrowed from some

² [This custom was known to several ruling families of ancient India, such as the Guptas, the Vākāṭakas, the Chālukyas and the Pallavas. (Cf. V. Smith, Ind. Ant., Vol. XXXV, p. 125). Besides, as shown by the Mahābhārata, I. i. 1. ...विपुलवान्... and Kaṣyapa on it "विना तस्य ये नवः पुत्रास्तानमुवाचसिधिते", it had a śāstric sanction behind it.—Ed.]

Dravidian language.¹ Evidently it penetrated also into Northern India, for there can be little doubt that it is identical with the mysterious word taravara which, coupled with mahāpatihāra (=“a great chamberlain”) is found in the legend of one of the clay sealings excavated by the late Dr. Bloch at Basārḥ, the site of ancient Vaiśālī. This document belongs to the Gupta period. It was suggested by Dr. Bloch that the word tarika, which occurs in lists of officials in mediæval copper-plate charters, may quite well be a corrupted form of taravara.²

In the inscriptions of Nāgārjunikoṇḍa not only frequent mention is made of persons bearing the title of mahātalavara, but they also contain the feminine form mahātalavari (more correctly talavari) indicating the wife of a mahātalavara. In the same way the consort of a mahāsēnāpati bears herself the title of mahāsēnāpatinī (Skt. sēnāpatnī). It is found in B 4 (1.5).

A third official title, which occurs in B 2 (1.4), is the well-known term mahādāṇḍanāyaka. The early use of this expression is also attested by a fragmentary inscription, found at the village of Māt in the Mathurā district, which contains the name of King Huvishka.

The first apsidal shrine (No. I), as we have seen, was dedicated by Chāṇṭisiri, the foundress of the Mahāchetiya, at the foot of which it is built. The other building of this type, on the contrary, as stated in the inscription F on the floor, was raised by a simple upāsikā, Bodhisiri by name, who does not appear to have been related to the royal family of the Ikṣvākus. Her relatives, who were to share in the merit of her pious enterprise, are enumerated at great length. They include a Koṭh[ā]kārika (Skt. Koṣṭhāgārika), either a treasurer or, perhaps, a superintendent of a royal store-house.³

The inscription opens with an invocation of the Buddha who is extolled in a long string of laudatory epithets. Next comes the date which unfortunately is incomplete. This much is certain that the inscription is dated in the fourteenth regnal year of a king Mādhariputa, who in all likelihood is identical with the Mādhariputa Siri-Virapurisadata of the āyaka-pillar inscriptions of Jaggayyapeta and Nāgārjunikoṇḍa. The shrine is further stated to have been dedicated to the fraternities of Ceylonese monks who had converted Kasmīra (Kashmir), Gandhāra, China, Chīlāta (=Skt. Kīrāta), Tosali, Avarānta (=Skt. Aparānta), Vaṃga (i.e., Bengal), Vanavāsi (i.e., North Kanara), Yavana (?), Damila (?), . . . lūra and the Isle of Tambapamṇi (i.e., Ceylon). Some of the countries are mentioned in the Mahāvamsa among the territories which had been converted to Buddhism after the Third Council, namely, Kasmīra and Gandhāra, Vanavāsa, Aparantaka and Yona.⁴ We may also compare two passages in the Milindapañha mentioning a number of ¹At the end of the Koṇḍamuḍi copper-plate grant (Ep. Ind., Vol. VI, pp. 315 ff.) the late Dr. Hultzsch read Mahātagi-varena mahādāṇḍanāyakena Bhāpahānavamṇena kaṭati. There can be little doubt that mahātagivarena is a mistake, due either to the scribe or to the engraver, for mahātalavarena. This term occurs also in a fragmentary Prakrit inscription found at the village of Allūru, in the Nandigāma taluk, Kistna district. Cf. Annual Report on South-Indian Epigraphy, 1924, p. 97 and A. S. R. for 1923-24, p. 93.

We must leave this question to the decision of students of South-Indian languages. Can the word have any connection with Tamil talavāy (=a general), Tamil talaiyāri (=a village watchman), or Canarese talavara, talavāra (=a watchman, a beadle)? [The Mahātalavaras are mentioned in early Jaina literature along with 18 Gaṇarājās. So Mahātalavara must be taken as a title of nobility. Cf. Kalpasūtra (ed. Jacobi, Leipzig 1879) 61, ll. 21-25. The Subōdhikā, a Sanskrit commentary on it by Vinayavijaya (Nirṇaya-sāgara Press, Bombay, leaf 60, ll. 6-7) explains the term talavara thus: talavarāḥ tuskā-bhūpāla-pradatta-paṭṭabāndha-vibhūṣitā Rājasthānīyāḥ. In the Punjab there is a sub-division of high class Khatrias (=Sanskrit Kshatriyas) which goes by the name of Tālwar.—Ed.]

regions which used to be visited for purposes of trade.¹ In these two passages the first countries mentioned are Saka-Yavana and China-Chilāta. The printed text has Vilāta, but, as has been pointed out by Professor Sylvain Lévi,² this is an error for Chilāta. The Chilātas are the same un-Aryan tribe often met with in Sanskrit literature under the name of Kirāta. In a well-known verse of the Pañchatantra they are characterized as dishonest traders. We find them, moreover, referred to both in the Periplus and by Ptolemy. The former says: "Beyond this [Dōsarēnē], the course trending towards the north there are many barbarous tribes, among whom are the Cirrhadae, a race of men with flattened noses, very savage." Ptolemy locates them along the Gulf of Bengal, "beyond the Ganges mouth called Antibolei." Their country is said to produce the best malabathron (tamālapatram). In his chapter on Trans-Gangetic India (VII, 2, 15) the same author describes the Tilādai (V. 1. Pilādai), also called the Saesādai, as hairy dwarfs, with a flat face and a white skin. Evidently this passage too refers to the Kirātas, the name Tilādai (Τιλᾶδαι) being an attempt to render in Greek the alternative form Chilāda.³

It is very interesting to meet here with the name Tosali. It will be remembered that Aśōka's two separate Rock-Edicts of Dhauli are addressed to the Governor and the magistrates (Mahāmātras) of Tosali. This enables us to locate Tosali in Kalinga. James Prinsep identified it with the "Tosalei metropolis" of Ptolemy, although this place is located in the regions beyond the Ganges. We may, perhaps, connect the name Tosali with the Dōsara of Ptolemy and with Dōsarēnē, the name of a country beyond Masalia mentioned in the Periplus. The name Dōsarēnē is usually explained to be the Greek rendering of Sanskrit Daśārṇa,⁴ but there are serious difficulties in the way of this identification. First of all, a Prakrit form of Daśārṇa, from which the Greek form must be derived, would certainly not have retained the r which we find in Dōsara and Dōsarēnē. The long ō-vowel of the Greek would also be difficult to account for. Besides, the tribe of the Daśārṇa, as far as we can make out from Indian sources, appears to have been settled in Central India and not along the coast.⁵ On the other hand, Dōsara may have been a dialectic form of Tosala. The Periplus states that Dōsarēnē yielded the ivory known as Dōsarēnic. Hiuen Tsiang in his account of Kalinga says that it produced the great tawny wild elephant which was much prized by neighbouring provinces.

Avaranta (Skt. Aparānta) is the designation of the tract of the country lying along the western coast of the Peninsula, the capital of which was Sopārā. According to the Ceylonese Chronicles, it was converted to Buddhism by Dhammarakkhita. Aśōka mentions it in his Fifth Rock-Edict in connection with the appointment of Dhamma-mahāmātas.

Vaṅga is the ancient name of Bengal. Vanavāsi, also mentioned as Vanavāsaka in inscription H, is North Kanara, the name being still preserved in Banavāsi, a village or small town in the Shimoga district of the Mysore State in latitude 14° 33', longitude 75° 5'. The Mahāvamsa mentions Rakkhita as the apostle of Vanavāsa.

The three words following Vanavāsi are uncertain. The first one can be hardly anything but Yavana, the aksharas ya and va being still legible. Next comes a name which I read tentatively as Damila, meaning the Tamil country. The third word seems to consist of three aksharas, the second and third of which are clearly lu and ra. It is tempting to restore the name as Palura, the town mentioned by Ptolemy and identified by Professor Sylvain Lévi with Dantapura, "the Town of the Tooth" on the coast of Orissa.⁶

The latter part of inscription F enumerates the various pious foundations—several of them evidently additions to existing buildings—dedicated by Bodhisiri, and mentions, moreover, the localities at which each of them was found. It is a point of considerable importance that this list includes “a stone maṇḍapa at the eastern gate of the Mahāchetiya at Kaṇṭakasela.” Evidently this locality Kaṇṭakasela (Skt. Kaṇṭakasaila, lit. “Thorn-hill”) must be identical with “the emporium Kantikossūla” which Ptolemy mentions (VII, i. 15) immediately after “the mouths of the Maisōlos.” It follows that the river known to the Greeks under the name Maisōlos has been rightly supposed to be the Kistna.¹ The country watered by the lower Kistna is consequently called Maisōlia by Ptolemy. The Periplus speaks (§62) of “the region of Masalia stretching a great way along the coast before the inland country,” and adds that “a great quantity of muslins is made here.” The ancient name by which this part of Southern India was known to the Greeks is preserved in that of the town Masulipatam.

We are perhaps justified in identifying it with the country which Hiuen Tsiang describes under the name of T'o-na-kie-tse-kia.² This seems to correspond to Dhaññakataka, Dhana-kataka (Skt. Dhānyakataka), found in two inscriptions from Amarāvati.³ The country in question the Chinese pilgrim locates between the Āndhra country and that of the Chōlas, the latter being situated at a distance of some 1,000 li to the south-west. In the course of his description he says: “The convents are numerous, but are mostly deserted and ruined; of those preserved there are about twenty with 1,000 or so priests. They all study the law of the Great Vehicle.”

Hiuen Tsiang further relates that to the east of the capital on a mountain there stood a convent called Pūrvaśilā and on a mountain to the west was another, called Avaraśilā. Perhaps it would be preferable to render the names of these two monasteries by Pūrvaśaila and Avaraśaila, the Sanskrit word for a mountain being śaila, whereas śilā means “stone.” Now, it is worthy of note that among the localities mentioned in inscription F, we meet with the name Puvasela, which is clearly a Prakrit form corresponding to Sanskrit Pūrvaśaila. A name, meaning “Eastern Mountain or Hill,” may, of course, have been used at different places of India. But it is a point worth considering whether the remains of Nāgārjunikoṇḍa can possibly represent the ancient capital of Dhaññakataka, which archæologists have sought both at Dharanikōṭa near Amarāvati and at Bezwādā.

Another point of interest is the mention of Siripavata (i.e., Siripavvata) in inscription F. The Prakrit word corresponds to Sanskrit Śrīparvata. Now, there is a tradition preserved in Tibet that Nāgārjuna spent the concluding part of his life in a monastery of that name in Southern India.⁴ If this convent is the same as the “vihāra on the Siripavata to the east of Vijayapurī” of our inscription, it would follow that the association of the great divine of the Mahāyāna with this locality has been preserved up to the present day in the name Nāgārjunikoṇḍa. We may confidently hope that these and other questions of great import will be finally settled by further systematic excavations.

Among the religious foundations enumerated in F, we wish to draw attention to the two monasteries, called Kulaha-vihāra and Sihaḷa-vihāra. The former appears to have owed its existence to the same noble family which is mentioned in one of the āyaka-pillar inscriptions (B 4) under the name of Kulahaka. The other, if we may judge from its appellation, must have been a convent founded either by a Singhalese or, more probably, for the accommodation of Singhalese monks. This "Ceylonese Convent" appears to have contained a shrine with a Bodhi-tree (Bodhi-rukha-pāsāda = Skt. Bōdhi-vṛkṣha-prāsāda) which is, indeed, a necessary adjunct of the Buddhist monasteries of Ceylon up to the present day. Not only the mention of a Sihaḷa-vihāra, but also the dedication of a chetiya-ghara to the theriyas or "fraternities" of Tambapanni point to relations which must have existed between the Buddhist community of Dhaññakaṭaka and their co-religionists in the Isle of Ceylon. The existence of such relations can be easily accounted for from the sea-borne trade which was carried on between the ports of the Island and Kaṇṭaka-sela, the great emporium on the right bank of the Kistna river.

This trade was, no doubt, also largely responsible for the flourishing state of Buddhism in this part of India. The devotees of the Good Law were largely recruited from the commercial classes and it was their wealth which enabled not only the merchants themselves, but also their royal masters, to raise monuments of such magnificence as the great stūpa of Amarāvati. Both Amarāvati and Nāgārjunikoṇḍa are situated on the right bank of the Kistna, the former being situated at a distance of some 60 miles from the mouth of the river. Nāgārjunikoṇḍa lies considerably higher up the river, the distance between this place and Amarāvati being another 60 miles as the crow flies, but considerably longer by river. On the opposite side of the river we have Jaggayyapeṭa, containing another monument of the reign of the Ikshākus. The village of Allūru in the Nandigāma taluk of the Kistna district has yielded a fragmentary Prakrit inscription, referred to above, which appears to record a donation to a Buddhist monastery. At the village of Gummaḍiduru in the Kistna district the remains of a large stūpa, adorned with marble reliefs in the Amarāvati style, have recently come to light together with the remnants of monastic buildings. All these monuments attest to the piety and the wealth of the Buddhist community in these parts during the second and third centuries of our era. In the days of Hiuen Tsiang the monasteries were mostly deserted and ruined. The collapse of Buddhism on the lower Kistna may have had various causes; besides the general wane of that religion all over India, there may have been economic agents at work, like the decline of the sea-borne trade with the West, which had caused vast quantities of Roman gold to pour into the Peninsula. There was also the conquest of Southern India by the Gupta Emperor Samudragupta and the rise of powerful dynasties devoted to Brahmanism like the Pallava in the South and the Chālukya in the West.

In connection with Buddhism attention must be drawn to the mention of sect-names in the Nāgārjunikoṇḍa inscriptions. In Nos. C 1, line 10 and E, line 2, the dedication is stated to be made for the benefit or acceptance of the Aparamahāvinaseliyas. In both cases the sign for i over the fifth akṣara is quite distinct so that we are not allowed to read -mahāvana-, as was done by Drs. Burgess and Hultzsch in the case of an Amarāvati inscription.¹ The latter was inclined to associate the name with the Mahāvanaśālā at Vaiśālī, well-known from the Buddha legend. The Amarāvati inscription in question, however, has certainly Mahāvinaseliyānam. At the end of the fragmentary Prakrit inscription from Allūru we read: ayirāna[m] Puvaseliy[ā]na[m] niḡāyasa (Skt. āryāṇām Pūvaśāliyāṇām nikāyasya).

The Pali chronicles of Ceylon make mention of the Iubha- and the Apara-selikas, the two sub-divisions of the Mahāsaṅghikas.² The latter of those two expressions is perhaps an abbreviated form of the Avaramahāvinaseliyas in our inscriptions. Can it be that the two sects, known as Pubba- and Aparaselikas, originated from the two Buddhist convents of Pubbasela and Aparasela which, according to Hiuen Tsiang, existed on the hills to the east and the west of the capital of Dhaññakaṭaka ?

The inscription G, line 8, contains the name of another Buddhist sect—Bahusutīya—which corresponds to Pali Bahusuttīya (Skt. Bahuśrutīya). Besides, we have Ayīra-haṁgha (Skt. Ārya-saṅgha) in C 1, line 11 and C 2, line 10, and Mahi[sā]saka (Skt. Mahīśāsaka) in H, line 12.

Language and Script.

A considerable difficulty in the way of interpreting the Nāgārjunikoṇḍa inscriptions is the want of precision of which they show ample evidence. Considering that these inscriptions were meant to be perpetual records of pious donations made by ladies of royal blood, the careless manner in which they have been recorded is astonishing. Not only single syllables but whole words have been omitted. We find, moreover, that only in one instance it has been considered necessary to correct such an omission, i.e., in the word Mahāchetiya (E, line 1) where the akshara hā has been placed under the line. In other instances syllables have been repeated (C 2, lines 1 and 3), or interchanged (e.g., bhamkham for khamkham in C 4, line 7). Very often the length of the vowels ā and ī is not marked. Even the name of the reigning monarch, Siri-Virapurisadata, is written with vi instead of vī except in a very few cases where we find the correct spelling with ī. Much less frequently the long ī has been substituted for the short one, e.g., in Mahāchetiya. Considering the frequency of the omission of the ā-stroke, we have ventured to assume that this omission has twice taken place in the long compound samaṇa-bamhaṇa-kavaṇa-vaṇija-dīn-ā-nugaha-velāmika-dāna-paṭibhūga-rochhina-dhāra-palāyini, which re-occurs several times in the passage relating to the principal donor, Chāntisiri. This compound, as far as we can see, does not yield an intelligible sense, unless we read -dān-āpaṭibhag-ā-rochhina, thus assuming that the two adjectives required here are apaṭibhaga and aro-chhina. With regard to the latter word we may compare the use of the Sanskrit equivalent avyavachchhinna in the following line from the Harivaṁśa (verse 3580) where we read : avyavachchhinna-dhār-aughaiḥ samudr-ugha-samair-dhanaiḥ.

The sign for dha is sometimes substituted for that of tha, whereas a certain confusion seems to prevail between tha and tha. The looped characters ta and na are very similar and are not always clearly distinguishable. The same is the case with the aksharas, the initial a and su.

The sign for anusvāra too has often been omitted, while in several cases it is difficult to decide whether what appears to be a dot over the akshara may not be a depression in the surface of the stone merely due to accident. In consequence, there prevails a certain amount of uncertainty with regard to the correct form of the personal names Chāntamūla and Chāntisiri. In several cases where these names occur, there is no trace of an anusvāra, but as in a few instances such a sign can be made out, we are perhaps justified in assuming that its non-occurrence is due to the inadvertence so noticeable throughout these records.

This want of precision becomes especially manifest if we compare the various redactions of the inscription recording the grant of a stele by the chief donor, the lady Chāntisiri. It is clear that these redactions are all based on the same text, but none of them produces that text without some omissions or mistakes. We may refer the reader to the text of C 3 given below with the various readings found in the corresponding inscriptions.

It is difficult to say who is to be held responsible for the negligent treatment which we have noticed in these epigraphs. The additional passage found in two of the pillar inscriptions of Chāntisiri, namely C 1 and 2, mentions a "Bhadanta Ānanda, carrier of the Dīgha- and the Majjhima-nikāya" who acted as the navakammika of the Mahāchetiya. In the case of the apsidal temple and other religious works founded by the upāsikā Bodhisiri there were even three navakammikas, the theras Chaṇḍamukha, Dharmmanandi and Nāga (F, lines 3 & 4). As the navakammika was the monk commissioned by the Saṅgha to superintend the foundation (navakamma) dedicated by some lay-member, his responsibility may be supposed to have extended also over the inscriptional records of the deyadhamma. It is, however, quite possible that the author of the inscriptions was some other learned member of the Saṅgha. We may perhaps assume that, the text of the inscriptions having been fixed, some copyist, either a bhikkhu or a professional writer, was employed to prepare one or more copies in the very ornamental writing of the period for the use of the stone-mason. At the end of inscription F we find the name of the stone-mason (sela-vadhiki) Vidhika recorded immediately after those of the three navakammikas. It must be admitted that, as regards its technical execution, not only this epigraph but also the sixteen āyaka-pillar inscriptions leave nothing to be desired. It is noteworthy that inscription H which, as we saw, must belong to a somewhat later period, shows at once a marked deterioration in technical skill.

With regard to the style of writing used in the Nāgārjunakoṇḍa inscription, it will suffice to refer to the observations made by Dr. Bühler with regard to the inscriptions from Jaggoyya-peṭṭa.¹ Here we wish only to draw attention to the use of la in Sihala-talākam, and aḷamūlā in F, line 3, and to the occurrence of the following ligatures: dra in Rudradhara^o (B 5, line 4), nhā in suṃnhānam (F, line 3), ṇhu in Vinhusirisa, mha in bamhaṇa (A 3, line 6 etc.), mhi in invaṃhi (A 3, line 2) and mahāchetiyamhi (C 4, line 2 and X, line 8), and tti in nattiya (H, line 8).

The inscriptions contain the numerical symbols for one, three (F, line 1), four (F, line 1), five (E, line 2), six (passim), seven (F, line 3 and H, line 4), eight (E, line 2), ten (passim), seventy (B 5, line 6), and hundred (B 5, line 6).

As regards the language, the following peculiarities may be noted:—

The ri vowel is represented by a in kavaṇa (Skt. kriṇaṇa) and vasabha (Skt. vrishabha), but elsewhere, by u. Examples: bhatuno (F, line 2) from Skt. bhartṛi; putuno (F, line 2) from Skt. pitṛi; bhātuno (F, line 3), bhātunam (F, line 2) and bhātuputānam (F, line 2) from Skt. bhrātṛi; mātuya (F, line 2 and G, line 7) from Skt. māṭṛi; mahāmātukāya (F, line 2) from Skt. mahāmāṭṛi; dhūtuya (F, line 3; H, line 9) from Skt. duhitṛi; jām[ā]tukasa (E, line 1) from Skt. jāmāṭṛi; mātuk[ā] (C 1, line 11 and C 2, line 9) from Skt. māṭṛikā.

We notice Svarabhukti in bharyā (passim) from Skt. bhāryā; mahāchetiya (passim) from Skt. °cāitya; achariya (passim) from Skt. āchārya; harisa (F, line 1) from Skt. harsha; tarisa (F, line 1) from Skt. tarsha; darisana (F, line 1) from Skt. darśana; and mahāsenāpatini (passim) from Skt. °patni. Cf. Pischel, Grammatik der Prakrit-Sprachen, §135.

The p between vowels becomes v. Examples: Avaranta (F, line 1) from Skt. Aparānta; kavaṇa (passim) from Skt. kriṇaṇa; uvāsikāya (F, line 2) from Skt. upāsikā; uvarivaṃṇ[itaṃ] (F, line 3) from Skt. upari^o; th[ā]vitaṃ (F, line 3) from Skt. sthāpitaṃ; Govagūma (F, line 2) from Skt. Gōpagraṃa (?); maṇṭava (E, line 2) and maṇḍava (F, line 3) from Skt. maṇḍapa.

The media is changed into the tenuis, in koṭh[ā]kārika^o (F, line 2) from Skt. kōṣṭhāgārika; and maṇṭava (E, line 2) from Skt. maṇḍapa. But elsewhere maṇḍava (thrice in F). Cf. also deyadhamma-parichāko from Skt. °parityāga, in the Allūru fragmentary inscription, line 14.

The tenuis has been changed into the media in Pugiyāna[m] (E, line 1), but elsewhere Pūkiyānaṃ or Pūkiyānaṃ, and sughāya (G, line 10) from Skt. sukha. Cf. nigāyasa from Skt. nikāyasa in the Allūru inscription. As regards Pūkiya and Pūgiya, it is, of course, possible that the latter is the more correct and original form. May it be connected with Skt. pūga = "betel-palm"?

The initial h in some personal names appears to have been developed from s. Examples : Haṃmasiri (C 4, line 5) ; Haṃmasiriṇikā (C 2, lines 5-6 and 7 ; C 4, line 7) ; Haghaṃna (F, line 2). Also, Ayira-haṃghāna (C 1, line 11 ; C 2, line 10) from Skt. Ārya-saṃghānām. But saṃghaṃ (H, line 13) and mahābhikkhu-sa[m]ghasa (E, line 2).

We wish also to draw attention to the following forms : ayira- (C 1, line 11 ; C 2, line 10) from Skt. ārya ; bhayā for the more usual bhāriyā from Skt. bhāryā ; and Chilāta (F, line 1) from Skt. Kirāta.

LIST OF INSCRIPTIONS.

a. Inscriptions on the āyaka-pillars of the Mahāchetiya.¹

A. 2. East side, second pillar. One large and two small fragments. The large piece contains lines 1—7 (sidham to =vachhalā ma-), line 7 being incomplete. Besides, there is a gap on the right hand side by which several aksharas at the end of lines 2—4 and 6 are lost. One of the smaller fragments supplies the initial aksharas of lines 6—10, and the other, a few aksharas of lines 7—8. The inscription, when entire, must have consisted of 10 lines, 24½ inches long. It records the gift of a pillar by the Mahātalavari Chāntisiri (name lost), the sister of King Chāntamūla and the paternal aunt of King Siri-Virapurisadata. Date lost.

A. 3. East side, third pillar. Inscription in two pieces. One large piece contains the inscription almost complete except the middle portion of lines 1—2. This missing portion is supplied by the smaller fragment containing 17 aksharas of the first line. The inscription consists partly of 10 lines, 25 inches long. It records the donation of a pillar by Chāntisiri (cf. sub A. 2). Date, the 6th year of King Siri-Virapurisadata in last short line.

A. 4. East side, fourth pillar. Two large and one smaller fragment. The one large piece contains ll. 1—5, incomplete and partly obliterated. The other contains lines 5—11, viz., the latter half of the inscription, almost complete, although partly indistinct. The small fragment supplies the initial aksharas of lines 1 to 3. The inscription must have consisted of 11 lines, measuring from 21—22½ inches in length. Donation of a pillar by Chāntisiri (cf. sub A. 2). Date as above sub A. 3 in last short line.

B. 1. South side, first pillar. One fragment, containing lines 1—6 in their full length, but with central portion completely obliterated. Length of lines 16 inches. Name of donor and date lost.

B. 2. South side, second pillar. Inscription complete in 7 lines, measuring 20 to 22 inches in length. Gift of a pillar by the Mahātalavari Aḍavi-Chāntisiri, the daughter of King Chāntamūla. Date as above.

B. 3. South side, third pillar. Complete in 10 lines, measuring 21 to 23½ inches in length. A few aksharas at the end of lines 5—9 missing. Donation of a pillar by Chāntisiriṇikā, evidently the same person as Chāntisiri (cf. sub A. 2). Date as above in last short line.

B. 4. South side, fourth pillar. Complete in 7 lines, 17½ to 22 inches. Gift of a stone pillar by the Mahāsenāpatini Chula-Chā[m]tisiriṇikā. Date as above in 6th and short 7th line.

B. 5. South side, fifth pillar. Complete in 7 lines, 20 to 22 inches. Gift of a pillar by Mahādēvi Rudradharabhaṭ[ā]rikā. Date as above in last short line.

C. 1. West side, first pillar. Two pieces: the smaller piece, containing lines 1 to 6 (l. 1 complete, l. 2 with the first akshara missing, ll. 3—6 incomplete), fits wedge-like into the larger one, which consists of ll. 3 to 13, ll. 3 to 6 supplying the missing portions of the upper piece. The inscription, when complete, consisted of 13 lines, 21 to 23 inches long. Donation of a pillar by Chāmtisiri. Date as above.

C. 2. West side, second pillar. Two pieces. The larger piece contains ll. 1—6 complete, besides the initial and concluding portions of ll. 7—9. The smaller piece supplies the middle portions of these three lines and the remainder of the inscription, viz., ll. 10—12 entire. Twelve lines, 19½ to 22 inches long. Gift of a stone pillar by Mahādēvi Bapisiripikā, the daughter of Hammasiripikā and wife of King Siri-Virapurisadata. Date as above in ll. 11—12, the concluding line being a short one.

C. 3. West side, third pillar. Two pieces. The smaller fragment has 6 lines, viz., l. 1 complete, whereas considerable portions of ll. 2—5 are missing and only a few aksharas at the beginning of l. 6 remain. The larger fragment contains the missing parts of ll. 2—6 and, besides, ll. 7—13 entire. Thirteen lines, 20 to 22 inches long. Gift of a pillar by Chā[m]tisiri. Date as above in last short line.

C. 4. West side, fourth pillar. Complete in eight lines, 19 to 22 inches long. Gift of a pillar by Mahādēvi Chhaṭhisiri, the daughter of Hammasiri[pikā] and wife of King Siri-Virapurisadata. Date as above in concluding line.

C. 5. West side, fifth pillar. Complete in five lines, 19½ to 20½ inches in length. Gift of a stone pillar by the wife of Mahākāmdasiri. Date as above.

D. 2. North side, second pillar. One piece containing ll. 1—5 complete, the initial and concluding portions of ll. 6—7, the first six aksharas of line 8 and only one akshara opening line 9. The inscription must have recorded the gift of a pillar by Chāmtisiri. Date lost.

D. 3. North side, third pillar. Only a fragment containing ll. 1—2 almost complete, and besides, a few aksharas of line 3. Date lost.

D. 4. North side, fourth pillar. Complete in ten lines, 19½ to 21½ inches long. Gift of a pillar by Chā[m]tisiri. Date as above in last short line.

X. Original position unknown. Complete in nine lines, 24 to 25 inches in length. Donation of a pillar by Chāmtisiri. Date as above.

b. Chetiya-ghara inscriptions.

E. Inscription on floor of apsidal shrine, No. I, immediately to the east of the Mahāchetiya. Inscription complete in two lines, measuring 14 feet 5 inches. Average size of aksharas ½ to ⅔ inch. Inscription well preserved except first portion of the second line. It records the dedication of a chetiya-ghara or stone maṇḍava (Skt. maṇḍapa) provided with a cloister (chatusāla) at the foot of the Mahāchetiya by the Mahātālavarī Chāmtisiri, mentioned in several of the āyaka-pillar inscriptions, who here refers to King Siri-Virapurisadata as her son-in-law for the benefit of the Masters of the Aparamahāvīnaseliya sect. Date, the eighteenth year of King Siri-Virapurisadata.

F. Inscription on floor of the apsidal shrine, No. II, on the mound Nāharāllabōḍu, consisting of three long lines, 18 feet 4 inches to 19 feet in length, and of a fourth short line of 1 foot 9 inches. Average size of aksharas ⅔ to ¾ inch. The inscription is fairly well preserved; here and there some aksharas have been lost. After a lengthy invocation of the Buddha it records the foundation of a chetiya-ghara and of various other religious edifices by an uvāsikā (Skt. upāsikā), named Bodhisiri, together with her relatives, for the benefit of the fraternities (theriya) of the Ceylonese monks who had converted a number of countries which are enumerated at great length. Date, the fourteenth year of King Māṭhariputa (=Siri-Virapurisadata?).

c. Detached pillar inscriptions.

G. Inscription on a stone pillar or stele decorated with carvings, at a distance of about two furlongs to the north-west of the Mahāchetiya. It consists of ten lines of writing. The inscribed surface shows three cracks and the right hand portion damaged. Some three or four aksharas at the end of ll. 1—5 are lost. Lines 9 and 10 are partly obliterated. The lines, when complete, must have been 15 inches in length. The average size of the aksharas is $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ inch. The lettering has become worn owing to exposure to the weather. The inscription records the foundation of a vihāra by Mahādēvi Bhaṭṭidēvā, who was the wife (?) of King Siri-Virapurisadata and the mother of King Ehuvaḷa(?)—Chā[m]tamūla. The date in ll. 9—10 is no longer legible.

H. Inscription on a stone pillar or stele found at Koṭṭampalugu to the north of Nāgārjunikoṇḍa. It consists of fourteen lines of writing, measuring about 12 inches in length. The inscription is fairly well preserved, but here and there some aksharas have become indistinct. The execution is fair, but less ornamented than in the earlier inscriptions. The size of the aksharas is from $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ inch; they miss the long-drawn strokes of the earlier inscriptions and the lines are placed close together. The inscription records the foundation of a vihāra by Mahādēvi Koda[ba]ḷisiri, who was the daughter of King Siri-Virapurisadata, sister of King Ehuvaḷa-Chā[m]tamūla, and wife of the Mahārāja of Vanavāsa. It is dated in the 11th year of King Ehuvaḷa-Chā[m]tamūla.

d. Inscriptions on sculptures.

J. Inscription along the lower edge of a frieze showing the adoration of the Wheel of the Law (first sermon at Benares) in the centre and an amatory couple or mithuna on both sides. These three scenes are separated and flanked by railings. The frieze is supported by a row of crouching lions. The inscription consists of two lines, measuring 38 and 16 inches in length. The execution is fair and the preservation, satisfactory. The average size of the aksharas is $\frac{1}{2}$ inch. The inscription opens with an invocation of the Buddha and records the donation of a slab and of a coping stone at the Mahāchetiya by an individual of the name of Chhadakapavaticha and by his housewife Padumavāni together with their sons and daughters. No date.

K. Inscription along the lower edge of a long sculptured beam found on the mound Polugubōḍu. It consists of one line of writing, the beginning and concluding portions of which are almost entirely obliterated. The inscription, as far as preserved, measures nearly five feet in length. It records the donation of a slab (?) by a person whose name is lost, together with his sons, daughters, sons-in-law, grandsons, granddaughters, relatives and friends. The preserved portions contain no date.

TRANSCRIPTS AND TRANSLATIONS.

Āyaka-pillar inscription C 3.

The text of the āyaka-pillar inscription recording the donation of such a pillar by Chā[m]-tisiri occurs in nine redactions, namely, A 2, 3 and 4, B 3, C 1 and 3, D 2 and 4, and X, seven of which are complete and two (A 2 and D 2) are incomplete. In C 1 there is an addition at the end, whereas in X the invocation of the Buddha opening the document has been omitted. It will be sufficient to reproduce the text only once, as given in C 3, noting such variae lectioes as are found in the other redactions. The additional passage of C 1 will be given separately.

TRANSLATION.

Adoration to the Lord, the Supreme Buddha, honoured by the Lord of the gods, who is compassionate towards all sentient beings, freed from lust, hatred and delusion which he has conquered by him, the bull and musk-elephant among great spiritual leaders, the Enlightened One, who is absorbed by the best of elements (i.e., by Nirvāṇa). At the same time, the Mahātūlavara Chā[ti]tisiri (who is) the uterine sister of Mahārāja Vāsīṭhīputa the son of Śrīś[ā]m[ā]mūla—absorbed by Mahāsena the lord of Virūpakhas, the giver of crores and hundred thousands of kine, and hundred thousands of ploughs (of land) unimpeded by the sea and (husainas,—she who is) the paternal aunt of King Māgharīputa Siri-Virapurisadatta, the wife of the Mahāsēnāpati, the Mahātūlavara, Vāsīṭhīputa Karīdasiri of (the Pūliyas), the Pūliyas: and the mother of Khamīdasāgaratūrnaka, she who, out of compassion for Śāmas, Buddhins, and those that are miserable, poor and destitute, is wont to bestow on them a matchless and ceaseless flow¹ of Velānic gifts, she, the great mistress of munificence, born of all the virtues, having due regard for the past, future and present (members) of both the houses to which she belongs, for the attainment of welfare and happiness in both the worlds and in order to attain herself the bliss of Nirvāṇa and for the attainment of welfare and happiness of all the world, has erected this pillar. In the 6th year of (the reign of) King Siri-Virapurisadatta, the 6th fortnight of the rainy season, the 10th day.

² The akshara ṭha of Māthariputasa is partly preserved. After this word some five or six aksharas are lost. In the absence of any traces of i strokes, the missing word cannot have been Siri-Purisadatas. In all probability it was samvachcharam, followed by a word expressing "fourteenth" (chodam?).

⁴ The words which I read Yavana-Damila-Palura are not quite certain. The Da of Damila is still legible and the long-drawn top strokes of the remaining two aksharas have led me to the conjectural reading mila, the body of the akshara m being partly preserved. The Pa of Palura is conjectural.

⁵ The akshara sa of mātulakasa is conjectural. As the word is followed by several personal names in the genitive case, one would expect mātulakānam, but the akshara ka shows no trace of an ā-stroke.

⁷ Some ten aksharas are lost after dham.

⁸ The akshara tam is conjectural. Perhaps tava.

⁹ The first akshara sāl has been restored tentatively. The u-stroke of dhu is still faintly visible.

¹⁰ The aksharas which I read achanta (Skt. atyanta) are indistinct.

¹ The second akshara may be either da or dha.

² This mutilated word can hardly be anything but bhayāya.

³ The aksharas huvu are damaged owing to a crack, but hu is still legible.

⁴ Or should we read sava-jīna-niyuto? The akshara following sava- is certainly jā. In the other inscriptions we find savaniyuto.

⁵ [..... Virapuvanaṁbudhiṇa . (proper name?) raṇṇo °—Ed.]

⁶ The date appears to have been followed by a benedictory formula such as sava-loka-hita-sukkhāya.

⁷ Lines 9-10 seem to have contained a date, but are too much obliterated to allow of being deciphered.

⁸ Read Agihot-Agidhoma-Vājaveja.

⁹ The third syllable sa is still traceable.

¹⁰ The third akshara has become very faint. At first I felt inclined to read Dhammayasa, but the long horizontal base-stroke which is still clear rather suggests the letter gha.

Extract from a letter dated Oslo, 2nd October, 1928, from Prof. Sten Konow, Ph.D.

"In the first place I should like to draw your attention—perhaps unnecessarily—to the suffix anaka in Viśākhanaka, Sāgarāṇnaka, formed from Viśākha, Sāgara, respectively. This same suffix is frequent in names from the Bombay Presidency; cf. Lüders, Nos. 985, 993, 1000, 1018, 1020, 1033 (Kaṇheri), 1040, 1041 (Kuṭā), 1088, 1091, 1097 (Kārli), 1109, 1111, (Bedsa), 1141 (Nāsik), 1171 (Junnar). It evidently belongs to a dialect with a Dravidian, perhaps Kanarese, substratum. The h for s also points to Kanarese. Moreover, some of the names seem to find their explanation in Kanarese. Thus kanda means 'child' in Kanarese, and chali 'cold.' Chalikireṇmaṇaka probably is Chalikiraṇaka='Moon.' It also strikes me that Kanarese karrambu means 'envy.' I have not access to a Telugu dictionary. But it seems to me that Kanarese is more likely. The other characteristics which can be gleaned from your quotations do not help us. They show that we have to do with a Standard Prakrit, related to Pali, which was, as you know, used over a large territory. The change of -p- to -v- is general in most Prakrits and cannot be used for localizing the dialect. A similar language is also used in the Khāravela inscriptions. I would therefore be inclined to define the dialect of your inscriptions as follows: We are faced with a normalized semi-literary Prakrit, used by people whose home tongue was Dravidian, and probably Kanarese. If I am right, we should a priori be inclined to infer that the Ikkhākus had come to the Kistna country from the West. But all such conclusions are bound to be uncertain. Khamda is, as you say, probably = Skanda, and Chānta might be Kshānta, but might also have something to do with Chāndaka, the designation of some actors from Mathurā (Lüders, No. 85)."

³ His, her, or their, as the case may be.

Glossary.

- aga-pogala* (J, l. 1), Pali agga-puggala = Skt. agrya-pudgala, an epithet of Buddha.
- Agihot-Agiṭhoma-Vājaṭṭe-Āsamedha-yājisa* (passim), an epithet of Siri-Chāntamūla. Cf. Aggiṭhoma-Vājaṭṭe-Āsamedha-yājī in the Hirahadagalli copper-plate grant of the Pallava king Śivaskandavarman, Ep. Ind. Vol. I, pp. 2 f. Also, dvir-Āsvamedha-yājinaḥ in the Śuṅga inscription from Ayōdhya. J.B.O.R.S. Vol. X, pp. 202 f.
- a[chānta]* (F, l. 3), i.e., achānta = Skt. atyanta.
- aṭṭhaṅga-maga-dhammachaka-pavataka* (F, l. 1), i.e., aṭṭhaṅga-magga-dhammachakka-pavattaka = Skt. aṣṭāṅga-mārga-dharmachakra-pravartaka, an epithet of Buddha.
- aṭṭhāra* (D, l. 2), "eighteenth."
- atichchūta*, i.e., atichchhūta (A 3, l. 8; A 4, l. 9, etc.) always followed by anāgata-vaṭṭa-mānake or mānakānam*. Cf. Pali atichchhāti (Skt. atī-richchhātī) which is only preserved in the expression atichchhātiha bhante "Please go on, Sir." The past participle atichchhūta, therefore, stands for the usual atīta.
- Aḍavi-Chāntisiri* (B, 2, l. 5), a personal name. The second akshara is possibly ḍa.
- anuthūam* (H, l. 14). Cf. Pali anuthūta (=Skt. anushūta), past participle of anuthūhāti, meaning "carried out, effected."
- aneka-hiraṇya-koṭi-go-satasā[hasa]-hala-satasahasā-padāyī* (F, l. 1), i.e., aneka-hiraṇya-koṭi-go-satasahasā-hala-satasahasā-ppadāyī, epithet of Siri-Chāntamūla. Cf. aneka-hiroga-koṭi-go-hala-satasahasā-ppadāyīno in the Hirahadagalli grant, ll. 10-11, and aneka-gō-hiraṇya-bhūmy-ādi-pradānāḥ praviddha-dharmā-saichayasya mahārāja-Śrī-Skandavarmanah in the Pikira grant of Simhavarman, Ep. Ind. Vol. VIII, p. 161 ll. 5-6. Cf. also tri-go-satasahasadēna in Kārlē inscriptions, Ep. Ind. Vol. VII, p. 57, and tri-go-satasahasradēna in Nāsik inscriptions, Ep. Ind. Vol. VIII, p. 78.
- anīterāsika* (C 1, l. 12; C 2, l. 10), Pali anīsi, (Skt. anīsi) "a disciple."
- avathesu* apatihata-saṅkapa = Skt. sarvārthe . . . , apratihata-saṅkalpa, epithet of Siri-Chāntamūla. Cf. appatihata-sāsaṇassa in the Hirahadagalli grant, l. 10.
- Aparamahāvīnaseḷiya* (C 1, l. 10; C 2, l. 8; E, l. 2), name of a Buddhist sect. See above, p. 10. The name presumably is identical with Pali Aparaseḷiya, Skt. Aparasāḷiya, a subdivision of the Theravāda. Cf. M. Walleiser, Die Sekten des alten Buddhismus p. 7; but cf. p. 21.
- ayaka* (F, l. 2), i.e., ayyaka = Skt. āryaka.
- ayikā* (F, l. 2), i.e., ayyikā = Skt. āryikā.
- ayira-haṅgha* (C 1, l. 11; C 2, l. 10) = Skt. ārya-saṅgha. Cf. ayira, aīra in Amarāvati inscriptions, Lüders, List, Nos. 1276 and 1280.
- ayū-vāḍhanike vejayike* (E, l. 1). Cf. appaṇa kula-gottasa dham-āyū-bala-yaso-vāḍhanikā vija-ya-vejayike "while he made (the gift) a means of the increase of the merits."

length of life and power." (Hultsch) in the British Museum plate of Chārudēvi, Ep. Ind., Vol. VIII, p. 146. The Sanskrit equivalent of the term is found in the Chammak and Siwanī grants of Pravarasena II (Gupta Inscriptions, pp. 238 and 246) and in the Uruvapalli grant (Ind. Ant., Vol. V, p. 52). Cf. also chhatrapasa saputra-darasa ayu-bala-vardhis in the Taxila plate of Patika (Ep.
Ind., Vol. IV, p. 56) and J. R. A. S. for 1924, p. 402.

ālindā (F, l. 3), perhaps Skt. ālinda m. "a terrace in front of the house-door," Pali ālinda "a terrace or verandah outside a house." Mahāvagga, VI, 36, 4= Vinaya Piṭakam (ed. Oldenberg) Vol. I, pp. 247 f.; Chullavagga, VI, 3, 5 and 14, 1=Vin. Piṭ., Vol. II, pp. 153 and 169. The ālinda is not necessarily a terrace or verandah outside a building, as is proved by Mahāvamsa XXXV, 3, Tatheva Lohapāsāde Thūpārāṃvuposathavhaye kuchchhi-ājirāṃ kāresi kuchchhi ālindam eva cha "He made an inner courtyard and an inner verandah in the Lohapāsāda." Cf. P. K. Acharya, Dictionary of Hindu Architecture, pp. 54 ff., and A. K. Coomaraswamy, J.A.O.S., Vol. XLVIII, p. 252.

āchariya (C 1, ll. 10 and 11), written with short initial a in line 8 of inscription C 2
=Skt. āchārya, Pali āchariya, "a teacher."

Ananda (C 1, l. 12; C 2, l. 10), i.e., Ananda, a personal name.

Ikkāku, i.e., Ikkhāku=Skt. Ikskvāku, Pali Okkāka, the legendary progenitor of the Solar race.

Ikkāku-rāja-pavara-risī-sata-pabhava-vamsa-sambhava (F, l. 1)=Skt. Ikskvāku-rāja-pravara-rshi- sata-prabhava-vamsa-sambhava, an epithet of the Buddha.

udisāya (H, l. 13). Cf. Skt. uddīśya, Pali uddissa (absol. of ud-āśati) "to point out", "on behalf of, on account of."

unisa (J, l. 2)=Skt. uśnīṣa, "a coping-stone." Frequently met with in Amarāvati inscriptions. The word appears to designate not only the coping-stone which forms the crowning member of the railing enclosing the stūpa, but also the frieze running along the top of the sculptured facing of such a monument.
Cf. Acharya, op. cit., pp. 99 f.

cahetkanāya (B 2, l. 5). Cf. Spence Hardy, Eastern Monachism, p. 229.

ubhayito (B 5, l. 6), i.e., ubbhayita=Skt. ūrdhwayita* from ubbha=Skt. ūrdhva. Cf. Pischel, Grammatik, § 300.

uvavimāṇi[tan] (F, l. 3)=Skt. uparivṛṇāṇa.

uvāsikā (F, l. 2)=Skt. upāsikā.

ovaraka (F, l. 3) "a cell"=Skt. opavaraka*. Cf. Lüders, List; Index a.s. opavaraka, uyaraka, uvavaraka, ovaraka.

Kandaviri (A 2, l. 6, etc., passim), a personal name.

Karumbudhūz (F, l. 2), a personal name.

kavapa (A 3, l. 6; etc.)=Skt. kṛpapa, Pali kappa, "poor, miserable, wretched, a beggar."

Kuḷabala (B 4, l. 3), name of a clan.

Kuḷa-vihāra (F, l. 3), name of a monastery.

koḷhārikā (F, l. 2)=Skt. kōṣṭhāgārika. "a treasurer, a superintendent of a royal store house." Cf. koḷhagala in Sohgaure copper-plate inscription (Lüders, List, No. 937).

[Ka]ḍa[ba]ḷisiri (H, l. 11), a personal name.

khāṇiga (H, l. 12) "a pillar" (?). Cf. Pali khāṇu. Childers, Pali Dictionary, sub Corrigenda, p. 622, under khāṇu.

Khaṇḍa, i.e., Khaṇḍa (in personal names)=Skt. Skanda.

Khaṇḍa:chalikammanaka (B 4, l. 4), a personal name. Dr. Sten Konow suggests Kanarese chalikiraṇaka=moon, from Kanarese chali=cold.

Khaṇḍavisikhaṇaka (B 2, l. 4)=Skt. Skanda-viśākha, a personal name.

Khaṇḍasāgara[m]ṇaka (A 3, l. 7, etc.) and Khaṇḍasāgarāmṇaga (E, l. 1)=Skt. Skanda-sāgara, a personal name.

khaṇḍha, i.e., khambha (passim), "a pillar," from Vedic skambha. Cf. Pischel, Grammatik, § 396. Also in sela-khaṇḍha (q.v.).

gahapati (F, l. 2)=Skt. grihapati.

gharani (J, l. 1)=Skt. grihṇī.

chakra-lakhaṇa-sukarmāra-sujātu-charaṇa (F, l. 1)=Skt. *chakra-lakṣhaṇa*², an epithet of the Buddha.

Chāṇḍamukha (F, l. 3)=Skt. Chandramukha, a personal name.

Chāṇḍamukhana (F, l. 2); cf. Skt. Chandramukha, a personal name.

Chāṇḍamūla; see. Siri-Chāṇḍamūla.

Chāṇḍisiri (A 3, l. 7, etc., passim) or Chāṇḍisiriṇikā (B 5, l. 5), a personal name.

chātudisa saṅgha (H, ll. 12-13)=Skt. chāturdīśaḥ saṅghaḥ.

chātusala (E, l. 2), i.e., chatussāla, Skt. chatuṣsāla, Pali chatussāla, "a quadrangular building built round an inner courtyard, a cloister or quadrangle." Cf. Myrichchakatikā (ed. Stenzler) p. 46, l. 20; vihāraṃ sacchatuṣsālam; Rājat. III. 13; Mahāvamsa XV, 47 and 50; XXXV, 88; Nāsik Cave (No. 10) Inscription, L. 2, Ep. Ind., Vol. VIII, p. 78. Acharya, op. cit., p. 193.

Chula-Chāṇḍamukha (F, l. 2)=Skt. Kshudra-Chandramukha, a personal name.

Chula-Chāṇḍisiriṇikā (B 4, l. 5), a personal name.

Chula-Buddhā (K)=Skt. Kshudra-Buddhā, a personal name.

Chula-Mūla (F, l. 2)=Skt. Kshudra-Mūla, a personal name.

chetiya-ghara (E, l. 1 and F, ll. 2 and 3)=Skt. chaitya-griha, "an apsidal temple or Chaitya-hall." The term seems to be employed synonymously with sela-maṇḍava. The word chetiya-ghara is frequently met with in inscriptions and applies equally to structural and rock-cut shrines. Cf. Lüders, List, Index and Mahāvamsa XXXI, 52.

chhaṭṭha (E, l. 2; F, l. 2), i.e., chhaṭṭha "sixth"=Skt. shashṭha.

chhaṭṭhi, i.e., chhaṭṭhī, in the personal name Chhaṭṭhisiri (C 4, l. 6).

Chhadakapavaticha (J, l. 1), a personal name (?) Cf. below under "Geographical Terms."

jām[ā]tukasa (E, l. 1)=Skt. jāmātṛikasya.

jua-kāma-kodha-bhaya-harisa-tarisa-moha-dosa-sad[ā]pita-Māra-bala-dapa-māna-pasamana-kara (F, l. 1)=Skt. jīta-kāma-krodha-bhaya-harsha-tarsha-mōha-dvēsha-sadbāpita-Māra-bala-darpa-praśamana-kara, an epithet of the Buddha.

ṛita-rāga-dosa-moha-vipamuta (A 2, l. 2, etc.)=Skt. ṛita-rāga-dvṛṣha-mōha-vipramukta, epithet of the Buddha. Rāga, dosa, moha, "lust, hatred, and delusion" are the three Aggis, Kūñchanas, or Akusala-mūlas symbolised in the centre of the "Wheel of Existence" by three animals: a dove or cock, a snake and a hog.

tarisa (E, l. 1)=Skt. tarsha "thirst."

taruṇa-divasakara-pabha (F, l. 1)=Skt. ṛprabha, an epithet of the Buddha.

talāka (F, l. 3)=Skt. taḍāga, "a tank or cistern."

tiṇi (F, l. 3), instr. tiṃhi, (F, l. 3) "three."

tera (F, l. 1) "thirteenth."

teloka-dhamma-dhurū-vaha (G, l. 1)=Skt. trailōkyā-dharma-dhurā vaha, an epithet of the Buddha.

thambha in sela-thambha (C 2, l. 8)=Skt. stambha, Pali thambha "a pillar, a column, a stele."

thera, combined with personal names (F, ll. 3-4; H, l. 14)=Skt. sthavira, Pali thera, "a senior monk, an elder."

theriya (F, l. 1), derived from thera, adj. "belonging to theras," subst. "fraternity, community."

darisana (F, l. 1)=Skt. darśana, Pali dassana. Cf. Pischel, Grammatik, §135.

dasabala-mahābala (F, l. 1)=Skt. daśabala-mahābala, an epithet of the Buddha.

dināri-māsaka (B 5, l. 6); Skt. dināra, from Latin denarius, "an Indian coin struck in imitation of and called after the Roman Denarius" and Skt. māsha(ka), "a certain weight and monetary value." Manu VIII, 135, 298, 392.

divasa (E, l. 2)=Skt. divasa. Elsewhere (C 2, l. 11) abbreviated as diva.

Dīgha-Majjhima-pa[n]cha-mātuka-desaka-vāchaka, and Dīgha-Majjhima-nikāya-dhara (C 1, ll. 11-12 and C 2, ll. 9-10); corrected reading. Cf. Vinaya-dhara and Mahāvīnaya-dhara in Amarāvati inscriptions. Burgess, Amaravati Stupa, p. 37, No. VIII, and p. 102, No. 25. The word -dhara in these compounds must have the same meaning as Arabic ḥāfiẓ "one who has the whole Qur'ān by heart."

duhutā (B, l. 3)=Skt. duhitā "a daughter", gen., instr. sing., dhūtuya, (F, l. 3; H, l. 9).

deva-manusa-sava-sata-hita-sukha-maga-desika (F, l. 1)=Skt. dēva-manushya-sarva-sattva-hita-sukha-mārga-dēśika, an epithet of the Buddha.

devarāja-sakata (A 2, l. 1, etc., passim)=Skt. dēvarāja-satkrīta, an epithet of the Buddha. -desaka (C 1, l. 11 "osaka"; C 2, l. 9 "desa") "a preacher".

Dhanaka (B 2, l. 4), a clan name.

Dhamma (K, l. 1)=Skt. Dharma, a personal name.

Dhamma[ghosa] (H, l. 14)=Skt. Dharmaghōsha, a personal name.

Dhammanandi (F, l. 4), i.e., Dhammanandī, a personal name.

dhātuvara-parigrahita (B 4, l. 3, etc., passim)=Skt. dhātuvara-parigrihita "absorbed by the best of elements (dhātu), i.e., by Nirvāṇa".¹

natu (K) in sanatuka, i.e., sanattuka=Skt. sanāptrika.

nattī (H, l. 8)=Skt. naptrī, "a grand-daughter".

¹ The above interpretation I owe to the courtesy of M. L. de la Vallée Poussin, who adds: "If the inscriptions belonged to the Mahāsāṃghikas, a conjectural explanation of dhātuvara as Dharmadhātu would not be excluded. The Dharmadhātu was sometimes a kind of Buddhist Brahman for the followers of the Mahāyāna."

[To me it does not appear to be impossible that the Mahāśāṃghika has been specified in these inscriptions as 'protected by the corporeal remains of the Buddha' and that the genitive case is used here to discriminate this stūpa from others not similarly consecrated. Inscription E gives dhātu-pari only.—Ed.]

navakama and navakamma (C 1, l. 12; C 2, l. 11; F, l. 3)=Skt. navakarma, Pali navakamma, "a religious building dedicated by some lay-member to the Saṅgha". The procedure by which a superintendent of works (navakammika) is appointed by the chapter of Bhikkhus in order to supervise the construction of a navakamma is described in Chullavagga VI, 5=Vinaya Piṭakam (ed. Oldenberg), Vol. II, pp. 159 f. (S. B. E., Vol. XX, pp. 189 ff.). "If the buildings were for the Bhikkhus, then a Bhikkhu, if for the Bhikkhunīs, then a Bhikkhunī, was appointed to superintend the works in order to ensure the buildings being in accordance with the rules of the Order as to size, form, and object of the various apartments". Cf. also Sutta-vibhaṅga, Bhikkhunī-vibhaṅga I, 1=Vinaya Piṭakam, Vol. IV, p. 211. The word navakamma frequently occurs in dedicatory inscriptions.

navakammika (F, l. 3) "a Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī appointed by the Chapter as a superintendent of the building operations of a navakamma, (see preceding article). Cf. Lüders, List, Nos. 154, 773, 987 and 1250. A synonymous term is kamm-ādhiṭṭhāyaka, Mahāvamsa, XXX, 98.

Nākā (K)=Skt. Nāgā, a personal name.

Nāga (F, l. 4)=Skt. Nāga, a personal name.

Nāgātara (J, l. 1), a personal name.

Nāgamna (F, l. 3), a personal name.

Nīyabodhinikā (F, l. 3), a personal name.

nāga-sāva-samanāgata (E, l. 2) "assembled (?) from various countries".

nīkapanika (E, l. 2), a word of uncertain meaning.

nīḥapita or nīḥapita (C 1, l. 12; C 2, l. 11), Pali nīḥāpita, past participle of nīḥāpeti, "to complete", Mahāvamsa, XXXI, 1, 2. Cf. Pali nīḥita completed, thūpe anīḥite yeva, Mahāvamsa, XXIX, 53; thūpe anīḥitaṃ kammaṃ nīḥāpeti ibid., XXXII, 2.

nīrōḇa-sampatti-sampādake (A 3, l. 9, etc., passim)=Skt. nīrōḇa-sampatti-sampādakē, pañcama (E, l. 2) "fifth".

paṭa (J, l. 2 and K) "a slab." Frequently in Amarāvati inscriptions; see Lüders, List, Index. Also in compound sapaṭa-saṃthara (F, l. 2), "with a floor of (stone) slabs".

paṭibhāga (A 2, ll. 6-7, etc., passim) in compound samaṇa-baṃhūṇa^o. The word corresponds with Skt. pratibhāga,¹ Pali paṭibhāga=counterpart, likeness. But the word wanted here is apaṭibhāga, Pali appaṭibhāga "unequalled, unparalleled, matchless."

paṭiḥapita (A 3, l. 9), i.e., paṭiḥāpita, Skt. pratiṣṭhāpita "erected, set up, dedicated"

Paduma (K)=Skt. Padma, a personal name.

Padumavāni (J, l. 1), a personal name.

Padumā (K)=Skt. Padmā, a personal name.

padhāna-sālā (F, l. 3)=Skt. pradhāna-sālā, "a hall for practising religious exercises", from Pali padhāna "exertion, energetic effort, striving, concentration of mind". Cf. padhāna-maṃḍa in Amarāvati inscriptions. Burgess, Amarāvati Stupa, p. 105, No. 49; Lüders, List, No. 1230 and correction, p. 179.

parigaha (E, l. 2)=Skt. parigraha, Pali pariggaha, "grace, favour."

parigahita or parigahita in dhātava-parigahita (q.v.) and Vērūpakhāpati-Mahāna-parigahita (q.v.). The meaning of parigahita in these two compounds appears to be "absorbed by".

¹ [But Skt. pratibhāga means 'gift' or 'share' also.—Ed.]

parināmetuna[m] passim, absolutivum of parināmeti=Skt. pariṇāmayati, Pali pariṇāmei (caus. of pariṇamati) "to bend to, to change into, to turn to use for somebody, to apportion, to destine." Mahādevi Bapisirīṇikā apāno mātaram Haṁmasirīṇikā parināmetuna (C 2, l. 7) and Mahādevi Chhaṭṭhisirī apāno mātaram Haṁmasirīṇikā parināmetuna (C 4, l. 7). It is clear that parināmetuna is used here in the same sense as purato katūnaṁ in the Jaggayyapeṭa inscriptions: apāno mātaram Nāgalinīm purato katūnaṁ "having associated [with him] his mother Nāgalini" (Bühler). In the expression apāno ubhaya-kulam parināmetuna (B 2, l. 5; C 1, l. 8; C 5, l. 4) it is also used with the object in the accusative. Elsewhere we find apāno ubhaya-kulasa atichhitam-anāgata-vaṭamānake or vaṭamānakānaṁ in which the connection with the absolutivum parināmetuna is not clear. Cf. Buddhist Skt. pariṇāmayati (Mahāvastu, Vol. I, pp. 81 and 309).

pavajita (E, l. 1), i.e., pavajita,=Skt. pravrajita, Pali pabbajita.

pas[ā]daka (E, l. 1)=Skt. prasādaka, Pali pasādaka "converting to the Buddhist faith".

pāsāda in Bodhi-rukha-pāsāda (F, l. 3) q.v.

pituchhā (A 2, l. 5, etc., passim)=Pali pituchchhā: "a father's sister, a paternal aunt". Cf. Pischel, Grammatik, § 148.

pituno (F, l. 2) gen. sing.=Skt. pituh.

puva-dāra (F, l. 3), i.e., puva-dāra=Skt. pūrva-dāra "the eastern gate or entrance". The word dāra is frequently met with in Amarāvatī inscriptions. Cf. Lüders, List, Index, under dāra.

puva-diśā-bhāga (F, l. 2)=Skt. pūrva-diśā-bhāga.

Pūkiya, Pukiya (A 2, l. 6; C 3, l. 7; C 5, l. 2), Pugiya (E, l. 1), a clan name.

Bapisirīṇikā (C 2, l. 6), a personal name. Cf. Bapisiri in Lüders, List, No. 1213 (Amarāvatī inscription) and names like Bappuka (Ep. Ind., Vol. II, p. 282), Bappārya (Gupta Inscr., p. 243), Bappasvāmin (ibidem, p. 105) and Bāppadōva (ibidem, p. 249), Bappikā (Rājat. VII, 1128).

Bahusutiya (G, l. 8)=Skt. Bahusrutiga, Pali Bahussutiya, name of a Buddhist sect. It was a subdivision of the Gōkūlika sect which belonged to the Mahāsāṅghikas. Cf. M. Walleiser, Die Sekten des alten Buddhismus, pp. 6 and 21.

bālikā (B 4, l. 3; B 5, l. 3 ex conjectura; C 2, l. 6; C 4, l. 5).

Budhanīkā (F, l. 3), a personal name.

Budhanīkī[nā] (F, l. 2), a personal name.

Budhā (K), a personal name.

Budhinaka (F, l. 2), a personal name.

Budhi[vā]siya (F, l. 2), a personal name.

Bodhi (F, l. 2)=Skt. Bodhi, a personal name.

Bodhika (F, l. 2)=Skt. Bodhika, a personal name.

Bodhi-rukha-pāsāda (F, l. 3)=Skt. Bodhi-riksha-prāsāda, Pali Bodhi-rukha-ppāsāda, "a shrine of the Bodhi-tree." G. Spence Hardy, Eastern Monachism, p. 212.

Bodhisammasa (F, l. 2)=Skt. Bodhisammasa, a personal name. Cf. Lüders, List, No. 1200.

Bodhisiri (F, l. 2)=Skt. Bodhisiri, a personal name.

bhagini (A 3, l. 5, etc., passim, instr. sing. bhaginiyā) (H, l. 10)=Skt. bhaginī "sister".

bhajanī-Anandena (C 1, l. 12) and bhajanī-Anandena (C 2, l. 10)=Skt. bhādāni-Anandena "by the Reverend Ānanda".

Bhāṭidevā (G, l. 7), a personal name.

bhatuno, gen. sing. (F, 1. 2)=Skt. bhātuh.

Bhada (F, 1. 2), i.e., Bhadla=Skt. Bhadra, a personal name.

Bhadasiri (F, 1. 3), i.e., Bhaddasiri=Skt. Bhadrasī, a personal name.

bharyā (A 2, 1. 6, etc., passim) and bhayā (B 2, 1. 4; B 4, 1. 5)=Skt. bhāryā, Pali bhāriyā.

bhāgineya (F, 1. 2)=Skt. bhāginiya, "a sister's son".

bhātuno (F, 1. 3) gen. sing.=Skt. bhrātuh; bhātunam, gen. plur.=Skt. bhrātṛiṇām.

bhātu-puta (F, 1. 2)=Skt. bhrātṛi-putra, "a brother's son".

Majjhima-nikāya, see Dīgha-Majjhima-nikāya.

maṇḍava, maṇḍava (F, 1. 3)=Skt. maṇḍapa.

Mahākāṁdasiri (C 5, 1. 2), a personal name. Cf. Kāṁdasiri.

mahāgaṇi-rasabha-gaṇḍha-hathi (A 2, 1. 2, etc., passim)=Skt. mahāgaṇi-rṣishubha-gaṇḍha-hastin, an epithet of the Buddha. For mahāgaṇi cf. Mahāvamsa XXIX, 30.

Mahā-Chandamukha (F, 1. 2)=Skt. Mahā-Chandramukha, a personal name.

Mahāchetiya and Mahāchetiya (A 2, 1. 3, etc., passim)=Skt. Mahāchaitya, "Great Chaitya," loc. sing. Mahāchetiyamhi (C 4, 1. 2, ex conjectura).

mahātalarava (A 2, 1. 6, etc., passim), a title of uncertain meaning, evidently denoting "a high dignitary or a feudal lord". See above, p. 6.

mahātalaravi (A 3, 1. 7, etc., passim), "the wife of a mahātalarava".

mahādāṇḍanāyaka (B 2, 1. 4)=Skt. mahādāṇḍanāyaka "a high, probably judicial, official". Cf. J. R. A. S., 1924, p. 402.

mahādānapatini (A 3, 1. 7, etc., passim)=Skt. mahādānapatnī* "a mistress of munificence" an epithet of Chāṁtisiri. Cf. mahādānapati in Taxila plate inscription. Ep. Ind., Vol. IX, p. 56.

mahādevi (B 5, 1. 4; C 2, 1. 6; G, 1. 7; H, 1. 11), a title borne by the consort of a ruling chief.

mahādhammakāthika (H, 1. 14)=Skt. mahādharma-kāthika "a great preacher of the Law." Cf. Burgess, Amaravati Stupa, p. 94.

mahābhikkhu-saṅgha (E, 1. 1), i.e., mahābhikkhu-saṅgha.

mahāmātukā (F, 1. 2). Cf. Pali mahāmātā "a grandmother".

Mahā-Mūla (F, 1. 2)=Skt. Mahā-Mūla, a personal name.

mahāvihāra (B 5, 1. 5; F, 1. 3).

mahāsēnāpati (A 3, 1. 7, etc., passim)=Skt. mahāsēnāpati, lit. "Commander-in-Chief" but here used as a title designating a feudal lord. According to the late Dr. Fleet it "denotes equal rank with Mahārāja and Mahāsāmanta." (Gupta Inscriptions, p. 15, n.). See above, p. 6.

mahāsēnāputini (B 4, 1. 5), Skt. mahāsēnāpatnī* "the wife of a mahāsēnāpati".

Mahī[sā]saka (G, 1. 12), Skt. Mahīśāsaka, Pali Mahimsāsaka, name of a Buddhist sect. It was a subdivision of the Theravādins and appears to have flourished in the Āndhra country. Cf. M. Walleiser, Die Sekten des alten Buddhismus, pp. 7 and 22.

Māḍhariputa (A 2, 1. 5, etc., passim) and Māḍhariputa (E, 1. 1; F, 1. 1; H, 1. 8)=Skt. Māḍhariputra, metronymic of Sīri-Virapurisadata.

mātā (A 3, 1. 7, etc., passim) "mother", acc. sing. mātaram (C 2, 1. 7; C 4, 1. 7) instr. and gen. sing. mātuya (F, 1. 2; G, 1. 7).

mātuka, see pañcha-mātuka.

Misī (F, 1. 3), i.e., Missi=Skt. Misrī, a personal name

Mūla (F, l. 3), a personal name.

Mūlamnikā (F, l. 3), a personal name.

Mūlavāṇiya (F, l. 2), a personal name.

Rudradharabhaṭṭārikā (B 5, l. 3)=Skt. Rudradharabhaṭṭārikā, a personal name of a queen, probably belonging to the ruling house of Ujjayinī. See above, p. 4.

Revata (F, l. 2), a personal name.

Revatimnikā (F, l. 2), a personal name.

-vaḍhāki (F, l. 4)=Skt. vardhaki, Pali vaḍḍhaki, Hindi barhāi, "a carpenter, builder, architect, mason." Cf. vaḍhaki in Karle inscription, Lüders, List, No. 1092 and vaḍakin in Sānci inscription, ibidem, No. 495. In inscr. F, l. 4 the word occurs in the compound sela-vaḍhāki=Skt. śaila-wardhaki, "a stone-mason." (cf. Pali īṭṭhaka-vaḍḍhaki "a brick-mason," Mahāvamsa XXIX, 5, 30 and A. K. Coomaraswamy, J. A. O. S., Vol. XLVIII, p. 272.

vaṇija(ka) (A 3, l. 6, etc., passim)=Buddhist Sanskrit vanīyaka, vanīpaka "a beggar, a mendicant." Examples: Dēva na hy=ēsha Kunālō=ndhaku ēsha vanīpakah patnyā saha dēvasya yānāśālāyām=avasthitah, Divyāvadāna, p. 414, l. 18; Mahākāśyapō dīn-ānātha-kripana-vanīyak-ānukampī, Divy., p. 83, l. 19; brāhmaṇaṃ vā śramaṇaṃ vā anyam v=āpi, vanīyakam, Mahāvastu, Vol. I, p. 188, l. 14.

-vathava (C 1, l. 11; F, l. 2), i.e., vattavva=Skt. vāstavya "residing at".

vāchaka (C 1, l. 11; C 2, l. 9, restored), "a preacher".

Vāsīthiputa (A 2, l. 3, etc., passim) and Vāsethiputa (G, l. 5; H, ll. 7 and 9), i.e., Vāsīthiputta=Skt. Vāsīsthīputra, metronymic of Siri-Chāntamūla, Kāṃdasirī, Kāṃdachalikireṃmaṇaka (?) (B 4, l. 4) and Siri-Ehuvala-Chāntamūla (H, l. 9).

Viṇhusirī (C 5, l. 3)=Skt. Vishṇusrī, a personal name. Cf. Viṇhukā in Sānci inscriptions, Ep. Ind., Vol. II, p. 95.

Vidhika (F, l. 4), a personal name.

Virūpakṣapati-Mahāsena-parigahita (A 2, l. 3, etc., passim)=Skt. Virūpākṣapati-Mahāsēna-parigrihita, an epithet of Siri-Chāntamūla. In the Mulindapaṇḍita, pp. 6 ff., Mahāsēna figures as a devaputta who becomes incarnate in the sage Nāgasēna.

viḥāra (F, l. 2; G, l. 8; H, l. 11), "a monastery".

Virarīna (F, l. 3), a personal name.

Vīra[m]nikā (F, l. 3), a personal name.

velāmi(ka) (B 3, l. 7, etc., passim; once vailāmika A 4, l. 7) in compound samaṇa-bamhaṇa-. The word appears to be an adjective meaning, "belonging to Velāma." Buddha (Jātaka, Vol. I, p. 228; Cambridge translation, Vol. I, p. 101) refers to the time of Velāma when he (Buddha) "stirred up all India by giving the seven things of price, and in [his] largesse poured them forth as though [he] had made into one mighty stream the five great rivers." He then preached the Velāmaka-Sutta (Velāmaka-Suttaṃ kathesi) which is also mentioned in Sumaṅgala-Vilāsini, Vol. I, p. 234, l. 11. It would seem, that Velāma was a legendary personage renowned in Buddhist tradition for his munificence like Vessantara with whom his name is combined in Vibhaṅgaṭṭha-kathā, p. 414, l. 6. Mr. Helmer Smith has drawn my attention to a passage in Anguttara-Nikāya, Vol. IV, pp. 394-396 where the Buddha praises the liberality of a Brahmin Velāma with whom he identifies himself in a previous birth.

vochhina, i.e., vochchhinna (A 2, l. 7, etc., passim) in compound samaṇa-bamhaṇa-=Skt. vyavachchhinna, past participle of vyavachchinatti, passive vyavachchhidyaṭē, Pali

- vochhijate* "to be cut off". The word wanted here evidently is avochhina, Pali abbochchhinna, abbhochchhinna "not cut off, uninterrupted, continuous".
- saṁvachhara* (E, l. 2)=Skt. saṁvatsara, "a year". Elsewhere (A 3, l. 9, etc., passim) abbreviated as saṁva, or saṁ (E, l. 2).
- sata* (F, l. 3), i.e., satta,=Skt. sapta, "seven".
- satari-salaṁ* (B 5, l. 6), i.e., sattari-salaṁ "one hundred and seventy." Cf. Pischel, Grammatik, § 60.
- saṁthara* in sapaṭa-saṁtharaṁ (F, l. 2)=Skt. saṁstara, Pali saṁthara, saṁthāra "a layer, stratum, couch, flooring". Cf. Mahāvamsa XXX, 70.
- samaṇa-baṁhaṇa-kavaṇa-vaṇija*[ka]-dīn-ānugaha-velāmi[ka]-dāna-paṭibhāga-vochhina-dhāra-padāyini (A 3, ll. 6-7, etc., passim)=Skt. śramaṇa-brāhmaṇa-kṛpāṇa-vaṇīyaka-dīn-ānugriha-vaṇīyaka-dān-āpratibhāg-avyavachhinnā-dhāra-pradāyini, an epithet of Chāṁtisiri. Cf. above, under kavaṇa, vaṇija(ka), velāmi(ka), paṭibhāga, and vochhina.
- saṁma-saṁbuddha* (A 2, l. 1)=Skt. samyak-saṁbuddha, Pali sammā-saṁbuddha "perfectly enlightened, a universal Buddha".
- saṁuthapiyamāna* (B 5, l. 6)=Skt. saṁutthāpyamāna, present participle passive of saṁutthāpayati, Pali saṁutthāpeti "to found, originate".
- sarada-sasi-soma-darisana* (F, l. 1)=Skt. śārada-śaśi-saumya-darśana, an epithet of the Buddha.
- savaṁṇu*, gen. savaṁṇuno (A 2, l. 1, etc., passim)=Skt. varvaṇa, Pali sabbaṇṇu "omniscient", an epithet of the Buddha.
- sava-niyuta* (E, l. 2; F, l. 2; cf. sava-jāla(?)-niyuta G, l. 8), i.e., savva-niyutta=Skt. sarva-niyukta.
- sava-loka-chita-mahita* (F, l. 1)=Skt. sarva-lōka-chitta-mahita, an epithet of the Buddha.
- sava-loka-hita-sukh-ārahathanāya* (C 1, l. 9; C 3, l. 12), cf. ubhaya-loka-hita°.
- sava-sat-ānukampaka* (A 2, l. 1, etc., passim), i.e., savva-satt-ānukampaka=Skt. sarva-sattv-ānukampaka, an epithet of the Buddha.
- sava-sādhv-vuchhalā* (A 3, l. 7, etc., passim)=Skt. sarva-sādhv-vatsalā, an epithet of Chāṁtisiri.
- [sā]dhu-vaga (F, l. 3), i.e., sādhv-vagga=Skt. sādhv-varga.
- Siri-Ehuvala*-(Ehuvala)-Chātamūla (G, l. 7, H, ll. 3 and 10), a personal name.
- Siri-Chāmtamūla* (A 2, l. 5, etc., passim), a personal name. Sometimes Chātamūla.
- Siri-Virapurisadatta* (A 2, l. 5, etc., passim) -Vira- (E, l. 2 and G, l. 6)=Skt. Śrī-Vira-purushadatta, a personal name.
- suṁṇhā* (F, l. 3, G, l. 5)=Skt. snushā, Pali suṇṇhā "a daughter-in-law."
- supabuddha-bodhi* (B 5, l. 1)=Skt. suprabuddha-bōdhi, an epithet of the Buddha.
- suparigaha* (F, l. 1; H, l. 11)=Skt. suparigraha, "grace, acceptance".
- suparigahita* (C 1, l. 10; C 2, l. 8)=Skt. suparigrihita, Pali supariggahita, "well favoured, graced, i.e., accepted by."
- sela-khaṁbha* (B 4, l. 6; B 5, l. 4; C 2, l. 8; C 5, l. 5)=Skt. śaila-skambha "a stone pillar." Cf. above, under khaṁbha.
- sela-thaṁbha* (C 2, l. 8)=Skt. śaila-stambha, "a stone pillar." Cf. above, under thaṁbha.
- sela-maṁḍava* (E, l. 2) and sela-maṁḍava (F, l. 3)=Skt. śaila-maṇḍapa, "a stone shrine", sela-vaḍḍhāki (F, l. 4); see above, under vaḍḍhāki.

TWO ADDITIONAL INSCRIPTIONS FROM NAGARJUNIKONDA.

BY J. PH. VOGEL, PH.D.

After the above paper had been completed, Mr. Longhurst sent me estampages of two more inscriptions discovered by him in the course of his excavations at Nāgārjunikoṇḍa. Both are found incised on sculptures.

One of these inscriptions occurs on a 'footprint slab.' It consists of one line of writing and comprises twenty-three aksharas, the concluding letter being written below the line owing to want of space. The aksharas measure from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $1\frac{1}{4}$ inches in height. The lettering is distinct, except some of the vowel-marks. It will be observed that the inscription is crossed by a series of nine vertical lines which possibly have some connection with the footprint carved on the slab.

The inscription records the donation of a patipadā. It would follow that this word, corresponding to Sanskrit pratipadā, ought to indicate the object on which the inscription is engraved. The technical term, however, by which a footprint slab is indicated in the Amarāvati inscriptions, is paduka-paṭa (i.e., pāduka-patta), or pātuka^o, patuka (i.e., pāduka).

The donor was Budhi (i.e., Buddhi), the sister of Moda, the Saka. If this interpretation is correct, the mention of a Saka or Scythian is a point of special interest. In this connection it should be noted that among the sculptures excavated by Mr. Longhurst at Nāgārjunikoṇḍa there are two showing a warrior in Scythian dress.

In the word bakiniya corresponding to Sanskrit bhaginyāḥ we note a disaspiration of the initial consonant and a hardening of the media ga into ka.

TRANSLATION.

Success ! A patipadā, the pious gift of Budhi, the sister of Moda, the Scythian.

The second inscription occurs on a carved stone slab. It consists of only three aksharas which I read : meaning "Of Dhama". Whether this is the name of the donor or the mason, it is impossible to decide.

No. 2.—NALANDA STONE INSCRIPTION OF THE REIGN OF YASOVARMADEVA.

BY HIRANANDA SASTRI.

The inscription which forms the subject of this paper was excavated at Nālandā, the well-known ancient site of Magadha, by Mr. J. A. Page in the official year 1925-26.¹ It was found buried in the debris of the southern verandah of the old vihāra—now called Monastery I—which has yielded not only a large number of bronze or copper images of various kinds and the very valuable copper-plate inscription of Dēvapālādēva that has been published above,² but also the earliest remains so far discovered at Nālandā.

This interesting document is engraved on the top bed of a stone capital-bracket and covers a space of $17\frac{1}{2}$ inches by 11 inches. It consists of twenty-one lines of writing and, excepting for a crack at the middle, is fairly well-preserved. The execution is neat and calligraphic. The record is a praśasti drawn in florid Sanskrit and, but for the initial symbol and the words apīcha coming between the sixth and the seventh stanzas, is entirely in verse. The characters, in which it is written, belong to the northern class of alphabets and present a very marked development in contrast with those of the contemporary and even somewhat later inscriptions which have been found in Northern and Eastern India. They largely resemble the characters of the Aphaṣṭ stone inscription of Ādityasēna¹ and would, thereby, indicate that the development, we notice in them, must have taken place not later than the first half of the sixth century of the Christian era, i.e., the time to which this inscription belongs. Till now, the Gayā inscription of A.D. 588-89 was considered to be the earliest inscription to illustrate such forms. But the epigraph under publication is decidedly anterior to that record and, therefore, becomes the earliest known inscription to represent that development. The alphabet to which these characters belong may well be called acute-angled (Bühler)² or Siddhamātrikā (Berūni)³ in preference to the term 'nail-headed' or 'kuṭīla'. Dēvanāgarī is an outgrowth of this lipi. The present record uses the bipartite form of ya throughout, as does the Bōdh-Gayā inscription of Mahānāman.⁴ Nālandā is not far off from Bōdh-Gayā. This epigraph, therefore, will not countenance the supposition that the use of the bipartite ya in the Mahānāman inscription was "premature." The tripartite form of ya is found even in the Udaypur inscription of Aparājita,⁵ which belongs to the Samvat year 718 (=A.D. 661). It is to be met with not only in the inscriptional records named above, but also in the Horiuzi palm-leaf manuscripts of Japan which are believed to have existed in the second half of the 6th century (A.D.). To regard an inscription as late or early merely on the ground that it uses the bipartite or the tripartite form of ya would not, consequently, be quite accurate. The alphabet used in this inscription is, to a large extent, identical with the modern Dēvanāgarī or Nāgarī. The chief points of difference which it presents are these: The ā-mātrā is generally indicated by a sort of small wedge attached to the right of the top line, whereas in Nāgarī it is expressed by a full perpendicular stroke. In the case of ṛā, however, a somewhat different mode is adopted by slightly bending the right end and extending it upwards beyond the top towards the right side. The ū-mātrā is slightly different in shape, as, e.g., in bhūrī°, l. 2. The ē-mātrā is marked in two different ways, sometimes in an elongated form of the Nāgarī symbol with a bend at about the middle, as in dēhinām, l. 1, and sometimes by a short curve appended to the left of the top line of the akshara to which it belongs, as in °ārthinē, l. 1, or in karēṇa, l. 21. Similarly, the ai-mātrā is expressed in two ways. In °ś=ch=aisha, occurring in the penultimate line, it is practically similar to the Nāgarī symbol, whereas in the majority of cases it is expressed by the hook-like mark attached to the left of the top line and the slanting ē-mātrā, as, e.g., in °uchchaiḥ, l. 21. The ō-mātrā is shown by the symbols of the ā and the ē-mātrās combined, see, for instance, °mōkshāya and yō in l. 1. The au-mātrā is also different, e.g., see °gaura° in l. 6, or Śauddhōdanēr in l. 9.

As to the initial vowels, only the ā and the i retain their comparatively earlier forms. The former keeps the hook attached to its leg as in ādēsāt°, l. 12, and the latter, the two small circles placed above the reversed crescent, as in īy°, l. 20.

In the case of consonants, the omission of the top line of the sa, the ma and the ya symbols is noteworthy. So, also, are the forms of the letters bha, ha, gha and ja. The symbol for dha is also dissimilar and still preserves the old form, as does the letter tha. The form of r in conjunction with a following consonant is also antique and noteworthy; e.g., see sEndrair-yaḥ in l. 1 or °padārtha° in l. 2.

In respect of orthography, the points which call for remark are (1) the use throughout of v for b, e.g., in vādhī, ll. 15 and 17, or in Vālāditya, l. 19, and (2) the use of the ṇ-like symbol for the conjunct ñ, as in *sarvēśhāṇ=janma*¹, l. 17.

The inscription contains two words of special lexical interest. One is śāstā which occurs in v. 14 and seems to be used in the sense of sword personified or command.¹ The other is Tikina which comes in the third stanza and must be a foreign title, as is shown below.

The inscription, as I have stated above, is a prāśasti and its object is to record that Mālāda, the son of the minister (mantrin) of Yaśōvarmmadēva, made certain gifts, specified herein, to the temple which king Bālāditya had erected at Nālandā in honour of the 'Son of Śuddhōdana', i.e., the Buddha. It consists of fifteen beautiful stanzas written in three different metres, namely, Śārdḍulavikrīḍitam, Vasantatilakā and Sragdharā and is a Buddhist record. Commencing with an invocation of the Buddha, it extols the great king Yaśōvarmmadēva as the Lōkapāla i.e., guardian of the world, who had risen like the sun after dispelling the darkness in the form of the enemies and after placing his foot on the heads of all the kings though, unfortunately, it does not mention the dynasty to which he belonged or the country over which he ruled. It, then, introduces the donor Mālāda and describes him as the wise, magnanimous, benevolent and victorious son of Yaśōvarmmadēva's minister, whom it calls the Mārgapati as well as Udichipati and pradīta-Tikina, though it does not give his name or any other particulars about him. Mālāda is mentioned here as the brother of Nirmmalā (v. 11), son (nandana) of Bandhumati and scion of a noble family, whose name is not stated. Giving a vivid description of the magnificent temple which king Bālāditya had built at Nālandā like a column of victory constructed after conquering the world (vv. 4-10), the inscription specifies the benefactions which the donor made for that sanctuary, as well as, for the bhikṣus or Buddhist monks. The gifts consisted of gher, curds, a brilliant lamp, pure water mixed with fourfold fragrant objects (chatur-jātaka)² and refreshing like nectar, and a permanent endowment (akshaya-nivṛ), the nature of which has not been made quite clear. We are further informed that Mālāda distributed delicious food and scented water to the bhikṣus and, purchasing a layana and other things from the 'revered Saṅgha' gave them back to the monks, herein called Śākyāmajas (=the (spiritual) sons of the Buddha), excepting a chīvarikā (monk's robe) and *śradḍesa*³ up to and beyond Narādarikā. The afore-mentioned gifts Mālāda brought himself out of his great devotion for the Buddha when he was 'awakened' or enlightened by the illustrious monk Pūrṇapēndrasēna and gave them to the monks for the welfare of his parents as well as of other relations. At the close of the inscription we are told that the kīrti should be respected not only because of the fear of committing the five sins (pañc-ānantarya), which accrue from the infringement of such pious deeds, but, also, because of the fear of the sword¹ of king Bālāditya, the subduer of the enemy.

¹ See Amarakōśa, Śabdakalpadrūma and also Monier Williams' Sanskrit-English Dictionary under Śāstri. Or, does this word refer to an image of the Buddha (Śāstā) which might have been set up by Bālāditya in the temple he had built at Nālandā (see v. 6 of the text) ?

² The four fragrant articles are : (1) Tvak, i.e., Bamboo manna, (2) Ēlā, i.e., Cardamom, (3) Patraka, i.e., Laurus Cassia and (4) Nāgakēśara, or Mesua Rozburghii. Cf. Rājanirghaṇṭa and Bhāvaprakāśa quoted in the Śabdakalpadrūma :—

Tvag-ēlā-patrakais=tulyais=tri-sugandhi tri-jātakam |

Nāgakēśara-samyuktam chātur-jātakam=uchyatē ||

³ The exact significance of this term is not clear. Possibly it meant some place for himself, if not his own country.

The last stanza tells us that the praśasti was composed by Śīlachandra and the celebrated Karaṇika Svāmidatta under the inviolable command of the Saṅgha.

The inscription is not dated but supplies sufficient data to fix the time to which it belongs. It was written when Bālāditya was ruling and when king Yaśōvarmmadēva was holding the reins of sovereignty. That the Bālāditya of this record must be identified with the homonymous chief whom Hiuen Tsiang eulogises as the subduer of Mihirakula and the founder of the grand temple at Nālandā need not be dilated upon. The inscription itself mentions him as the builder of a magnificent sanctuary at Nālandā. That it is silent about his subjugation of the well-known Hūṇa king of Sākala (the modern Siālkoṭ in the Panjāb) is either due to his having had very little to do in the matter, as has already been suggested by Vincent Smith,¹ or, perhaps, to the fact that this inscription came into existence before that event.² Bālāditya flourished cir. 530 after Christ. Accordingly, Yaśōvarmmadēva, his suzerain, must have ruled about the same age. So the question arises : Who was that suzerain ? He cannot be the homonymous ruler of Kanauj,³ who was routed by Mukṭāpīḍa Lalitāditya of Kashmir and is better known to history as the patron of Bhavabhūti, the eminent playwright, because he came a couple of centuries after this period. The Chandēl chief of the same name is also out of the question, for he belongs to a still later epoch, i.e., the 10th century of the Christian era. I know of no other ruler of this name who could be identified with the overlord mentioned in this inscription. But a powerful ruler of the name of Yaśōdharma is known to have flourished at the time when Bālāditya reigned, i.e., the period to which this document is assignable. According to the Mandasōr stone inscriptions,⁴ he was ruling in the Mālava year 589 (= A.D. 533-34), and was a mighty conqueror who governed the whole of Northern India from the Brahmaputra to the Western Ocean and erected two columns of victory with inscriptions commemorating his triumph over the foreign invaders. In view of the facts stated in all these records I am of the opinion that the Yaśōvarmmadēva of the Nālandā and the Yaśōdharma of the Mandasōr inscriptions are identical and that the late Dr. Fleet was perfectly right when he thought that the name of Yaśōdharma should be corrected into Yaśōvarma.⁵ It is true that names ending in dharma are not unknown, but the appellation as given in the document under publication looks more reasonable and more appropriate than the one which was read in the other epigraphs. Accordingly, I would suggest that we should call the sovereign ruler who was chiefly responsible for the breakdown of the power of the Hūṇas in India early in the 6th century of the Christian era by the name of Yaśōvarmmadēva as given in the present record. From the way this inscription introduces him and Bālāditya it is evident that he was the overlord of the latter. The suzerainty of Yaśōdharma is proven by the above-mentioned inscriptions. Bālāditya, in any case, could not have had two different overlords living side by side and having practically identical names.⁶ The chief interest of this inscription, therefore, lies in its enabling us to determine

² It is not impossible, however, that Bālāditya fought Mihirakula—though under the supreme command of Yaśōvarmmadēva—and got the credit for ousting him (i.e., Mihirakula).

³ The guess made in A. S. R. 1925-26, p. 131 was wrong.

⁴ C. I. I., Vol. III, Nos. 34 & 35.

⁵ Ibid., foot-note 2 on page 145.

⁶ Janēndra in the Mandasōr inscription (l. 4) does not necessarily mean a tribal ruler as Fleet seems to have imagined. The word should be taken as a synonym of narēndra in the general sense, i.e., the king of 'men.' Besides, his mention before Viṣṇuvardhana clearly shows his suzerainty. Prof. Dr. Vogel has kindly drawn my attention to the Yaśōvarmapura of the Ghōṣarāwā Buddhist inscription (Ind. Ant. Vol. XVII, pp. 307 ff.) which might have been designated after this monarch. The whereabouts of this place are not known. Sir Alexander Cunningham took it to be the town of Bihār which is not far off from Nālandā.

the real name of the subduer of the Hūnas in Northern India, as stated above, though, unfortunately, it does not add anything to our knowledge of his ancestry or of his successors, whoever they were. That it lends an additional support to his claim for fame and that it proves for certain that what is stated about him in the above-mentioned epigraphs is not a mere 'oriental hyperbole' but rests on facts need not be emphasized.¹

Now comes the difficult problem of identifying the minister or mantrin who is spoken of as Mārgapati, Udichīpati and pratīta-Tikina in this inscription. But for the reticence of the composers of the prāśasti on the nationality and other particulars including the name of this personage, one could have known something definite about him. Mārgapati literally means the guardian of road or roads, but from the similar expressions occurring in the chronicles of Kashmir one could take it to mean the guardian of the passes or the frontier. The Mārgēśas figure very prominently in the narratives of the later chronicles of the 'Happy Valley' as Sir Aurel Stein² has already pointed out. They were also known by other names like Mārgapas, Adhvapas, Adhvēśas, etc., and were generally referred to in the plural and in connection with some particular routes or passes across the mountains, like the Muliks of the Muhammadan times. Besides, they were the feudal chiefs who held hereditary charge of specific passes and were bound to furnish garrisons for the frontier posts on these passes in return for the revenue of certain lands assigned to them. In the inscription under notice, on the other hand, only one such 'guardian' is mentioned. He is spoken of in the singular number and is called the 'Lord of the North' and minister of Yaśovarmmadēva, the protector of the world. Apparently, he was the Chief of such Guardians of Passes whose official status must have been higher than that of the Drāṅgēśas or Mārgēśas of the Kashmir chronicles. What the udichī or north of this record connotes cannot be stated definitely but, possibly, it may not be wrong to take it in the sense of the North-West Frontier of India. This Udichīpati or the Lord of the North was, it would seem, the Chief of the Guardians of Passes in that region. This personage is further described as pratīta-Tikina and the meaning of this epithet is to be determined. That pratīta (prati — ita) is a Sanskrit word signifying 'distinguished' or 'well-known' requires no proof. Tikina is not a Sanskrit word at all. Dr. Sten Konow very kindly tells me that it "is evidently Turki tigin, tegin, tāgin. It means 'a prince of the blood', and is especially used about the son or the brother of the Khān. The Chinese render it as t'o-k'in. It was one of the words first recognised by Thomsen in the Orkhon Inscriptions" and we "find several instances of its use in Chavannes, Documents sur les Tou-kiue (Turcs) Occidentaux". The authors of the prāśasti, it would appear, were not aware of other particulars about this 'stranger' and therefore mentioned him by his rank or office only. The name of his son, the actual donor, was known and could not have been omitted. The inscription gives it as Mālāda which is also not Sanskrit—though a forced Sanskritic derivation may not be impossible.³ The other details given about the donor are that he was a scion of a stainless family and the delight, i.e., son, of Bandhumatī and brother of Nirmmalā. Bandhumatī and Nirmmalā might have been the proper names of the two ladies, his mother and his sister, or their epithets only. The former is known to be the name of several women. Both are undoubtedly Sanskritic and could have been applied to ladies of foreign descent also. Mālāda was, as is evidenced by this inscription, a devout Buddhist and might have been a proselyte. The offerings of a lamp, ghee, scented water, etc., which he brought to Nālandā out of his bhakti or devotion to 'the great son of Śuddhōdana', i.e., the Buddha, are like those which the Buddhists from Tibet and other Central Asian countries are seen bringing to the images of the Buddha at Kasi in the Gōrakhpur district or at Bōdh-Gayā and other sacred places even now.

The remaining persons spoken of in the praśasti are the monk Pūrṇendrasēna and the two poets who composed it. Whether the former belonged to Nālandā itself or to some other locality is not definitely stated in the record but it does not look improbable that he was one of the great teachers of Nālandā itself. Of the two authors of the composition Svāmidatta is described as a prathīta-karaṇika, i.e., a celebrated officer in charge of documents. No particulars are given about the joint author, namely, Śilachandra.

As to the identity of Nālandā no remarks are needed, for it is too well-known to require any. A few points about this locality, however, seem to be worth mentioning here. The first is its designation which is certainly Nālandā (ending in long vowel, i.e., ā) and not Nālandā (ending in short vowel, i.e., a) as is sometimes erroneously supposed to be.¹ The name ending in the long vowel not only occurs in this and other inscriptions but in literature also, both Buddhist as well as Jaina. I am not aware if the locality figures in Brahmanical literature at all. It goes back to the time of Mahāvīra, the twenty-fourth Jina, and of Gautama Buddha, i.e., at least five centuries before the birth of Christ. The Jaina accounts² would show that it was a very prosperous and sacred bāhrikā or suburb of Rājagṛha where Mahāvīra spent fourteen *chāturmāsya*s. Early Buddhist literature³ also testifies to its pristine glory: But it looks curious that in neither of them it figures as a university or centre of learning. Possibly it grew as such later, i.e., about the period when the great pilgrim of China, namely, Hiuen Tsiang, came to study there. The description of the chaityas or vihāras, the prāsādas or dāvālayas, etc., as given in this interesting document, however, would show that the pilgrim's description of its splendour must have been based on facts.

¹ The name ending in the short vowel, i.e., a, is given in C. I. I., Vol. III, p. 210, Buddhist Records of the Western World, pp. 167, etc., and The Life of Nāgārjuna from Tibetan and Chinese Sources by M. Walleiser (Reprint from Asia Major, Hirth Anniversary Volume, Leipzig, pp. 15, etc.).

As to the name Narddarikā occurring in this record, it might have been an ancient streamlet or a lake at Nālandā.

TRANSLATION.

(Verse 1.) Continual salutation to the Buddha who made up his mind to emancipate living beings from the strong tangles of the world and who felt exceedingly delighted after giving (his own) body to the suppliant, whose foot-lotus is rubbed by the gods, including Indra, with the fishes (engraved) in the diadems on their heads and who is conversant with the real nature of all the categories.

(V. 2.) The illustrious, prosperous and highly glorious Yasōvarmmadēva has risen after placing his foot on the heads of all the kings and has completely removed the terrific darkness in the form of all of his foes by the diffusion of the rays of his sword. He is the celebrated protector of the world and the cause of the excitement of all the Padmini women of the earth. He shines above all in every quarter like the resplendent Sun, who has risen after spreading his rays on the tops of all the mountains and has torn asunder by the diffusion of severe rays the foe in the form of terrible darkness, who is the well-known protector of the world and cause of the blooming of all the lotuses of the earth.

(V. 3.) Mālāda was the illustrious and magnanimous son of the well-known Tikina (i.e., Tegin), who was his (Yasōvarmmadēva's) minister, the Guardian of the Frontier and Ruler of the North. He (Mālāda), the unrivalled and quick subduer of the enemies, fulfiller of the desires of the supplicants on the earth, resolute, of stainless family and the son (literally, gladdener) of Bandhumatī, was honoured by his (Yasōvarmmadēva's) great favour.

(Vv. 4—6.) Bālāditya, the great king of irresistible valour, after having vanquished all the foes and enjoyed the entire earth, erected, as if with a view to see the Kailāsa mountain surpassed, a great and extraordinary temple (prāsāda) of the illustrious son of Śuddhōdana (i.e., the Buddha) here at Nālandā. Nālandā had scholars, well-known for their (knowledge of the) sacred texts and arts, and (was full of the) heaps of the rays of the chaityas shining and bright like white clouds. She was (consequently) mocking, as it were, at all the cities of the kings who had acquired wealth by tearing asunder the temples of the great elephants surrounded by the shining black bees which were maddened by drinking the rut in the hostile lands. She had a row of vihāras, the line of whose tops touched the clouds. That (row of vihāras) was, so to say, the beautiful festoon of the earth, made by the Creator, which looked resplendent in going upwards. Nālandā had temples which were brilliant on account of the net-work of the rays of the various jewels set in them and was the pleasant abode of the learned and the virtuous Saṅgha and resembled Sumēru, the charming residence of the noble Vidyādharas.

And—

(V. 7.) (The prāsāda), after having gone round the earth and on finding, as it were, that it was a useless wandering when this world had no other structure to be conquered (surpassed), stands aloft, as if it were a column of the great fame it had won, scoffing at the lustre of the moon, disregarding the beauty of the rows of the summits of the Snow-mountain (Himālaya), soiling (i.e., throwing into the shade) the white Ganges of the sky, and then turning dumb the streams of disputants.

(V. 8.) Here, Mālāda of the above-mentioned family and fame himself brought with great devotion for the pure Lord Buddha the pious permanent grant, pure water as cool as nectar and mixed with the powder of four fragrant objects, as well as, the shining lamp, the offerings of clarified butter and curds.

(V. 9.) Under the order of the community of friars of bright intellect, great piety and learning, he again distributed daily, in a fitting manner, rice with (various) preparations, curds and copious ghee, to the four monks¹. He again gave to the assembly of monks the pure and highly fragrant water, perfumed with the four² objects (scents) and distributed daily at the antres.

(V. 10.) He (Mālāda), whose deeds were wondrous, purchased (everything of) his own here (at Nālandā) from the revered Saṅgha and gave it back (to the bhikshus) according to rites, barring the monk's robe. He also gave away to the sons of the Śākya, i.e., Buddhist monks, a common dwelling place (wherein) to spend time happily, up to and beyond Narddarikā, excepting a place for himself.¹

(V. 11.) This stainless gift has been made by him who is the brother of Nirmmalā² whose face resembled the autumnal moon. His fame is spread over the world and he has been awakened by the words of the monk Pūrṇendrasēna, who shines by his excellence.

(V. 12.) All this gift has been given with great devotion for the sake of the welfare and longevity of the parents, brother, wife, sister, son and friends of him (i.e., Mālāda) who is the sole repository of virtue. May it be approved so that the living beings might cross the fearful ocean of the world and attain the great fruit of the Wishing Tree in the form of the sacred Enlightenment (Bōdhi).

(V. 13.) As long as the Moon shines and the Sun, the lamp of the world, with his lustrous and extensive rays (sheds light), as long as this earth together with the encompassing ocean endures and the sky, which gives space, lasts, and as long as these great mountains, bearing the yoke of the world, remain, so long let this kīrti, which is pure like the Moon, whiten the circle of (all) the quarters.

(V. 14.) Whoever interferes with this gift, which has to last as long as the world endures, will, void of virtue as he is, have the dire fate of one who commits the five sins—(let him know) that the Lord Jina (the Buddha) is here ever present within, occupying the adamant seat and that the great king Bālāditya has established this command (or the image of the Buddha).³

(V. 15.) Thus, Śilachandra and the well-known Karaṇika Svāmīdatta, having placed the order of the Saṅgha on their head, without considering the weight (of responsibility), composed at once this beautiful and sublime, though simple, praśasti, although the wealth of their knowledge is small, for, will not even the cripples⁴ wish to get the fruits from the tree on the mountain by raising (their) hand?

No. 3.—THREE TAMIL INSCRIPTIONS OF LALGUDI.

By K. V. SUBRAHMANYA AIYER, B.A., M.R.A.S., OOTACAMUND.

The three inscriptions which form the subject of this article are incised on the north wall of the Saptarishīśvara temple at Lalgudi in the Trichinopoly district. For the sake of convenience, I call them A, B and C. Inscription A is dated in the year opposite to the fourth (i.e., the fifth year) of some king whose name is not given in it. It registers a gift of money made by the Pallava king Nandippōttaraiyar who fought the battle of Tellāru and gained victory in it, for burning a perpetual lamp in the temple of Mahādēva at Tiruttavatturai in Iḍaiyārru-nāḍu. The amount was received by the members of the assembly of Nallimaṇ-galam who bound themselves to bring to the temple and measure out daily (one) nāḷi of ghee.

¹ Does all this mean that Mālāda became a Buddhist monk for some time and again became a grihastha as the Burmese do even now-a-days?

⁴ The word paṇḍu is put in the dual number because the praśasti was composed by two authors.

Inscription B is dated on the day of Śadaiyam (Śatabhiskaj) corresponding to a Tuesday in the month of Dhanuṣ falling in the ninth year opposite to the fourth (i.e., the thirteenth year) of the reign of king Mārañjaḍaiyaṇ. In the body of the record the king is called Pāṇḍiyakulapati Varaguṇa-Mahārāya. The inscription states that the king gave 120 kāṣu to a certain Aṇḍaṭṭu-Vēlāṇ. This amount was finally received by the members of the assembly of Iḷamperuṅkāy-irukkai in Iḍaiyāṇru-nāḍu who bound themselves to supply towards interest, the capital remaining intact, one uṭi of ghee daily for burning a perpetual lamp in the temple. In case of default the assembly further agreed to pay a fine of 500 kāṇam (of gold). Inscription C is dated in the thirteenth year of the reign of the Chōla king Rājakēsarivarman. It states that the king's uterine sister Nāṅgai-Varaguṇa-Perumāṇār gave 30 kalaṅṇu of gold for a perpetual lamp to be burnt in the temple with one uṭi of ghee daily. The assembly of Maṇalkāl, a brahmadēya of Kālāra-kūṇṇam which was a subdivision of Vaḍagarai-Maḷa-nāḍu, received the amount given and sold a piece of land in exchange to the temple.

Before taking up the question of the date of these three inscriptions, I may point out straightway that they are written in the same hand and script and must consequently have been inscribed simultaneously. I may here add that there is another inscription in this very temple which is coeval with these records and is, apparently, written by the same hand though it refers itself to the Pallava king Nripataṅgarvarman. It has already been published in the South-Indian Inscriptions (Texts), Volume IV.¹ Inscriptions of the three kings mentioned in these records are also found in several other places. But they are all written in varying types of the Tamil script not resembling the one in which the three inscriptions under notice are incised. As these kings flourished at different periods, the records belonging to their respective reigns could not have been written in the same hand. Consequently, the Lalgudi inscriptions under examination, written as they are in the same hand, must be treated as later copies of older records made probably at the time when the temple where they are found was renovated or repaired. Palaeographically they can be assigned to the 10th century of the Christian era.

The inscription which I call C purports to belong to a ruler who is the latest among the kings mentioned in these three inscriptions. The princess referred to in it figures as the queen of Parāntaka Iḷaṅgōvēlār² in another inscription of Rājakēsarivarman which was found at Tillaisthānam in the district of Tanjore. She is also mentioned in a somewhat later record belonging to the third year of Parakēsarivarman.³ The Tillaisthānam inscription of Rājakēsarivarman, unlike the Lalgudi inscription, marks the puḷḷi or virāma as do the Takkōlam and other inscriptions of Rājakēsarivarman, i.e., Āditya I, and ought to be assigned to the same ruler. Two other epigraphs found at Tiruppalāttur⁴ refer to Teṇṇavaṇ Iḷaṅgōvēlār which is another name for Parāntaka, Iḷaṅgōvēlār. They tell us that he was also called Maṇavan Pūḍiyār. One of them mentions his queen Kaṇṇalippirāṭṭiyār also. The name Pūḍiyār given to Iḷaṅgōvēlār and the mention of his queen would show that he is identical with the Koḍumbālūr chief Bhūti-Vikramakēsari who is reported in the Mūvarkōvil inscription to have married Kaṇṇali and Varaguṇā.⁵ From a Tiruchchendurai inscription we learn that he had a daughter named Pūdi-Ādicchapiḍāriyār who was the queen of Arikulakēsari, i.e., Ariṇjaya⁶ the son of the Chōla king Parāntaka I. I have shown elsewhere¹ that Āditya I must have ascended the throne in A.D. 871. Accordingly, the Lalgudi inscription, which also belongs to him, must be assigned to A.D. 883-4, for it is dated in the 13th year of his reign.

To settle the dates of the inscriptions A and B we have to consider the way in which they are dated. We find that they give some year opposite to the fourth. This mode of dating was adopted by the Pāṇḍya king Māraṇjadaiyan alias Varaguṇa-Mahārāja, as is evidenced by several inscriptions of his reign which have already been brought to light.² Consequently, these two records also should be ascribed to the same ruler.

We have now to establish the date of the accession of Teḷḷārreṇḍa-Nandippōttavarman and of his contemporary Varaguṇa-Mahārāja I, who was the grandfather of Varaguṇavarman II and father of Śrīmāra Śrīvallabha Parachakrakōlāhala, the conqueror of Ceylon. The Mahāvamsa tells us that there was a Pāṇḍya invasion of Ceylon during the reign of Silāmēgha Sēna I (A.D. 846 to 866), in which the Pāṇḍya king came off completely victorious and took possession of the capital and carried away a large amount of booty, though he eventually restored the Sinhalese kingdom to its rightful king. The only early Pāṇḍya king who is known from the Siṅgaṇaṇūr plates to have invaded and conquered Ceylon is Śrīmāra. From the facts recorded in the Mahāvamsa it can be gathered that his reign covered the last 3 years of the rule of Dappula and probably commenced in the year 840 and ended in 862 A.D. when his eldest son Varaguṇavarman II succeeded him. Śrīmāra's predecessor, namely, Varaguṇa-Mahārāja I, must have reigned prior to 840 A.D. His latest regnal year so far known from inscriptions is the seventeenth and we can reasonably state that his rule over the Pāṇḍya country may have extended from 823 to 840 A.D. though it is not impossible that it might have commenced a few years earlier. The date of Varaguṇa I can approximately be ascertained from the chronology of the Pallava kings from Nandivarman Pallavamalla to Aparājita. The Vēlūrpālaiyam plates give us the genealogy of the latter Pallavas for three generations commencing from Nandivarman II Pallavamalla.³ They state that Pallavamalla's son was Dantivarman and that the latter's son was Nandivarman III. This information is supplemented by the Bāhūr plates which tell us that Dantivarman's son was Nandivarman III, who had for his queen the Rāshtrakūṭa princess Śaṅkhā, and that the latter's son was Nripatuṅga.⁴ It is to be noted that in these plates no mention is made of Kampavarman and the name Kampavarman was not borne by any one of the above mentioned kings. If Kampavarman was a lineal descendant of Nandivarman Pallavamalla, we might tentatively assume that he was another, and, perhaps, the younger son of Nandivarman III. The name Nandi-Kampēsvara given to the temple at Śōlapuram may have been called after Kampavarman, the son of Nandivarman.⁵ It may be pointed out here that both the palaeographical peculiarities of Kampavarman's epigraphs and the genealogy furnished by the Vēlūrpālaiyam as well as the Bāhūr plates do not admit of any place for him before Nripatuṅga. It will be shown presently that he cannot be made the immediate successor of Nripatuṅga. Therefore the only inference that could be drawn regarding Kampavarman is that he must have been a joint ruler with either Nripatuṅga or Aparājita

⁴ Ep. Ind., Vol. XVIII, pp. 5 ff.

or with both.¹ Therefore, it is needless to take his reign into consideration to determine the period when the later Pallavas ruled. From the Āmbūr inscription dated in the 26th year of the reign of Nripatuṅga, we learn that the Gaṅga king Prithivīpati I was a subordinate of that Pallava king.² And since it is recorded in the Udayēndiram plates that this very Gaṅga king was an ally of the Pallava king Aparājita and fought under his standard and secured victory for him in the battle of Śrīpurambiyam against Varaguṇa (II),³ it might be said that Aparājita⁴ was the immediate successor of Nripatuṅga. That he was the last Pallava ruler of Kāñchī is known from the Tiruvālaṅgādu plates which report that the Chōla king Āditya I killed him and took possession of his kingdom.⁵ This event, we have reasons to believe, must have taken place before A.D. 891, for it is stated in an inscription at Tirumālpuram near Conjeeveram that the village of Śirriyārrūr in Maṇaiyil-nādu was granted as a dēvadāna and as a brahmadēya in the 21st year of Tonḍaimān-Ārrūr-tuṅjiṇa-uḍaiyār i.e., Āditya I.⁶ If we allow at least two years for his settlement in the newly conquered country, it may be said that Āditya I killed Aparājita in about A.D. 888. The latest dates furnished by the stone inscriptions for Nandivarman Pallavamalla, Dantivarman, Nandivarman, the victor of Tellāru, i.e., Nandivarman III, Nripatuṅga and Aparājita are 65, 52, 22, 26 and 18, respectively. With the help of these, supplemented to a certain extent by the light of contemporary history, we shall try to settle the chronology of the later Pallava sovereigns. Keeping A.D. 888 as the last year of Aparājita and deducting from it 18, which is the highest regnal year known for him,⁷ we get A.D. 870 for his accession. This date must, therefore, be the year when his predecessor Nripatuṅga ceased to rule. Since the latest regnal year so far found for him is 26,⁸ we get A.D. 844 for his accession. It may be noted here that the initial year of Nripatuṅga's reign cannot be earlier than this date because in a record of his 18th year the Pāṇḍya king Varaguṇa-Mahārāja (II) figures as donor⁹ and we know for certain that that king's accession took place in A.D. 862.¹⁰ We have to take A.D. 844 as the last year of Nripatuṅga's father Nandivarman III, the victor of Tellāru. The latest regnal year found for him in the inscriptions mentioning the victory of Tellāru is 22.¹¹ But there is a possibility of his having reigned longer.¹² If he had a reign of 22 years, his accession would have to be placed in A.D. 822. This cannot be the case for, we learn from the Western-Gaṅga grants that the Rāshtrakūṭa king Gōvinda III and the Pallava king Nandivarman—both crowned kings themselves—fastened the fillet of royalty on the forehead of Śivamāra II Saigoṭṭa.¹³ The last year of Gōvinda

¹ In a Tamil inscription of Uttaramallūr of the time of Kampavarman dated in his 15th year whose text (No. 325) is published in the S. I. I. (Texts), Vol. VI, the donor is Seyya-Aparājita, and he is called Perumāṇadigaḷ-adiyāṇ.

III being A.D. 814¹ this event should have occurred before that date, say about A.D. 812. Accordingly, we have to take back the year of accession of Nandivarman III by ten years. Looking at the fact that Nandivarman Pallavamalla and his son Dantivarman had unusually long reigns, extending to 65 and 51 years,² it seems improbable that Nandivarman III, who succeeded Dantivarman, could have ruled long and, since the last year of his reign cannot be taken earlier than A.D. 844, it will be safe to assume that his rule lasted from A.D. 812 to 844. Deducting 51 from 812 and 65 from the balance we get the initial dates of Dantivarman and Nandivarman Pallavamalla. Their reigns should, therefore, have extended from A.D. 761 to 812 and A.D. 696 to 761. The chronology as worked out from these facts and others noted later on is shown below :—

Pāṇḍya kings.	Pallava kings.	Rāshtrakūṭas.	Western Gāṅgas.	Chōlas.
Māra-varman	Nandivarman II Pallavamalla
Neḍuñjaḍaiyaṇ
Rājasimha	Dantivarman	Gōvinda III	Śivamāra II
Varaṅga I	Nandivarman III
Śrīmāra	Nripataṅga	Amoghavarsha I	Prithvīpati I
Varaṅga II	Aparājita
				Āditya I

Since Nandivarman, the victor of Tellāru, figures as donor in the Lalgudi inscription A dated in the 5th year, evidently of the reign of Mārañjaḍaiyaṇ alias Varaṅga-Mahārāja I, that record cannot be placed earlier than A.D. 812 or later than A.D. 844 which are the initial and closing years of Nandivarman III. From this, it is clear that the date of accession of Varaṅga I cannot be taken to an earlier date than A.D. 807. We have already shown that it cannot be later than A.D. 823. In order to arrive at the actual year of accession of Varaṅga I, the astronomical details furnished in two inscriptions, which are both dated in 4+9th (i.e., the 13th) year of Mārañjaḍaiyaṇ (i.e., Varaṅga-Mahārāja I), may be considered here. One of them is the inscription B edited below and the other is from Tiruveḷḷarai.³ While the former gives the astronomical combination (a) Dhanus, Tuesday and the nakshatra Śatabhishaj, the latter furnishes another set of combinations, viz., (b) Vṛiśchika, Monday and the nakshatra Āśvini in the same year, i.e., 13th. Between A.D. 800 and 852, though there are several years in which each set of combinations occurred separately, the following table gives such of those years only as contained both sets of details, the days corresponding to the combinations (a) and (b), the initial and fifth years of the king :—

² No. 666 of the Madras Epigraphical collection for 1922 and No. 262 of the same collection for 1924.

³ The details of date furnished in this record have been calculated by the late Mr. R. Sewell for Varaṅga I in Ep. Ind., Vol. XI, p. 233. But as it is dated in the 9th year opposite to the fourth it is clearly a record of Varaṅga I.

No.	Year.	Equivalents of (a) and (b).	Initial year.	5th year.
1	814	(a) Tuesday, 19th Dec. (b) Monday, 30th Novr.	801 A.D. .	806 A.D.
2	817	(a) Tuesday, 15th Dec. (b) Monday, 26th Octr.	804 . .	809
3	824	(a) Tuesday, 29th Novr. (b) Monday, 7th Novr. f.d.n. 71	811 . .	816
4	831	(a) Tuesday, 12th Dec. f.d.n. 38 (b) Monday, 20th Novr. f.d.n. 01	818 . .	823
5	834	(a) Tuesday, 8th Dec. f.d.n. 56 (b) Monday, 16th Novr. f.d.n. 70	821 . .	826
6	841	(a) Tuesday, 22nd Novr. f.d.n. 23 (b) Monday, 31st Octr. f.d.n. 94	828 . .	833
7	851	(a) Tuesday, 1st Dec. (b) Monday, 9th Novr.	838 . .	843

Since the first two give the fifth year equivalents A.D. 806 and 809 they have to be rejected for the reason that Tellāṟṟeṇḍa Nandivarman cannot figure in them. Similarly, Nos. 6 and 7 have to be abandoned because, according to them, the 17th year would work out to be A.D. 845 and 855, both of which are later than the lower limit fixed for Varaguna I. The only three that could be adopted are Nos. 3, 4 and 5 which would give us, for the king's succession, the years A.D. 811, 818 and 821. Even out of these, Nos. 4 and 5 may be given up as their adoption would narrow the possible longer range of reigns of both Varaguna I and Śrīmāra. It seems that the only probable date for Varaguna's accession is A.D. 811. This conclusion is not entirely without grounds. The internal evidence furnished in the Āṇamalai inscription, Madras Museum Plates and the Vālvikuḍi grant shows that A.D. 770 must fall somewhere between the 3rd and 17th years of the reign of Parāntaka Neḍuñjaḍaiyaṇ to whose time they all belong¹. After Parāntaka and before Varaguna I, only a single king intervened, i.e., Rājasimha and his reign, as at present known, was an eventless one. Therefore, the period of forty-one years from A.D. 770 to A.D. 811 is more than sufficient to cover the rest of the reign of Parāntaka Neḍuñjaḍaiyaṇ from the time of the Āṇamalai record and the eventless rule of Rājasimha. For these reasons, therefore, adopting A.D. 811 as the date of accession of Varaguna I, we may assign A.D. 816 to inscription A and A.D. 824 to B.

Of the places mentioned in these inscriptions, many can be easily identified. Tiruttavatturai² must be Lalgudi itself because, the inscriptions are found there. Maṇakkāl³ is the homonymous village in the Trichinopoly district and Eḍayattimaṅgalam, not far from Lalgudi, might have been the principal place in Iḍaiyāṟṟu-nāḍu in which Tiruttavatturai is said to have been situated. I am not able to trace Nallimaṅgalam and Ilamperuṅgāy-irukkai. Tellāṟu, where Nandivarman gained a victory, is in the Wandiwash taluk of the North Arcot district.

² There is also a village, called Tiruttavatturaikkattalai in the Trichinopoly District.

³ A village of this name is in Uḍaiyārpālayam taluk, but this cannot be the one referred to in these inscriptions.

Hail! Prosperity! In the year opposite to 4, Nandippōttaraiyar, who fought the battle of Teḷḷāṇṇu and gained victory (in it), gave 60 old kāṣu to (the temple of) Mahādēva at Tiruttavatturai in Idaiyāṇṇu-nāḍu. Having received from the temple of the Mahādēva of Tiruttavatturai these sixty kāṣu,² we, (the members of) the assembly of Nallimaṅgalam in this nāḍu, bound ourselves to take (to the temple) and measure out daily (one) nāli of ghee by the measure called nārāya-nāli, for burning one perpetual lamp as long as the sun and moon last. If we, (the members of) the assembly of Nallimaṅgalam, fail (in our undertaking) and do not measure out (the ghee) to the temple of the Mahādēva of Tiruttavatturai, all the Māhēśvaras attached to the central shrine⁴ shall levy on (us, the members of) the assembly, as a body or individually, a fine of two hundred and sixteen kāṇam and this shall be paid to the royal officers⁵ inclusive of the *nilaikkalam*⁶ whichever they desire. Thus we, (the members of) the assembly of Nallimaṅgalam, had this (edict) incised. This (charity) shall be under the protection of all the Forty-Eight Thousand Māhēśvaras.

Hail! Prosperity! In the 9th year opposite to the 4th year of (the reign of) king Māraṇjaḍaiyaṇ corresponding to the day of Śadaiyam, i.e., Satabhishaj (falling) on a Tuesday in the month of Dhanu, king Māraṇjaḍaiyaṇ alias Pāṇḍyakulapati Varaguna-Mahārāya gave into the hands of Aṇḍa-nāṭṭu-Vēḷāṇ 120 old kāsū for burning day and night, till the sun and the moon last, two perpetual lamps in the temple of the Mahādēva at Tiruttavatturai in Iḍaiyārru-nāḍu. TRANSLATION.

Hail ! Prosperity ! In the 13th year of (the reign of) king Rājakēsarivarman, Naṅgai-Varaṇa-perumāṇār, the illustrious uterine sister of the Chōḷa king (Śōḷapperumāṇaḍigal), gave 30 (kaḷaṇḷu of) gold for burning a perpetual lamp daily with (one) uri of ghee as long as the sun and the moon last, in the temple of Īśvara-bhaṭṭāraka at Tiruttavatturai. The (members of the) assembly of Maṇaṛkāḷ, a brahmāḍēya on the western portion of Kalāra-kku(kū)ṛṇam which was a sub-division of Vaḍakarai-Maḷa-nāḍu received these thirty kaḷaṇḷu of gold. The following are the lands which they sold for the 30 kaḷaṇḷu of gold to the temple of Perumāṇaḍigal at Tiruttavatturai for (burning) a sacred lamp :—

Four mā and (one) kāṇi of our land, situated to the east of the mound called Maṇamuṭṭi-ttiḍal; three mā and (one) kāṇi (of land) to the north of the vet̥tappēru in Śīrugavūr; two mā of land to the east of the canal at the boundary of Śīrugavūr; and half a mā (of land) to the east of the vet̥tappēru which we ourselves presented to *Talaivāyan*¹—in all, half a vēli comprised in four taḍi. Having received the 30 kaḷaṇḷu of gold, we, (the members of) Maṇaṛkāḷ, sold these ten śey of land, free from taxes, and drew up the sale-deed expressing therein that all kinds of vet̥ti, irai, echchōru, vediṇai and other (taxes) inclusive of śennirvet̥ti, shall not be paid (on these lands), and conveyed the same to (the temple of) the Mahādēva at Tiruttavatturai. If there arises any trouble in respect of these lands, we bind ourselves to rectify the same. In case of our failure to rectify, we agree to pay, either as a body or individually, a fine of kāṇam of gold to the royal officers inclusive of the nilaikkaḷam as may be desired by the several Māhēśvaras existing at the time of default. Thus (agreeing), we, (the members of) the assembly of Maṇaṛkāḷ, sold the said ten śey of land, drew up the sale-deed and handed over (possession) to (the temple of) the Mahādēva at Tiruttavatturai. This (charity) shall be under the protection of all the Māhēśvaras (viz.) the Forty-Eight Thousand.

No. 4.—A SUNGA INSCRIPTION FROM AYODHYA.

BY RAI BAHADUR DAYA RAM SAHNI, M.A.

This inscription was first brought to the notice of scholars by Babu Jagannath Das Ratnakara of Ayōdhyā. It is inscribed on a flat stone slab at the foot of the eastern entrance of the Samādhi of Bābā Sangat Bakhsh, which is reputed to have been built in the time of Nawāb Shujā-ud-daula. This shrine with the connected buildings is situated in the western portion of a large walled enclosure known as Rānopālī, about a mile distant from the town of Ayōdhyā on the road leading to Fyzābād.

¹ May also mean 'for the head-slucce'.

The inscription consists of two lines. The first line appears to be complete, though it is difficult to say that the portion of the slab hidden under the sill of the doorframe does not contain one or more lines. Of the second line, the left hand portion is completely effaced, though some slight traces that have survived make it certain that the whole of this portion was originally inscribed. The characters are Brāhmī which show considerable resemblance with the inscriptions of the Northern Kshatrapas and some archaic votive inscriptions from Mathurā. The characteristics of this type are discussed in Bühler's *Indian Palaeography*¹ and these are the equalization of all the upper verticals except in la, the constant use of the serif and of the angular forms of gha, ja, pa, pha, ma, la, sha and ha. Another peculiarity of the Brāhmī script of this period is the slightly bent base line of the letter na. The inscription under discussion exhibits all these peculiarities in a marked degree and should be classed with those mentioned above. The document is written in correct Sanskrit and is thus one of the few early inscriptions recorded in that language. The only grammatical mistake noticed in it is the use of Dharmarājñā in place of Dharmarājēna.

The document has already been dealt with by several scholars, the first of whom was the discoverer, Babu Jagannath Das Ratnākara² himself. This article is written in Hindi and is accompanied by an inked impression of the inscription together with an improved hand-copy prepared by Mr. Ratnakara himself. Mahāmahōpādhyāya Pandit Gaurishankar Hirachand Ojha of the Rājputāna Museum, Ajmēr, dealt with the document in the same volume of the Nāgarī-Prachārīnī Patrikā,³ as well as in his report of that Museum for the year ending 31st March 1924, pp. 1-2. Mr. K. P. Jayaswal has devoted three articles to the subject.⁴ Other scholars, who have dealt with this inscription, are Mr. N. K. Bhattasali,⁵ Dr. A. Bannerji-Śāstri⁶ and Mr. N. G. Majumdar.⁷ The inscription has, however, not yet been dealt with in any of the official publications of the Archaeological Department and my object in editing it in this journal is to bring together the various views expressed by scholars on this important inscription and to record my own impressions of the same.

The inscription records the erection of a shrine or other memorial in honour of Phalgudēva, the father of the Dharmarāja Dhana (°dēva, °bhūti, etc.), Lord of Kōsala, son of Kauśikī, the sixth of the Sēnāpati Pushyamitra, who had performed the Āśvamedha twice.

The inscription is important for more reasons than one. It is the first inscription on stone or metal yet discovered which mentions the name of Pushyamitra, the celebrated founder of the Śunga dynasty. Hitherto he was only known from literary sources, e.g., the Divyāvadāna (XXIX), Patañjali's Mahābhāṣya (III-2-123), where reference is made to a sacrifice performed by him, some of the Purāṇas, Kālidāsa's drama, the Mālavikāgnimitra, etc. The passages referring to the Śunga dynasty in the Viṣṇu and the Bhāgavata Purāṇas are quoted in parallel columns in Pargiter's The Purāṇa Text of the Dynasties of the Kali Age, pp. 30-33. From the extract from the former we learn that the dynasty was founded by the General Pushyamitra after he had slain the last Maurya king Bṛhadratha. His son was Agnimitra, who was succeeded by Vasujyēṣṭha. The latter's son was Vasumitra and his son Andhraka. He was succeeded by Pulindaka and the latter by Yōmēgha. He was followed by Vajramitra. He was followed by Samābhāga. The latter's son was Dēvabhūmi.

Kālidāsa's drama mentions three of these kings, i.e., the founder, his son Agnimitra and the latter's son Vasumitra and further informs us that Pushyamitra instituted a Rājasūya sacrifice and appointed Vasumitra as the guardian of the sacrificial horse, which in accordance with religious custom was to wander at will for a year and that the horse was seized by the cavalry of the Yavanas, whom Vasumitra successfully defeated and brought the horse back to his grandfather's sacrifice. The Rājasūya sacrifice was performed by universal monarchs and the sacrifice of this name mentioned in the drama of Kālidāsa may have been the one performed by Pushyamitra on the occasion of his coronation. The Ayōdhyā inscription, however, records the performance of two Āsvamedha sacrifices by Pushyamitra. It is at present not known what necessitated the institution of the second sacrifice by him. It is to the credit of Pushyamitra that he revived this sacrifice which had long been in abeyance owing to Aśoka's commandments prohibiting the immolation of animals even for sacrifices. Mr. Jayaswal¹ thinks that the Āsvamedha sacrifice mentioned in an inscription discovered at Nagari also referred to Pushyamitra. It is true that such an inscription was found by Dr. D. R. Bhandarkar when he was engaged in his excavations at Nagari.² It has, however, been found by Rai Bahadur Gaurishankar H. Ojha³ to be only a fragment of the Ghōsūṇḍī inscription and to supply the missing portion of the first line of that record. Thus restored, the epigraph shows that the son of Gajāyana and Pārāsari mentioned in it was one Sarvatāta, who had performed a horse-sacrifice, but makes no mention of Pushyamitra.

The Ayōdhyā inscription is also interesting as it establishes the fact that the correct name of the founder of the Śuṅga dynasty was Pushyamitra, not Pushpamitra as found in some of the Sanskrit works. Dr. Bühler had already been led to this conclusion⁴ by the form Pūsamitta which he found in certain Jaina Prakrit gāthās, but epigraphical evidence was wanting.

The interpretation of this short record is rendered difficult by the uncertainty about the exact significance of the words Pushyamitrasya shashṭhēna and I am afraid the difficulty will not be solved until another inscription of the Śuṅga dynasty containing the genealogy of these kings comes to light. I propose here to recapitulate what has been said by the previous writers before I record my views on the point. Pandit Ratnakara rendered these words as the sixth descendant, brother or son of Pushyamitra and as with the last alternative, Phalgudēva would become identical with Pushyamitra, he thought he could overcome the difficulty by supplying a word like pūjyasya between the words pituh and Phalgudēvasya and interpret the expression as "in honour of Phalgudēva, a teacher or deity of his father." Rai Bahadur Gaurishankar Hirachand Ojha favoured the meaning "sixth in descent from Pushyamitra," while Mr. Jayaswal preferred to interpret the expression as the sixth brother of Pushyamitra, making Phalgudēva the father of Pushyamitra. This view was endorsed by Dr. A. Banerji-Sāstri, who rejected "the descent theory" for the reason that if Dhana[dēva] was sixth in descent from Pushyamitra and evidently proud of it, his name would have ended with the word mitra. This, as Mr. N. K. Bhattasali⁵ has shown, is no real obstacle as the names of several of the kings of the Śuṅga dynasty as given in the Purāṇas and found on their coins have different endings. Dr. Sāstri also emphasises the fact that in the Smṛitis 'descent' is signified by the termination of the 5th case, not the 6th as is the case in the expression under discussion. Mr. N. G. Majumdar has hunted up a parallel expression in verse 88 of the 16th Sarga of the Raghuvaṃśa. The expression in question is pañchamaṃ Takshakasya, which is interpreted by three commentators as meaning "grandson of grandson of Takshaka." Mr. Majumdar therefore sees no difficulty in interpreting Pushyamitrasya shashṭhaḥ as "sixth in descent from Pushyamitra." In his third article¹ on this inscription, however, Mr. Jayaswal points out that the example from the Raghuvaṃśa referred to above is actually interpreted by Mallinātha as meaning the fifth son of Takshaka. 'The sixth of Pushyamitra' in the Ayōdhyā inscription should therefore mean the sixth son of Pushyamitra. As, however, this interpretation would make Phalgudēva identical with Pushyamitra, he proposes to read Dharmarājñā in the 2nd line as Dharmarājñī, and to compound it with the following word pituḥ. He thus construes the record as meaning that Dhanadēva, the sixth son of Pushyamitra, erected a house in honour of Phalgudēva, the father of his lawful queen.

It will be seen from the above that the only parallel expression found by the ingenuity of Mr. Majumdar is capable of two divergent interpretations. As has been pointed out by Dr. Banerji-Śāstri, the inscriptions so far known fail to throw light on the question and he is right in stating that the established custom in epigraphical records is either to name the generations in succession or not at all and that it is not usual to mention a distant stage by omitting the intervening ones. One such example I have indeed secured in verse 44 of the Vaṃśāvalī of the Chambā rājās,² where we find the words "Mēruvarman was the 10th from Jayastambha" after the nine intervening ancestors of Mēruvarman have been duly referred to in direct succession. Even here, however, the vibhakti employed is the fifth, not the sixth or possessive case. An example of this kind with the sixth case ending occurs in the Raghuvaṃśa, Sarga 6, verse 29 :—

त्वमेव कल्याणि तयोस्तृतीया

"Thou alone, fortunate lady, art fit to be their third."

Sunandā, the attendant of Indumatī, while narrating the achievements of the prince of the Āṅgas observes that the goddesses Śrī and Sarasvatī, though naturally hostile to each other, together reside in him in peace, thus indicating the propriety of her union with him. It will be observed that though the grammatical construction in this case is the same as in the doubtful expression being discussed, the sense of descent is out of the question. Whether more exact parallels both in form and sense will or will not be found in the vast field of Sanskrit literature, I am unable to say. It seems, however, exceedingly difficult to disregard clear palaeographic evidence and to group this record with the other known documents of the early Śunga period. I would, therefore, with Pandit Ratnakara, supply a word like purushēṇa after shashṭhēṇa and translate "by the sixth descendant of Pushyamitra". It will be seen from the facsimile that only the first portion of the name of the chief who had this inscription engraved is preserved. Previous writers have restored it as Dhanadēva and Mr. N. G. Majumdar identifies him with a chief of that name whose coins have been found round about Ayōdhyā. Be the name, however, what it may, the inscription has established beyond doubt the fact that Ayōdhyā formed part of the Śunga Empire as late as the date of the inscription, which, on palaeographic grounds must be assigned to about the 1st century A.D.

मैरुवर्मान् अशस्तम्बादशमोऽयम्.

[The chief point of interest in the inscription is the use of the genitive case in the expression Pushyamītrasya shashthēna. According to Pāṇini (तस्य पूरणे ष्ट्, नाम्नादसंख्यादिर्मट् and षट्कृतिकतिपयचतुरां युक्, Ashṭādhyāyī, V. ii. 48, 49 and 51), the suffix ṣaṭ (with the augments maṭ and thuk) is used in the sense of pūraṇa, i.e., येन संख्या संख्यानं पूर्यते संपद्यते स तस्याः पूरणः (Kāśikā on the Ashṭādhyāyī, V. ii. 48), 'that with which a number is completed'. So षष्ठः means षष्ठां पूरणः and पञ्चमः, पञ्चमां पूरणः, and so on. In other words, this suffix does not signify any order of descent or kinship and षष्ठेन of the inscription, taken by itself, would simply mean 'by the sixth.' The genitive case, however, would show the sambandha or relationship which this person had with Pushyamitra, for that is one of the chief functions of this vibhakti. To express 'order of descent' the ablative case should be employed, as a reference to the comments on अन्धारादितरते दिक्शब्दाश्चत्तरपदाजाहियुक्ते (Ashṭādhyāyī, II. iii. 29) would show. We generally say अयमस्मात् पूर्वः, अयमस्मादुत्तरः. This will be made clearer by the following quotation given in the Śabdakalpādruma under the word sapinda :—

“ पञ्चमात् सप्तमादूर्ध्वं मादतः पितुतः क्रमात् ।

सपिण्डता निवर्त्तत सर्ववर्णेष्वयं विधिः ॥ ” इत्युदाहृतचतुर्नारदवचनम् ॥

That pañchamī and not shashthī is generally used in such cases is further shown by the Vaiṣṇu-Purāṇa (Amśa III, Adhyāya X) and the Garuḍa-Purāṇa (Adhyāya LXV) as quoted in the Śabdakalpādruma under the word vivāha.

“ पञ्चमीं मातृपक्षाच्च पितृपक्षाच्च सप्तमीं ” and

“ पञ्चमात् सप्तमादूर्ध्वं मादतः पितृतस्तथा ”

The Yājñavalkya-Smṛiti, Āchār-ādhyāya, (Trivandrum Sanskrit Series) would also support the said statement for it says :—

अरोनिशीं भ्रातृमतींसमानर्षिगोत्रजाम् ।

पञ्चमीं सप्तमीं चैव मादतः पितृतस्तथा ॥ ५३॥

Therefore, if it was the order of descent which the author of the inscription had in view, he would have said पुष्यमित्रात् and not पुष्यमित्रस्य. Consequently, it becomes evident that if any word is to be supplied, it should be पुत्रेण and not पुत्रेण. In consideration of these points, Mallinātha seems to be quite correct in taking पञ्चमं तत्तकस्य (Raghu., XVI, 88) in the sense of 'the fifth son of Takshaka.' To get the meaning attributed to this passage by Chāritravardhana or by Dīnā-karaṇas, we should expect the ablative case or the form तत्तकात् instead. We say तस्य but not तस्मात् पुत्रः, पौत्रः, प्रपौत्रो वा. Here, we should remember that the Vāyu-Purāṇa gives the reading Pushyamitra-sūtās=ch=āshṭau which strongly supports the interpretation of षष्ठेन as 'by the sixth son'. Besides, there is no inherent impossibility in the version given in this Purāṇa which would necessitate a summary rejection of it. Nor does it imply a sense which is wrong or impossible. Accordingly, the meaning 'by the sixth son of Pushyamitra' seems to be preferable.

As to the two new references given in this article one (त्वमेव कल्याणि तयोस्तृतीया) has no bearing whatsoever on the point under consideration. The other, which is a quotation from the Varaṇasī of the rulers of Chambā, would only support the prati-paksha or the opposite view in that it uses pañchamī and not shashthī to express the order of descent of Mēruvarman.—Ed.]

No. 5.—PAHARPUR COPPER-PLATE GRANT OF THE [GUPTA] YEAR 159.

By K. N. DIKSHIT, M.A., CALCUTTA.

This copper-plate was found by me during the excavation of the great temple at Pāhārpur in the Badalgachi Thana of the Rājshāhi District in Bengal on the 29th November, 1927. It was recovered from the debris that had accumulated on the north-east side of the circumambulatory passage on the second terrace. From the circumstances of the discovery it was apparent that it could not have been originally buried or deposited under the floor of the passage, but was probably brought down from a higher level along with the bricks and mud. It is to be regretted that owing to the inadvertence of the labourer a hole has been made in the upper right hand corner of it and some letters in the three lines at the end of the first side and the first few lines of the second side have become obscure. The left hand margin has also been damaged at places, owing to which circumstance some of the letters written there have disappeared. The plate when dug out was covered with a thick coating of rust and verdigris but has subsequently been cleaned by chemical treatment and proves to have been fairly well preserved. It is rectangular¹ in shape, measures $7\frac{1}{4}'' \times 4\frac{1}{2}''$ and weighs 29 tōlās.

The characters in which the inscription under notice is written belong to the northern class of alphabets of the 5th century A.D. and closely resemble those of the grants 3 and 4 of the Dāmōdarpur² copper-plates of the time of Budhagupta. The formation of the medial ā by the addition of a stroke at the right lower end of the letters ga, ṇa, dha, ba, ra and śa may be noted. The terminal m is written slightly below the top line as will be seen in -ādhikaraṇam (l. 1), °chatushtayam (l. 8), Sam (l. 20), and phalam (l. 24). The rare letter ḍha occurs in ādharāpa (l. 15). The forms of the conjunct letters ksha (as in *Dakṣiṇā*³ l. 1), hma (as in *Brāhma*⁴ ll. 3, 12 and 17) and ñchchhya (as in apariñchchhya l. 20) are noteworthy. The numerical signs for 100, 50, 9, 7, 4 and 1 are to be found in ll. 19 to 21. The unusual form of 9 in l. 20, seems to be the prototype of the modern Bengali sign for that digit.

As regards orthography, the doubling of k before ya in *°dinārikkyā*⁵ (ll. 4 and 11), and before r in *°vikṛayō*⁶ (ll. 5 and 12), and *°kkramēṇ=ā*⁷ (ll. 5 and 17) requires notice. The consonants k, ṇ, d, ṇ and y are doubled after r, as in *°ārkkā*⁸ (l. 20), *°anuvārṇṇy=ā*⁹ (l. 3), *°nirddishṭr*¹⁰ (l. 18), *°sarmmā*¹¹ (ll. 4 and 12), °sarmmata (l. 17), *°āryyā*¹² (l. 1), *°bhāryyā*¹³ (ll. 4, 12 and 17), *°āchāryyā*¹⁴ (ll. 6 and 13) and in *dharmma*¹⁵ and °dharmmēṇa in lines 16 and 19. The v symbol is used for b in *°samudcya-vāhy-ā*¹⁶ (ll. 4 and 11) and *°vrahubhir*¹⁷ (l. 23).

The language of the inscription is Sanskrit. With the exception of the five imprecatory verses at the end, the whole record is in prose. The rules of sandhi have been very often violated, specially in respect of a visarga at the end of a word, as in *°āyuktakaḥ āryyā*¹⁸ (l. 1), *°Gōhālūṭaḥ arddha*¹⁹ (l. 9), *°vīrōdhaḥ guṇas*²⁰ (l. 16), *kulyavāpa adhyarddhō*²¹ (l. 19). *°Nātha-sarmmā etad*²² in ll. 4 and 12 is also wrong grammatically.

The document under examination registers the purchase of a fallow state land by a private individual for charitable purposes. The Dhānāidaha,²³ the Dāmōdarpur,²⁴ the Farid.

pur¹ and the Ghugrāhāti² copper-plates also record similar transactions, the difference being that in the present case the rate at which one kulyavāpa of land was sold was 2 dināras whereas it was 3 in the case of the Dāmōdarpur grants and 4 in the case of the Faridpur ones. As Nos. 3 and 4 of the Dāmōdarpur plates are almost co-eval with the present plate, the difference in the rates mentioned in the two cases must be due to local causes. Probably the quality of the land available was inferior or there was an abundance of fallow land in the locality around Pāhārpur. It was, apparently, owing to such considerations that the 5 drōṇavāpas ($=\frac{5}{3}$ of a kulyavāpa approximately) were, as stated in No. 2 of the Dāmōdarpur plates, granted in lieu of a deposit of 2 dināras, when the rate was 3 dināras to a *kulyavāpa*³.

The grant under notice records that a Brāhmaṇa and his wife deposited 3 dināras or gold coins with the city council (adhishṭhān-ādīkaraṇa) to secure 1 kulyavāpa and 4 drōṇavāpas of land situated at 4 different villages all lying in the Dakṣiṇāmāsaka-vīṭhī and Nāgiraṭṭa-maṇḍala for the maintenance of worship with sandal, incense, flowers, lamps, etc., of the divine arhats at the viḥāra of Vaṭa-Gōhālī which was presided over by the disciples and the disciples of disciples of the Nigrantha preceptor (Śramaṇ-ācārya) Guhanandin, belonging to the Pañcha-stūpa section (nikāya) of Benares. The donation of a Brāhmaṇa couple for the worship of Jinās, as recorded here, is noteworthy for it bespeaks of the religious toleration of the people of the period.

The Jaina viḥāra at Vaṭa-Gōhālī mentioned in this inscription, it would appear, must have stood at the original site of the present temple at Pāhārpur. The boundaries of the site are partly situated within the limits of the village of Gōālbbhiṭā to the north-west and the mound where the temple has been unearthed was pointed out to Dr. Buchanan Hamilton in 1807 as 'Gōālbbhiṭār Pāhār' (the eminence of Gōālbbhiṭā). The identification of Gōālbbhiṭā with the ancient Vaṭa-Gōhālī easily suggests itself as the stem Gōhālī is substantially identical with Gōāl. Few relics of the Jaina faith⁴ have come to light during the excavations at Pāhārpur, but numerous Brahmanical and Buddhist bas-reliefs and terra-cotta plaques, dating from the late Gupta times, have been discovered. In the ninth and the succeeding centuries of the Christian era, the Pāhārpur temple was known as the great Buddhist viḥāra of king Dharmapāla at Sōmapura, the latter place being recognised in the modern village of Ōmpur, a mile to the south of the mound.

Regarding the prevalence of Jainism in Bengal, the Chinese traveller Hiuen Tsiang, who visited the country of Puṇḍravardhana in the second quarter of the seventh century, records that⁵ "there are some 100 Dēva temples, where sectaries of different schools congregate. The naked Nirgranthas are the most numerous." This statement can now be corroborated by the evidence of the present document which speaks of a viḥāra presided over by a succession of Nigrantha monks, at least 150 years previous to the Chinese pilgrim's visit to the locality. In connection with the name Guhanandin it is worthy of note that the names of the Digambara Ācāryas of the third and fourth centuries of the Christian era, such as Yaśōnandin, Jayanandin, Kumāranandin, etc., as is shown by the lists, generally end in nandin. Puṇḍravardhana is mentioned as one of the seats of Jaina pontiffs, beginning with Gupti-Gupta or Vśākha-ācāryya, the disciple of Bhadrabāhu II and Guhanandin must have been one of them.

³ [If the rate was 3 dināras to a kulyavāpa, the price of 5 drōṇavāpas, i.e., $\frac{5}{3}$ of a kulyavāpa must be 2 dināras.—Ed.]

⁵ Bal, Buddhist Records of the Western World, Vol. II, p. 195.

The procedure followed in ancient Bengal¹ in respect of applications for the purchase and donation of land, as elaborated in the present case, is interesting. The intending donors approached the District Officer (*Ayuktaka*²) and the City Council (Adhishṭhān-ādhipikarāṇa) headed by the venerable Mayor (Nagara-śrēṣṭhin) and requested them for sale of land for charitable purposes at the prescribed rate. The Officer and the Council referred the case, in the first instance, to the committee of record-keepers consisting of one chief record-keeper and at least five other record-keepers.³ The latter after making necessary enquiries submitted their report with recommendation in favour of the transaction. The authorities thereupon realised the necessary amount from the applicants and intimated the elders and other householders belonging to the villages concerned to measure out the land and make it over to the applicants for the purpose in view.

The land measure adopted in this grant was based on the measures of grain as is the case in the Dāmōdarpur and other grants. The kulyavāpa denoted as much land as could be sown with a kulya measure of grain. A kulya, according to various ancient authorities, was equivalent to 8 drōṇas=32 āḍhakas=128 prasthas. Other land measures found in the present record are drōṇavāpa and āḍhavāpa.

The date of the grant as given in the inscription is Sam 159 Māgha di 7 and, apparently, refers to the Gupta era, which was in use in Bengal when the charter was issued. As such, it would fall in January 479, A.D. The mention of Paramabhaṭṭāraka in l. 16 can only be taken to refer to the reigning sovereign whose name is not mentioned. The Dāmōdarpur plates show that the kingdom of Budhagupta included the bhukti of Puṇḍravardhana at this period and it is not improbable that the unspecified reigning sovereign at the time of the issue of the copper-plate was Budhagupta.

Regarding the identification of the places mentioned in the plate, Puṇḍravardhana has been identified by General Cunningham⁴ with the extensive ruins known as 'Mahāsthān-gaṇh,' 8 miles north of the town of Bogra. Vata-Gōhālī, as stated above, may be the modern Gōālbiṭā. I am unable to identify the other localities.

Ant.*, Vol. XXXIX, pp. 200 and 204.—Ed.]⁴ This expression is further characterised as pañcha-stūpa-kula-nikāyika in l. 13 of the text. The word pañcha-nikāyika is familiar to the students of Buddhism in the sense of 'one who knows the five Nikāyas'. In the present case, however, the word stūpa or stūpa-kula occurring between pañcha and nikāyika and its connection with a Jaina preceptor would seem to show that Nikāya must be taken here in the sense of a branch (sākhā) of the Jaina Āchāryas. Pañcha-stūpa may, in that case, be a place name from which a particular branch of the Jaina Āchāryas may have been known.⁵ † is redundant here.⁶ The engraver first wrote drōṇavāpam, but finding his mistake later, appears to have made an attempt at correction. The erased letters drōṇa are clearly visible below kulya.⁷ Some letters after this are lost.⁸ [The text of the Dāmōdarour plates would suggest that avadhāraṇayā was preceded by the names of the record-keepers which were put in the genitive plural.—Ed.]⁹ Read 'bāhu'.¹⁰ Read 'yushmām'.¹¹ [Compare the reading in l. 6 above.—Ed.]¹² Read Arhatām.

Abstract of Contents.

Nātha-śarmma. & Brāhmaṇa and Rāmī, his wife, approach the District Officer¹⁰ and the City-Council headed by the Mayor (Nagara-Śrēṣṭhī) at Puṇḍravardhana with the request that in accordance with the procedure prevalent in the locality, they may be allowed to deposit three dināras in return for 1½ kulyavāpas of land distributed among 4 different villages to be endowed in perpetuity for the maintenance of requisites of the worship of Arhats such as sandal, incense, flower,¹¹ lamps, etc., and for the construction of a resting place at the vikāra of the Jaina preceptor Guhanandī at Vaṭa-Gōhālī. The details of the lands required were:—Fields measuring 4, 4 and 2½ drōṇavāpas, respectively, at the villages of Prishṭhima-pōttaka, Gōshāṭapuñjaka and Nitva-Gōhālī; home-stead land measuring 1½ drōṇavāpas at Vaṭa-Gōhālī.

² This expression can be compared with ashṭakā-navaka-nalābhy occurring in the Dāmōdarpur Plates. The present practice in parts of Bengal and Assam is to measure out the lands by nalas or reeds of a definite measurement in cubits, which differ in different localities. The shatka, ashṭaka and navaka as referred to the nalas may therefore mean nalas of so many cubits (i.e., 6, 8 or 9).

³ [Dr. N. P. Chakravarti connects it with the Bengali word hichhā meaning to select or choose.—Ed.]

⁴ Read krimir.^o [But krimir. in is also allowed.—Ed.] ⁵ Read °bhakubhir^o ⁶ Read bhūmis.

¹¹ The mention of flowers in the worship of the Arhats or Jinas indicates a point of difference between the practice of the old Nigrantha and the modern Digambara Jinas. The latter do not permit the use of flowers in as much as the insects likely to be present in the flowers may be destroyed thereby. The Svētāmbaras, however, have no objection to this practice.

The Council, in the first instance, consulted the Board of Record-Keepers presided over by Divākaranandin, who pointed out that there was no objection to the transaction, especially as, besides bringing some revenue to the treasury, it would entitle His Majesty to a sixth share of the religious merit accruing from the endowment. The Council, therefore, decided to accept the offer of the Brāhmaṇa couple and recorded the transfer of land.

The village elders of the respective villages at which the lands in question were situated, were then asked by the Council to mark out the boundaries of the lands thus granted and maintain them in perpetuity. The date was the 7th day of Māgha, in the [Gupta] year 159. The usual imprecatory verses follow.

No. 6.—KOTAVUMACHGI INSCRIPTION OF VIKRAMADITYA V.

By R. S. PANCHAMUKHI, M.A., OOTACAMUND.

Kōṭavumachgi is a village about 14 miles to the north-east of Gadag, the headquarters of the Gadag Taluk of the Dharwar District. The inscription, which is edited below, is engraved on a stone-tablet set up in front of the temple of Kalamēśvara which is standing there. The inscribed portion of the stone covers an area of 6' 2" by 1' 11" and is in a state of very good preservation. The inscription is neatly written in the Kanarese script of about the 11th century A.D. As regards palaeography, the chief points requiring notice are : (i) the lingual ḍ and ḷ are not clearly distinguished from the dental d ; compare for example chhandav-aḷamkāra (l. 25), paṁneraḍu (ll. 17, 29), kūṇḍe (l. 33), paḍiyale (l. 34), etc. ; (ii) the u-sign is indicated in three different ways, viz., (1) by a short hook at the bottom of the letter as in Puligere (l. 7), paṁneraḍu (ll. 17, 29), vondu (l. 36), etc., (2) by a mark with a downward bend by the side of the letter, as in kuḍise kuḍe (l. 13), maṭṭar-aḷḍu (ll. 18, 20), kuruva-gey (l. 28), etc., and (3) by a long right side stroke shooting from the bottom of the letter as in Pushya śuddha (l. 10), nivēśanaṁgaḷu (l. 46) ; (iii) the e-sign is given, sometimes, below the letter and resembles the u-sign, as in Puligere (l. 7) or in belgoḍe (l. 13). In one case it is represented by a horizontal stroke at the bottom of the letter, as in Belvola (l. 7) ; (iv) the final m is used in two places, i.e., in ll. 52 and 54 and is shaped like the secondary ma. Excepting the three imprecatory verses in Sanskrit, which come at the end, the record is written in Kanarese prose of the mediæval period. The words ghaḷige (l. 13) (which is a tadbhava of ghaṭikā) and chhaṭṭa (l. 24) (which is the tadbhava of chhātra) are of lexical interest ; so also, kuruva-gey (l. 28), kūṇḍe (l. 33), paḍiyale (l. 34) and pārikhāya (l. 41). In orthography the only point which requires mention here is the use of r and ḷ in place of r and ḷ as in mūru (l. 33) and eḷu-kōṭi (l. 48) respectively.

After svastī, the inscription opens with the usual prelude announcing that Tribhuvana-malla Vikramādityadēva (V) was reigning at the time and that Belvola-Three Hundred and Puligere-Three Hundred were administered by his subordinate Daṇḍanāyaka Kēśavayya whom it describes as ' the obtainer of the five great śabdās, the Mahāsāmantādhipati, the great and fierce commander-in-chief of armies and a favourite hero of his master ' (ll. 1-8). After giving the date (ll. 9-11) it records that Daṇḍanāyaka Kēśavayya granted, with the king's permission, the village Ummachige situated in Nareyanṅal-Twelve to Maunara Śrīdhara-Bhaṭṭa of Rōṇa (ll. 9-13). The latter, in his turn, entrusted it to the 104 Mahājanas of the place specifying certain conditions to be observed by them. Lines 14-32 mention the income of certain estates under different headings, namely, the maintenance of the temples and temple servants, the emoluments of Bhaṭṭa and Akkariga,¹ the stipends of students and the feeding of the elḷkōṭi ascetics.² Then follow the specifications of land and taxes levied on festive occasions such as upanayana, marriage, vedic sacrifices, Bādube,³ Kārapuṇṇime and Dīpālige, with a remark that they should be enjoyed by the Ūroḍeya (ll. 33-36). It further states (ll. 36-43) that fines on certain crimes it has specified, incomes derived from spoils, daśavandha (daśabandha) of escheat property of persons dying intestate and taxes on musical instruments such as kaḷe and maddale are to be utilised for repairs, etc., of the tank called Dēyimgere at Ummachige. Lines 43-46 contain the stipulation that the Mahājanas should protect the estates and maintain the gift even in adverse circumstances. The record was written by Gōvinda-Bhaṭṭa and engraved by Chāvōja (l. 54).

The inscription is dated the Śaka year 934, the 8th day of the bright half of the month Pushya, Paridhāvin saṁvatsara, Sunday and the Uttarāyana-saṁkrānti. These details do not appear to be quite regular. Except for the week day, the date corresponds, according to Swamikannu Pillai's Ephemeris, to Tuesday, 23rd December A.D. 1012.⁴

The inscription is important as it reveals the name of a new subordinate of Vikramāditya, viz., the Mahāsāmantādhipati Kēśavayya who was administering the two Six-Hundreds at the time of the grant. A record⁵ secured from Hosūr in the Gadag Taluk dated in A.D. 1029 refers to the Mahāsāmantādhipati Kēśavarasa in the passage "Mahāsāmantādhipati mahāprachanda-danda-nāyakam śrīmat-Kēśavarasara tadagra-tanūjam [||*] Svasti samadhigata-paṁcha-mahāśabda mahā-sandhi-vigraha-ādhipati mahāprachanda-dandanāyakam śrī-Vāvaṇarasara-eradarunūrumam nāluttam-ire " as the father of Vāvaṇarasa who was then governing the two Six-Hundreds under Jayasimha, the younger brother and successor of Vikramāditya V. It is this Vāvaṇarasa who figures as a subordinate of Jayasimha II in the Hoṭṭūr inscription of Śaka 959 (A.D. 1037) and the Hulgūr inscription of Śaka 960 (A.D. 1038).⁶ Kēśavarasa appears to have succeeded *Śōbbhanarasa*⁷ in the administration of the two districts, sometime after A.D. 1004 when, according to a record⁸ of Yeliśirūr, the latter was still the governor. We know from the Nūlgund inscription⁹ of Taila II dated in Śaka 904 that Kannapa was appointed as the governor of Bejvola-300 and Purigere-300 by Taila II and that he was succeeded by his brother

² Elḷkōṭi ascetics are probably the devotees of Śiva in the form of Mallāri who with an army of 'seven crores' destroyed the demons Malla and his brother. See for the story Imp. Gaz., Vol. XVII, pp. 30-31.

³ Bādube is a Kanarese name for the new-moon day of Vaiśākha, Kārapuṇṇime for the full-moon day of Jyēṣṭha and Dīpālige for the new-moon day of Āśvina. For Kanarese names of all the full-moon days and new moon days of a year, see Dr. Fleet's note in Ep. Ind., Vol. V, pp. 11 ff.

⁴ An inscription of Vikramāditya V bearing the Śaka date 93[5] is noticed in Appendix B (No. 722) of the Madras Epigraphical Report for 1923. But the reading of the last figure is doubtful. (see ibid p. 101). A record from Karadihalli in the Mysore State (Ep. Carn., Vol. VII, Sk. 287) belonging to the same king is dated clearly Śaka 933, Paridhāvin, Pushya, Śu. 13, Monday (=Monday, the 29th December A.D. 1012) which may be regarded as his latest date known so far. The present inscription is thus six days earlier than the latest epigraph of Vikramāditya V.

⁵ No. 110 of the Bombay Karnatak collection for 1926-27.

⁶ See above Vol. XVI, pp. 75 ff. and pp. 332 ff. In the published text of the former record, the name appears to have been wrongly read as Chāvānarasa.

⁷ The relationship between Śōbbhanarasa and Kēśavarasa is not disclosed by inscriptions.

Śōbhanarasa in the government of those provinces in about A.D. 982. It is likely that Taila II, after overthrowing the Gaṅga chief Pañchaladēva shortly after A.D. 975, invested Kannapa¹ with the governorship of the two districts as stated in the above record. Thus we get, after the downfall of the Gaṅgas, a succession of rulers of the Belvola and Purigere provinces in the 10th and 11th centuries of the Christian era, namely Kannapa, Śōbhanarasa, Kōśavarasa and Vāvaṇarasa.

From this inscription it can be gathered that Ummachige was a great educational centre in the beginning of the 11th century A.D. and maintained a college, with a free hostel attached to it, where instruction was imparted in several sciences. It allots a share of fifty mattar with one house-site to the Bhaṭṭa who could expound Nyāsa and Prabhākara and twenty-five mattar to the pupils studying those subjects, while twenty-five mattar and one house-site only are given to the Akkariḡa (man of letters) named Nāgadēsiga who could teach and compose works on mathematics, astronomy, prosody, poetics, etc., and was well versed in grammar. It is enjoined that this Nāgadēsiga should teach his pupils feeding them once a day and supplying them with a cloth every year. These two vṛttis are respectively called bhaṭṭa-vṛtti and akkariga-vṛtti in the record. It is interesting to note that the Bhaṭṭa and his pupils are the recipients of separate shares in the village whereas the Akkariḡa, who enjoys a lesser income, has also to feed and clothe his pupils. From this distinction in the two vṛttis, it is apparent that the curriculum of education was divided into two sections of which one was intended for specialisation in śāstras and the other meant for the general needs of a student. Among the subjects taught, *Nyāsa*² was, possibly, be a work on grammar; Prabhākara is a work of the Mīmāṃsā school of philosophy started by Prabhākara.

The record is interesting from another point of view also. It gives us a peep into the system of village administration in ancient times in Karnāṭaka. From the details of the grant given in ll. 14-41, it seems that the proper conduct of worship in temples, the imparting of education, the feeding of ascetics, the supply of water to the village people and the punishment of criminals were the chief items which claimed the immediate attention of the administrator. Regarding the last item, it is worthy of note that the inscription mentions a number of crimes taken cognisance of by the authorities and the penalties imposed in each case.³ They are: (1) for abusing one another (baḡḡade), 2 paṇas; (2) for assault (baḡḡade), 12 paṇas; (3) for drawing out the dagger (surige-giḡade), 3 gadyāṇas—a *māṇi*⁴ who ascends the processional maṇḍapa with weapons is excepted. (4) for stabbing (iridaḡe), 12 gadyāṇas and (5) for a bachelor (māṇi) committing adultery (māṇi sūle-gēḡade), 3 gadyāṇas. It is stated that the fines thus realised together with the spoils (karante), one-tenth (daśavaṇḡha)⁵ of the ešcheat property (aputrika-dravya)⁶ and taxes on musical instruments must be utilised for the upkeep and repairs of the tank called Dēyimgere mentioned above. The Ūroḡeya, i.e., the village officer was authorised to change the amount ¹ Hebbal inscription of A.D. 975 mentions a certain Kannapayya as the Perggaḡe of Bhujagabbarasi, the grandmother of the Gaṅga chief Mārasiṇha II. See Ep. Ind., Vol. IV, pp. 370 ff.

² References to Nyāsa in Sanskrit literature show that it must be a grammatical work. See Catalogus Catalogorum by T. Aufrecht, p. 312 and Ind. Ant., Vols. XLIV, p. 275 and XLV, p. 25 and Māgha, II, 122.

³ See Historical Sketches of the Ancient Dekhan by K. V. S. Aiyer, pp. 326 ff. and T. A. S., Vol. III, pp. 191 ff.

⁴ Māṇi is a brahmachārin who does service in the temple. See S. I. I., Vol. III, part iii, p. 227. In line 35, however, it is used in the sense of upanyāna.

⁵ Daśavaṇḡha means a tenth part; it does not seem to have been used here in its technical sense of land or of revenue granted as a compensation for the construction, repairs, etc., of a tank, well or channel. See Ind. Ant., Vol. XXX, p. 107, note 12 and page 267, note 2.

⁶ According to Manusmṛiti, IX 183, aputrika-dravya was the state property. In this case, however, it belonged to Śrīdhara-Bhaṭṭa who set apart one-tenth of it for the purpose specified.

of fines in respect of certain crimes according to the caste of the offender. This is in keeping with the laws laid down in the Dharmaśāstra.¹

Of the places mentioned in the inscription, Rōṇa is the modern Ron, the headquarters of the Ron Taluk in the Dharwar District. Nareyaṁgal which was the chief town of Nareyaṁgal-12, a sub-division in the Belvola-300 province, is the modern Naregal situated at a distance of 10 miles from Ron. Ummachige is evidently identical with Kōṭavumachgi where the record was found.

Translation.

(Ll. 1-4) Hail ! While the reign of the glorious Tribhuvanamalla Vikramādityadēva, the refuge of the whole world, the lord of Fortune and Earth, the Mahārājādhirāja, the Paramēśvara, the Paramabhaṭṭāraka, the decoration of the race of Satyāśraya, an ornament of the Chālukyas, was increasing in prosperity,

(Ll. 5-8) while the chief of great feudatories, the august General who had attained the five mahāśabdās, a man of might causing pleasure to his master, the glorious Daṇḍanāyaka Kēśavayya was administering with enjoyment of pleasant conversation, the Belvola-Three Hundred and Puligeṛe-Three Hundred (3 rovinces),

(Ll. 8-13) (Kēśavayya), after requesting the glorious Tribhuvanamalladēva, made (the village) Ummachiḡe situated in Nareyaṁgal-Twelve into an agrahāra on sarvanamasya tenure along with full and complete rights of enjoyment of all the properties and obtaining it (from him) together with the royal charter, the white umbrella and ghaḷige (i.e., an assembly hall)², caused it to be granted to Maunara Śrīdharabhaṭṭa of Rōṇa, on the eighth day of the bright half of Pushya, Sunday, the Uttarāyana-samkrānti, in the Śaka year 934 corresponding to the cyclic year Paridhāvi.

(Ll. 13-16) That Śrīdharabhaṭṭa, after thus getting it, entrusted the village to the hundred and four Mahājanas with the conditions of enjoyment by himself, the Mahājanas and the people (of the village) ; the extents of land and house-sites for meeting the expenses of charity, other auxiliary objects and for grants for services (mānya) are as follows :—

(Ll. 16-22) Six mattar to god Sōmēśvara, twelve mattar to (the temple of) Bhāgiyabbēśvara³; twelve mattar to the feeding house of elkōḷi ascetics ; five mattar and one house(-site) to Āychagā-vuṇḍa's temple ; five mattar and one house(-site) to Ādityadēva ; five mattar and one house(-site) to (the goddess) Beṭṭada-Bhagavati ; five mattar and one house(-site) to god Nārāyaṇa—these fifty mattar of land in all and the house-sites attached to them must be enjoyed by the bachelors of the family of Bendeyabhaṭṭāra, following the course of the *naishṭhika*⁴ ascetics.

³ The temple was perhaps named after Bhāgalabbe, the mother of Vikramāditya V.

⁴ Naishṭhika is one who lives in the house of his preceptor as a brahmachārīn throughout his life. He is described as follows in the Garuḍapurāṇa :—

नैष्ठिकी ब्रह्मचारी च ब्रह्मचार्यसन्निधौ । तदभावेऽस्य तनयै परम्यां यैश्चानरिऽपि वा ॥

इमेन विधिना ईदं साधयेदितिर्द्वयः । ब्रह्मलीकमवाप्नोति न चेह आयते पुनः ॥

(Ll. 23-32) Twelve mattar and one house(-site) to the deity Mārakabbe Bhaṭāri, fifty mattar and one house(-site) towards bhaṭṭa-vṛtti to be enjoyed in return for performing the duties of expounding Nyāsa and Prabhākara, twenty-five mattar to the pupils, twenty-five mattar and one house(-site) as akkariga-vṛtti to Nāgadēsiga who was able to compose and expound (the works on) mathematics, astronomy, prosody, poetics and and who had a knowledge of sounds (i.e., Vyākaraṇa), to be utilised for his daily requirements in virtue of his services of teaching his pupils, feeding them once a day and supplying (them) with a cloth every year; twelve mattar and one house(-site) for (the supply of) tender cocoanuts¹; six mattar and one house(-site) for (the supply of) vessels² for abhishēka; eight mattar of land and one house(-site) for barbers; twelve mattar and one house(-site) for drummers; (one) hundred mattar and two house(-sites) to the feeding-house of those that manage by guṇaśāsana.³ Thus in all three hundred mattar (were set apart) for charity and auxiliary expenses.

(Ll. 33-36) Two hundred mattar as mānya land and three house(-sites)—eight hands broad and twenty-five hands long each—to the Uroḍeyz. Moreover, the Uroḍya (shall get these following) taxes permanently :—a kūṇḍe for the open space of an oil-press; the reaper of a door-frame for every set of wooden materials (for building purposes)⁴; one gadyāṇa for a vedic sacrifice; five paṇas for, two paṇas for a marriage; one paṇa on the occasion of upanayana, one gadyāṇa severally on the three pūrvas of Bālube, Kārapuṇiṇa and Dipāṇige.

(Ll. 36-43) The incomes accruing from the following fines, viz., two paṇas for abusing one another, twelve paṇas for beating; three gadyāṇas for drawing out the dagger, twelve gadyāṇas for stabbing—(they) may change (the amount of) fine considering the distinction of caste—three gadyāṇas, in case a bachelor commits adultery; three gadyāṇas on the occasion of purification ceremony—except when a māṇi gets up a processional maṇḍapa with weapons⁵; that obtained as spoils (after a raid), one-tenth (daśavandha) of the escheat property of persons dying intestate and the taxes on (musical instruments) kaḷe and maddaḷe (the drum); all these shall go to (the tank called) Dēyīṅgere. He who neglects this shall incur the sin of breaking the tank. A house-site including pārikhāya, etc., (was set apart). Those that keep a cowpen (koṭṭa), the gāmuṇḍas and the chief men of the low caste (must get) one house(-site) each.

(Ll. 43-46) The five hundred mattar (of land) and the respective sites (attached to them), (granted) as mānya, and for the purposes of feeding house, charity and auxiliary gifts, the Mahājanas shall protect and cause to be enjoyed as long as the moon, the sun and the stars (exist), however adverse the times may be.

(Ll. 46-48) Those that fail (to carry this out) shall incur the five great sins consequent upon the killing at Kurukshētra and Vāraṇāsi, of seven crores of Brahmins, seven crores of ascetics and seven crores of tawny cows.

(Ll. 48-53) Three imprecatory verses.

(L. 54) Gōvindabhaṭṭa wrote (this); and Chāvōja engraved. (May there be) fortune and great prosperity.

² The word used here is gaṇantige which is a tadbhava of the Sanskrit word gaṇantikā. It means a small water-jar with a hole in the bottom from which the water drops upon a līṅga.

³ The exact significance of this word is not clear.

⁴ For the meaning of the word muffu, see Kittel's Kanarese Dictionary, p. 1263.

⁵ This parenthetical clause evidently provides an exception to the fine stated above for drawing out the sword.

No. 7.—THE HATHIGUMPHA INSCRIPTION OF KHARAVELA.

By K. P. JAYASWAL, Esq., M.A., BARRISTER AT-LAW, PATNA, AND PROFESSOR R. D. BANERJI¹, M.A., BENARES HINDU UNIVERSITY.

This inscription is incised partly in front and partly on the roof of the Hāthīgumphā, an artificial cave, on the southern face of the Udayagiri, a low range of hills situated about three miles from Bhuvaneśvar in the Purī district of Orissa. It was noticed for the first time by Stirling in 1825² and was published by Prinsep from an eye-copy prepared by Kittoe in 1837.³ In 1877 Cunningham published a tracing in the first volume of the Corpus Inscriptionum Indicarum.⁴ In 1880 the late Raja Rajendra Lala Mitra published another version of this inscription.⁵ About this time a cast of this inscription was prepared and taken to the Indian Museum, Calcutta. The first reliable version of the record was issued from the able pen of the late Dr. Bhagvanlal Indraji in 1885.⁶ In 1895 and 1898 the late Dr. Bühler proposed certain corrections.⁷ The first inked impression was taken by the late Dr. T. Bloch in 1906 and sent to Prof. Kielhorn from whom it passed on to the late Dr. J. F. Fleet, who published two short notes proposing certain corrections in the reading of the 16th line.⁸ In the same year Prof. Lüders of Berlin published a summary of this inscription.⁹ In 1913 RDB¹⁰, examined portions of this record at the request of KPJ., and in 1917 he prepared two inked impressions at the request of the late Dr. V. A. Smith and KPJ.,¹⁰ one of which was published in the Journal of the Bihar and Orissa Research Society,¹¹ and the second sent to Dr. F. W. Thomas, the then editor of this journal. Soon after the publication of the text, KPJ. went to the cave and prepared a revised text of his readings from the rock itself and published the same in 1918 in the Journal of the Bihar and Orissa Research Society.¹² Sir Edward Gait, the then Lieutenant-Governor of Bihār and Orissa, who was greatly interested in the decipherment of the inscription, arranged a deputation of RDB., the then Superintendent of the Western Circle of the Archaeological Survey of India, to go with KPJ. and in 1919, we both examined the entire inscription on the spot. In the meantime a cast of the inscription was prepared at the suggestion of KPJ. by the Government of Bihār and Orissa. The order of Sir Edward Gait in this respect was executed by the late Mr. H. Panday of the Archaeological Survey Department who had accompanied KPJ. formerly and had become familiar with the inscription and the problems connected with it. This cast is now preserved in the Patna Museum. It is as successful a copy as the present condition of the original allowed it to be. Two impressions on paper were also taken for the Patna Museum. With the help of these materials the study was carried on by KPJ. at Patna. In 1924 both of us again went over the corrections. In 1927 KPJ. published the results of his further studies in the Journal of the Bihar and Orissa Research Society with new plates prepared from the paper impressions preserved in the Patna Museum.¹ In 1928 some further notes were published by him in the same journal.² We have again conjointly examined the cast and the impressions and effected a few important improvements in the reading and explanation as offered below. Amongst notable contributions on the problems connected with the inscription, we refer to the articles by Dr. Sten Konow³ and Dr. F. W. Thomas.⁴ We have to thank our friend Prof. Anant Sadashiv Altekar for the help he has rendered to us in preparing the notes for this edition.

The Hāthīgumphā appears to have been a natural cavern which was later on converted into a temple or residence. The roof consists of a huge boulder, and the inscription begins on the southern face but is continued up to a place where the stone has become actually the roof of the cave. The last eight or nine lines occur on a sloping surface where it is difficult either to read or copy them. Both of us had to recline partly on our backs to read the portion from the rock. Below the inscription the walls of the natural cavern have been chiselled straight and at places are as beautifully polished as those of the Barābar caves. Near the floor there are sundry rock-cut partitions which do not appear to have been regular walls as they do not go up to the roof. In the dressed and polished portion of the side or the wall of the cave there are a number of later inscriptions (of about the 10th or the 11th century A.D.) many of which contain proper names which are not of any historical interest.⁵ They prove, however, that the cave was visited by pilgrims up to the 10th century and therefore it must have been considered some sort of a sacred shrine. It seems reasonable to expect that the great Jaina king Khāravela inscribed the record of his reign at a place which was holy in his eyes. Is it impossible that this is the place where Mahāvīra had preached the Jaina religion in Kālīṅga, because this inscription proves that the place was included in Kālīṅga at that time and there is a distinct reference to the preaching of Jainism in its 14th line? The bed of the cave is full of sand in front and unless it is excavated its original form cannot be determined. Three stone pillars have lately been put up in front of the cave, to protect the inscription from the effects of the weather, under the orders of Government. The Hāthīgumphā stands at right angles to the Svargapurī and Mañchapurī on its left and the Sarpa cave on its right. There are several small and large excavations on the top of the boulder which forms the roof of the cave. As a whole the entire record has been very carefully inscribed. In two places only letters have been left out. In l. 14 the letter ya in arakaṃyate was left out and incised between ll. 14 and 15, its position in l. 14 being indicated by a kākapada. Two other letters sa and ha (?) are to be found in the interspaces immediately after ya but cannot be connected with any word in l. 14.

As regards orthography the inscription presents very few peculiarities. Ligatures are carefully avoided and the only instances where we meet with them are Kaṇha-beṃṇā- (l. 4), Bamhaṇṇāṇam (l. 9) and -vinīśrito (l. 17). In the majority of cases the nasals are replaced by anusvāra excepting the places where they are used either as initials or medials. The initial forms are to be seen in -ṇāvakehi (l. 14) and ṇaninam (l. 15) and the medial forms in °raṇṇi° (l. 15) and in the ligature in Kaṇha-beṃṇā- (l. 4). The use of the cerebral nasal is erratic and in the majority of cases the dental has been used but the cerebral is rather rare and is to be met with in samputa- (l. 2) and guṇa- (l. 17) only. With the exception of two cases all the sibilants are dental. These two cases are the cerebral in -deṣa- (l. 11) and the palatal in -vinīśrito

(l. 17). The writing seems to have been done by three different hands, and it is possibly on this account that the forms of the characters sometimes differ. The first part of the inscription was written on a carefully dressed surface but after the 4th and 5th lines the surface was undressed; and towards the end of all the lines after the 5th there are numerous chisel-marks which make the decipherment extremely difficult.

The language of the inscription is Prakrit. The use of ra, the affix o at the end of the nominatives of masculine stems ending in a, and the absence of palatal śa show that it is not Māgadhī or any eastern dialect of it. Throughout the inscription the dental has practically replaced all other sibilants. The doubling of consonants, even when necessary, has been omitted. The cerebralisation of dentals is also to be seen, as in paṭhāpayati (l. 3). There is also an attempt to approach classical Sanskrit in certain cases, e.g., Māhāmeghavāhanena (l. 1) and vaṁdāpayati (l. 12), etc. Throughout the record the liquifaction of consonants is absent. This would indicate that the record was composed by a man from Western India who wrote in a literary dialect. It is quite possible that the record was composed by a Jaina monk from Gujaraṭ or the Mahārāṣṭra who might have been brought into Kalinga by King Khāravela for the purpose mentioned in l. 16. The language of the record is a very near approach to the canonical Pali. But, as in Jaina Śaurasēnī, tha in this dialect becomes dha, cf. padhame (l. 3), radha° (l. 4), vitadha (l. 5), Goradhagiri- (l. 7), Madhuram (l. 8), Bharadhavasa- (l. 10), Utarāpadha- (l. 11), but not in all cases, cf. Pithumḍa- (l. 11). The extraordinary form chavuthe (l. 5) is a graphic form of chavuthe, but Prakrit chaṇ becomes cho in Choyatthi (l. 16) which is a later Prakrit form of chaturhashṭhi. So also Sanskrit tvṛitam becomes turiyam (l. 16) instead of turiam. Perhaps turitam was the intermediate form but the change of ta into ya instead of a is exceptional.¹

The characters of the inscription show great variety. Among the vowels, the initial forms of a, ā, i, e, o are to be found in it. The medial ā is denoted by a perfectly horizontal line in many cases as well as by a slanting stroke, as in paṭhāpayati (l. 4) and -samuthāpitāhi (l. 15). The medial form of the long i shows two diverging slanting strokes, in -sarira- (l. 2) and two converging curved strokes in kīḍitā (l. 2). Among consonants two different forms of kha are noticeable, Khāravele° (l. 1) and lekha° (l. 2) in which the triangle at the bottom is either present or absent. Two different forms of ga are present, the angular Maurya form as in nagarim (l. 5), and the broad-backed Kushāṇa form, as in Kaling-ā° (l. 1). Three forms of gha are clear:—(1) the Maurya form with a circular bottom, (2) the transitional form in which the only side of the curve has turned into a right angle, cf. -oghāṭitam (l. 6), and (3) the complete second century form in which, though the length of the left-hand side vertical is not reduced, the lower part of the letter consists of two right angles instead of a curve. Two different forms of ta are to be found: the Maurya, as in hita-, -ti-vasa- (l. 6) and the later, as in °pateye (l. 6). In the case of da also we find two forms: the Maurya, as in pāmdarasa- (l. 2) and the later, as in °dāti (l. 9). Three different forms can be distinguished in the case of pa and ma:—(1) the Maurya form, as in paṭhāpayati and pachhima- (l. 4); (2) the transitional form, as in -patinā (l. 1), -kāṇipānāhi (l. 5), maṭuka- (l. 7), Madhuram (l. 8), etc.; (3) the later form with angles fully developed in the place of curves as in kapa-rukhe (l. 9), apayāto (l. 8), -samāja° (l. 5), and Satamam (l. 7). It should be noted that the Kushāṇa form of ma is altogether wanting in this inscription. So also in the case of ha we find the Maurya form in -sahasehi and haya- (l. 4), the transitional form in Mahārāja° and Māhāmeghavāhane° (l. 1) and the angular form in -vavahāra- (l. 2). The general duct of the writing shows that the Hāthīgumpha inscription was inscribed at a time when the length of the verticals had not begun to decrease and the curves had just begun to become angularised. Therefore, this inscription belongs to the same period as the earliest inscription from Mathurā edited by Bühler¹, and it cannot be earlier than the beginning of the 2nd century B.C. or later than that of the 1st century B.C. For na, ṇa and other letters a reference is invited to the detailed palaeographical analysis by RDB, elsewhere.²

There are two symbols, one over the other at the beginning, and one at the end of the record. At the beginning the first symbol looks like a crown. KPJ. identifies it with the Vaddha-maṅgala.³ The second is the Svastika. The last symbol is the Sacred Tree within a square enclosure or railing. There is an elaborate system of spacing in this record, the larger, corresponding to full stops. There is space before almost every proper name. The smaller spaces indicate clauses of a sentence.

It has been proved by repeated examinations of the rock that there is no date in a Maurya era in the 16th line of this inscription, as supposed by the late Bhagvanlal Indraji and ourselves formerly. The date will therefore depend upon synchronisms. The first of these synchronisms is with Sātakarṇi. It is now absolutely certain that the family name of the dynasty founded by Simuka is Sātavāhana and not Sātakarṇi.⁴ The Nānāghāt inscriptions supply the label Rāyā Simuka-Sātavāhana for the statue of Simuka. There were more kings than one of the name of Sātakarṇi, and the first king of that name is called Siri Sātakarṇi both on his coins and in the label on his statue at Nānāghāt. Subsequent Sātakarṇis with whose names we meet in epigraphical records added their metronymics to distinguish themselves from their predecessors, e.g., Gautamīputra Sātakarṇi, Vāsishṭhīputra Śiva-Śrī Sātakarṇi and Gautamīputra Śrī Yajña Sātakarṇi. It is therefore evident that this record refers to a Sātakarṇi who was a contemporary king in the Western regions. The name is not to be taken as a reference to an unidentified dynastic title. And the only king of this dynasty who can safely be ascribed to the period when Khāravela was ruling is Śrī Sātakarṇi, the husband of Nāyanikā, and not Gautamīputra or Śiva-Śrī or Śrī Yajña. About Gautamīputra Sātakarṇi it is to be observed that the long record in cave No. 3 in the Pāṇḍulēnā group does not mention the king or the country of Kālīṅga, and thereby proves that Kālīṅga or Orissa was not included in his conquests and, very probably also, that he did not come in close contact with Khāravela or any other king of Kālīṅga, though the Amarāvati and China inscriptions of Pulumāvi and Śrī Yajña prove definitely that the whole of Kālīṅga had passed under their dominion.⁵ The other kings of the name of Sātakarṇi are excluded as being, inter alia, too late to be Khāravela's contemporaries. According to the Purāṇic lists Sātakarṇi II comes 36 years after Sātakarṇi I. RDB. has proved that the dissentient view about the Hāthīgumphā inscription being later than the Nānāghāt records is untenable.⁶ Therefore the Sātakarṇi of the Hāthīgumphā inscription must be Sātakarṇi I. The statement in l. 6 about Khāravela's subjugation of the Raṭhikas and Bhojakas shows that up to the 4th year of the reign of Khāravela they existed as separate states, as in the time of Aśoka, but subsequently these states must have been swallowed up by the Sātavāhanas. Therefore, Khāravela's conflict with Sātakarṇi must have taken place before the formation of the Sātavāhana empire covering the whole of Marāṭhī-speaking (e.g., Barhādī, Khāndeśī, Northern Marāṭhī and Koṅkaṇī) area.

The reference in the 6th line to the canal from Tanasuliya-vāta, which was excavated in the year 103 of King Nanda, will fix the upper limit of Khāravela's time, like the reference to Muriya-kāla (the time of Muriya in l. 16). Chālukya Vikramāditya VI in the Yeḍarāve inscription is said to have established his Chālukya era after abolishing the eras of Vikramāditya, Nanda and Śaka. "Having said 'Why should the glory of the Kings Vikramāditya and Nanda be a hindrance any longer?', he, with a loudly uttered command, abolished that (era) which has the name of Śaka, and made that (era) which has the Chālukya counting".¹ Again, we have the definite datum that Alberuni found in use in his time an era with the initial year 458 B.C., which goes back to the time of the first Nanda king (Nanda Vardhana).² The year 103 of the Nanda era would correspond to 355 B.C. when the Tanasuliya canal, which Khāravela extended to the capital in the 5th year of his reign, was originally excavated. If we take this Nanda to be the last Nanda, Khāravela would be referring to (325 B.C.—103=) c. 222 B.C. and not to any later year. But we have something more definite in the next datum, namely, the contemporaneity with Bahasatimitra. In line 12 Khāravela reaches the Sugamgiya palace, i.e., the famous Maurya palace at Pāṭaliputra mentioned in the Mudrārākṣasa.³ Bahasatimitra is expressly called the King of Magadha. Now we know from coins that Bahasatimitra and Agnimitra issued coins of the same type. This much we may take as certain that the time of Bahasatimitra, whosoever he may be, is the first half of the 2nd century B.C.⁴ Āshāḍhasēna, who belonged to the royal family of Adhichchhatrā, describes himself as the maternal uncle of King Bahasatimitra in the Pabhosā inscription,⁵ and Āshāḍhasēna dates his record in the 10th year of Odraka,⁶ whom KPJ. has identified with a king of the Śuṅga dynasty. Bahasatimitra's coins have been found at Kosam (Kauśāmbī)⁷ which was a state on the borders of Magadha. The characters of the coins agree with those of the Hāthīgumpha inscription.⁸ As Bahasatimitra does not occur in the list of the Mauryan kings and as his connection with the family of Odraka is indicated by the Pabhosā record, we are justified in taking him as one of the early Śuṅgas before Odraka, the fifth king of the line. In other words, Khāravela's contemporary Bahasatimitra would belong to a period between 188 B.C. and c. 125 B.C. It is true that we do not find the name of Brihaspatimitra in the Śuṅga list. But we have the explanation given in the Purāṇas themselves. It is reported there that Pushyamitra made others rule; the Vāyu says that he made his 8 sons rule equally, i.e., with equal powers.⁹ We know that Agnimitra ruled at Vidiśā with a separate court of his own. Probably the 6th son was ruling in Kōśala as the Śuṅga inscription at Ayōdhyā would suggest.¹⁰ It is significant that Pushyamitra is not called king in this record, but his title Sēnāpati is there just as it is in Kālidāsa's Mālavikāgnimitra. Similarly the dating on the Bhārhut gate "in the reign of the Śuṅgas" confirms the Purāṇic datum that several sons ruled at the same time (in different parts) under Pushyamitra. The Vāyu-Purāṇa places in the imperial list (of Magadha) the sons of Agnimitra, and not Agnimitra himself, after Pushyamitra. As

Brihaspatimitra is not in the royal list of Magadha between Agnimitra's sons and Odraka, we shall be justified in taking him to a period before Agnimitra's sons succeeded to the Magadha throne, i.e., to the time of Pushyamitra himself.¹

The most important contribution of the Hāthīgumphā inscription is the synchronism of Khāravela with the Indo-Greek king Demetrios. This important discovery was made in November 1919,² and it was settled that after the phrase Yavana-rāja comes the name Dimita... . Beyond this name not a single succeeding word of the sentence can be read. Demetrios, son of Euthydemos I, is generally well-known as the conqueror of India. It is mentioned in a verse of Chaucer quoted nearly half a century ago by Cunningham. Strabo refers to the fact that the kingdom of Bactria had expanded in a remarkable way beyond its original limits and that the kings responsible for its enlargement were Demetrios and Menander.³ Beyond this nothing could be said about the Indian conquests of Demetrios before the discovery of the king's name in the Hāthīgumphā record. Justin calls him the king of the Indians. He was probably driven out of Bactria by a rival king named Eukratides and had to settle down in Afghānistān and India. The surest indication of his dominion over some part of India is the use of the Kharōshthī script on some of his copper coins with the use of the title Aparajita.⁴ Unfortunately we do not know the exact date of Demetrios except through synchronisms. He conducted negotiations between his father Euthydemos I and Antiochus III of Syria and married the latter's daughter. Therefore he must have been a young man towards the close of the third century B.C. His Indian campaigns appear to have been undertaken when he had come to the throne in mature age, and his coins show that he was between 30 and 35 when his reign began.⁵ Numismatists distinguish two Demetrioses, taking Demetrios II to be the son of Demetrios I.⁶ It would be absurd to say that the Indian conquests of the first dynasty of the Bactro-Greek kings were made by Demetrios II. The Indian campaigns of Demetrios and his advance at Pāṭaliputra are distinctly described in Yuga-Purāṇa of the Gārgī-saṃhitā. The historical text of the work has been recently collected from different MSS. by KPJ.⁷ Section 5 contains the account of the Greek invasion of Pāṭaliputra and a battle at that place. It is stated that after conquering Sākēta, Mathurā and Pañchāla the Greeks reached Kusumadhvaja, and at Pushpapura, i.e., Pāṭaliputra, there was a great battle fought on the mud-embedded western ramparts with engines (ballistae or catapultae), and the outlying districts became full of disorder. Further on (section 7) there is a mention of Demetrios as Dharmamita where it is distinctly stated that his officers would oppress the people. Finally it is stated that intoxicated with fighting the Greeks would not stay in the Middle Country and that there would be a furious civil war among themselves in their own country. This statement is corroborated by the Greek accounts of the great civil war in Bactria and Afghānistān between Demetrios and his successors and Eucratides and the kings of the dynasty founded by him. Therefore his mention in the Hāthīgumphā inscription proves definitely that Khāravela must have flourished in the first half of the 2nd century B.C.

¹ The objection of Prof. Rapson (Cambridge History of India, Vol. I, p. 537, note) that there is an interval of 25 years between Pushyamitra and Odraka, and therefore Āshādhacēna, the maternal uncle of Bahasatimitra, cannot be connected with Bahasatimitra of Pabhosā has not much force in a country where people marry more than one wife at the same time and where maternal uncles are often found to be much younger than their nephews.

² It was announced by Sir Edward Gait in his presidential address to the Bihār and Orissa Research Society in 1920 (J. B. O. R. S., Vol. VI, p. 5). The late Rao Bahadur H. Krishna Sastri did not notice this discovery even in 1922-23. Cf. Annual Report of the Archaeological Survey of India, 1922-23, p. 130.

The compilation (upādayati) of the Aṅgas is described in line 16 as the crowning act of glory of Khāravela. This was undertaken and completed in the 13th year. Learned Jainas from all over India were assembled in a conference (saṅghayanam), evidently on the Kumārī Hill of sacred associations, and they put together once more the scattered or lost sacred texts of Jainism. The Jaina tradition asserts that in the reign of Chandragupta Maurya a Jaina conference was held at Pāṭaliputra after the 12 years' famine was over but that no agreement could be reached as to the restoration of the texts. Khāravela's wide conquests from the Pāṇḍya country up to the North-Western Frontiers and from the Marāṭhā country up to Magadha and his consequent political influence made it possible for him to have the texts recompiled. That the term 'Aṅga' denotes the Jaina canonical Aṅgas is proved by the adjective 'consisting of 64' (choṣaṭhi), which is a very difficult and mysterious expression. The Jaina tradition says that 64 letters make up the Jaina sacred literature. The Jainas at present give a mystic interpretation, vide Mr. J. L. Jaini in his Introduction to the Jīva-Khaṇḍa of the Gommaṭasāra at p. 12. He says:—"The knowledge of Śruti, Śruta-Jñāna, may be of things which are contained in the Aṅgas (Limbs or sacred books of the Jainas) or of things outside the Aṅgas. There are 64 simple letters of the alphabet. Of these 33 are consonants, 27 vowels and 4 auxiliary (which help in the formation of compound letters). The total number of possible combinations of these 64 simple letters into compounds of 2, 3, 4, or more up to 64 letters is: $2^{64}-1=1,84,46,74,40,73,70,95,51,615$.

"These are the letters (simple and compound) of Śruta in its entirety. This number being divided by 16,348,307,888, which is the number of letters in a central foot (madhyamapāda) of the Paramāgama (Sacred Jaina Literature), gives us the number of padas of the Aṅgas as 11,283, 58,005. The remainder 80,108,175 gives us the letters of that part of Śruta which is not contained in the Aṅgas. This part is divided into 14 Prakīrṇakas".

In our opinion the Jainas had an alphabet of 64 letters several of which were not actual letters but symbols.

One school of the Jainas maintains that only 11 Aṅgas were recovered after the loss. If we read "Aṅga-satika-turiyaṃ" instead of "Aṅga satika(m) turiyaṃ" we may get the meaning that the re-compiled Aṅgas were in two groups, Satika = saptika, group of seven texts, and Turiya = turiya, a group of four texts. In any case the Jaina tradition about the loss and the recovery of the texts stands confirmed, and here we find another instance of the faithfulness of the Jaina tradition. The monks honoured at the Kumārī Hill in the 13th year were Śvētāmbaras as they were given pieces of China-cloth (silk) (china-vatāni = china-vastrāṇi)¹ and white robes (vāsa-sitāni). Khāravela, by his religious enterprise, was emulating Chandragupta and Aśoka. But posterity has completely forgotten him.

Fortunately the majority of the names of places mentioned in this record can be identified. Kalīṅganagarī is the ancient capital. Kalīṅga, a city which has now disappeared, lay close to Kalīṅgapaṭanam, a place on the Bay of Bengal in the Ganjām district of the Madras Presidency. Kaṇha-berinā is Kṛishṇa-verṇā² of the Rāshtrakūṭa period and the modern Kṛishṇā. Musikā-nagaram was probably a city on the river Mūsī in its upper reaches near Gōlkonḍa-Hydrābād³

² [The Kaṇṇapeṇṇa or Kaṇṇabannā of Pāli literature.—Ed.]

³ The confluence of the Mūsī and the Kṛishṇā is mentioned in a copper-plate, ante, Vol. VI, p. 206. [Muziris on the Malabar coast is suggested as a possible alternative—R. D. B.]

As to the peoples mentioned in the inscription the Rāṭhikas are probably the Mahārāṭhis or the people of northern Mahārāshṭra, i.e., the inhabitants of the modern districts of East Khāndesh, Nāsik, Ahmadnagar, Poona and the northern taluks of Sholāpur; the Bhojakas are likely the same as Mahābhōjas, i.e., the inhabitants of the Marāṭhi-speaking districts of the Central Provinces and Berār.

The Tanasuliya or Tanasuliya-vāṭa cannot be identified by us. Vajiraghara remained under the same name till the 12th century A.D. when it is mentioned by Kulōttuṅga Chōḷa I or the Chālukya-Chōḷa Rājendra Chōḷa II, as Vayirāgara in the Tiruvorriyūr Ādhipuriśvara temple inscription of the second year. It states that Rājakēsarivarman alias Rājendra Chōḷa II captured elephants at this place and defeated the king of Dhārā at Chakrakōṭṭa. In the Pāṇḍava-Perumāl temple at Conjeeveram another Tamiḷ inscription of the 5th year of the same king, who is called Rājakēsarivarman alias Kulōttuṅga Chōḷa I, informs us that the king's victories at Vayirāgara and Chakrakōṭṭa were gained while he was the heir-apparent, i.e., before 8th October 1070 A.D. Chakrakōṭṭa has been correctly identified by Rai Bahadur Hiralal with Chakra-Koṭyā in the Bastar State of the Central Provinces. It is therefore certain that this Vayirāgara is the same as modern Wairagaḍh in the Chanda district of the same province. Kielhorn restored the name Vayirāgara as Vajrākara.¹ The form Vajiraghara in this record shows that the original form was Vajra-grīha or Vajra-gaḍha in Prakrit which came to be written as Vayirāgarām in Tamiḷ. Both Chakra-Koṭyā and Wairagaḍh are on the road from Central Kāliṅga to Southern Mālwa. Goradhagiri is no doubt the ancient name of the Barābar Hills in the Gayā district, as proved by Mr. V. H. Jackson, I.E.S., the late principal of the Patna College who, along with Mr. Russell, discovered the inscriptions on boulders near the top, giving the name correctly as Gōrathagiri.² Mr. Jackson also described immense fortifications on the hill top.³ The place was an important outpost on the western flank of the ancient capital of Magadha, Girivraja or Rājagriha or Rājagaha. It is mentioned in the Mahābhārata where the route of Bhīma and Kṛishṇa to Girivraja is described.⁴ Rājagriha or Rājagaha, the ancient capital of Magadha, still exists as Rājgir, famous as a Jaina Tīrtha and for its hot springs, in the Bihār sub-division of the Patna district of Bihār and Orissa.⁵ Madhura is undoubtedly the northern Mathurā in the United Provinces. Bharadhavasa (Skt. Bhārutaravasha) means the plains of Northern India. Pithumḍa is Ptolemy's Pitundra, a city which no longer exists, but which was an important port even in the first century A.D.⁶ Tamira or Tramira is equal to Draṇiḍa or Dramiḍa, i.e., the Tamiḷugam or the Tamiḷ speaking districts of the Madras Presidency known as Damirike to classical writers. Utarāpadha is Sanskrit Uttarāpāṭha which included our North-Western Frontier Province. Magadha is south-western Bihār consisting of the modern districts of Patna, Gayā and the north-western Hazāribāgh, while Aṅga consisted of the portions of the districts of Bhāgalpur and Monghyr which lie to the south of the Ganges, adjoining Magadha. The Paṇḍa-Rāja of this inscription refers to the kings of the southern extremity of the Indian Peninsula from Madura to Cape Comorin.

We edit the inscription from the rock, the cast in the Patna Museum and from impressions taken by us as well as by the Curator of the Patna Museum.

NOTES ON THE TEXT.

1. For facsimile plates see J. B. O. R. S., Vols. III, IV and XIII.
2. [The reading Arī° was corrected from Arā° after Mr. Banerji's death, with the help of Muni Jinavijaya.—K. P. J.]
3. Airena is the equivalent of Ailena, meaning a descendant of Ila or Ilā, father or mother of Purūravas. The same title is also to be found in the Mañchapuri Cave inscription of Kūde-pasiri.¹ For the change of l into r see T[r]amira in line 11 below. [In connection with this title the description in the last line rājasi-Vasū-kula-vinīsrito may be noted. The Purāṇic tradition of Rājarsī as well as of the Aiḷa dynasty was thus well-established before Khāravola's time.—K. P. J.]
4. Māhāmēghavāhana.—Probably the reading in the Mañchapuri inscription is also Māhā-mēghavāhana and not Mahāmēghavāhana. The long vowel over the first syllable Mā° is quite clear in this inscription. The increase in the strength of the vowel indicates that King Khāravola was a descendant of Mahāmēghavāhana, who might have been the recent founder of the dynasty.
5. Cheti-rāja-vasa.—Evidently Cheti is the same as Chēdi.² The later Chēdis, Kaḷachuris or Haihayas of Dābhāla or Dāhala were in occupation of modern Baghelkhand and Chhattisgaḍh in the mediæval period. Before that in the 7th century the Kaḷachuris Saṅkaragūṇa and Bud-dharāja were in possession of Mālwa and the Northern Mahārāṣṭra until their conquest by the early Chālukyas of Bādāmi. The Buddhist books mention Chēti as one of the sixteen great king-doms or nations of Northern India.³ In the dynastic lists given in the Purāṇas, the Haihayas are a branch of the Yādavas.¹ The origin of the Chēdis is thus stated by Pargiter: Vidarbha of the Yādava clan had three sons named Bhīma Kratha, Kaiśika and Lōmapāda. Kaiśika's son Chidi founded the dynasty of Chaidya kings in Chēdi.² From Chidi the name of the clan as well as that of the country became Chēdi. In the Buddhist books Chēti is placed between Malia and Vaṃsa indicating that the kingdom lay close to Kauśāmbī in the Allahābād district, and it is very likely that modern Baghelkhand was originally called Chēdi. [Vasu, from whose line Khāravela's family descended (l. 17) was, however, not a Chaidya but the conqueror of the Chēdi country. He was fifth in descent from Kuru who was the 72nd Aīla (J. R. A. S., 1910, pp. 22, 26-29). The Jaina Harivamśa-Purāṇa also includes Vasu in the Aīlēja list and as the son of the founder of Chēdi-rāṣṭra in the Vindhyas (J. B. O. R. S., Vol. XV, p. 277).—K. P. J.]

6. Kaliṅg-ādhipatinā.—The term Kaliṅga is usually applied to the northern part of the Telugu-speaking districts of the Madras Presidency. In the Purāṇas, Kaliṅga is associated with Aṅga (south-eastern Bihār), Vaṅga (eastern Bengal), Puṇḍra (northern Bengal) and Suhma (south-western Bengal). The names of these five countries were given according to the names of the five sons of Bali,³ i.e., the tradition treats the kingdoms to be early Aryan conquests and states. In the Vāyu and the Brahmāṇḍa-Purāṇas, Kaliṅga is associated with the Mahisha country⁴ (later Māhishmatī, modern Mahesor in the Indore State on the river Narmadā). This text would indicate that Utkala was included in Kaliṅga in the time of Khāravela and the later name Oḍra had not come into existence. The Purāṇic texts further indicate that the term Utkala was applied in early times to the hilly country between Gayā and Orissa, i.e., modern Chhoṭā Nāgpur and the Garhjat States. "The Saudyumnas had been almost overwhelmed by the Ānavas and Pauravas, and were restricted to the Utkalas and other clans which occupied the hilly tracts from Gayā to Orissa."⁵ The transfer of the term Utkala to the plain country along the sea-board is therefore later.

7. Siri-kaḍāra-sarīra-vaṭā.—Kaḍāra means reddish fair, according to Amara, and a slave according to the Mēdinī. If it is a Prakrit derivation from kaṭāra, then it means "nāgaraḥ or kāmīn," according to the Śabdamaṇī (Vāchaspatyam). The explanation given in the Amara-kōsha is more suitable as meaning "of beautiful reddish body."

8. Lekha or Royal Correspondence, a manual of which was written in the time of the Chālukyas of Aṇahilapāṭaṇa and has been published from Baroda.⁶ This lekha cannot refer to the art of writing. The subject is dealt with in the Arthaśāstra of Kauṭilya.⁷

9. Rūpa must be the equivalent of rūpya meaning currency. In the present inscription the position of the word rūpa shows that the meaning cannot be anything else.⁸ The exact meaning of the term is made clear by the explanation of Buddhaghōṣa on a passage of the Mahāvagga. The term is explained thus: "he who learns the rūpa-sūtra must turn over and over many Kārshāpaṇas."⁹ Finally, the term rūpa-darśaka in the Arthaśāstra translated as "Examiner of Coins" shows that the term rūpa was used in cases as in the present inscription with

⁸ It is impossible to imagine that the prince learned acting. We can compare the word lupadake in the Jogimārā cave inscription where also it may mean a currency officer. The term is also taken to mean a City-Magistrate who could recognise offenders at a glance. Annual Report of the Archaeological Survey of India, 1903-04, pp. 128-30. *Ind. reference to currency. The term did not refer to silver currency alone but to other metals also, as we find the term lāmra-rūpa in the Arthaśāstra.¹

10. Gaṇanā.—This term occurs in the Arthaśāstra and has been translated as Accountancy. An entire chapter has been devoted to it there and the subject is explained in detail. It is certain that this term could not have been used for elementary mathematics in this inscription as supposed by Bühler. Knowledge of lēkha, rūpa, and gaṇanā is here coupled with that of law and learning and refers to a post-boyhood period.

11. Vavahāra.—Vyavahāra meaning Civil Law or Municipal Law as opposed to—

12. Vidhi or Religious Law which is mentioned in Sanskrit legal literature as positive injunctions.

13. Yovarajaṁ = Yavarājyam.—Yōvarajaṁ shows the shortening of the internal medial vowel in the second member and the graphic lightening of double consonant, as in the case of Māhārāja^o (l. 3), rañi (l. 15), etc.

14. vardhamāna-sesayo.—Though the incision of these two words is perfectly clear they cannot be satisfactorily explained by us. The equation vardhamāna-saiśavō is not quite satisfactory as a change of v into y is not to be had anywhere else in this record. The meaning proposed in the translation is adopted for want of a better one. There may be a pun intended by the use of the word vardhamāna which is the early name of the last Tirthaṅkara. The verb pāpūnāti = prāpnōti shows that the sentence is in the active voice and complete by itself. After this line the forms are generally causative.

15. Ven-ābhiviṣayo.—The reading is perfectly clear. The ancient monarch Vēna, father of Prithu, was an unorthodox king according to Brāhmanical literature. According to the Padma-Purāṇa he began his reign well but subsequently became a Jain. He abolished the law of levirate (niyōga) and caused a confusion or abolition of castes, according to Manu.² Vēna was a great conqueror and therefore the term abhiviṣaya is very appropriate in his case. Evidently the tradition recorded in the Padma-Purāṇa was well-established in the time of Khāravela and therefore the Jain monarch is compared to Vēna.

16. Kaliṅga-rāja-va[m]se.—In the third line the details about Khāravela's ancestry are made clear. He was born in the royal line of Chēti and was the overlord of Kaliṅga, but the dynasty to which he belonged was the 3rd dynasty of the kings of Kaliṅga. This dynasty was one of the Aiḷa dynasties settled in Central and Southern India. The name Khāravela (probably, 'one whose waves are brackish' = the Ocean) is unusual, and so is the name of the other king of the dynasty, viz., Kūḍepa (Mañchapurī inscription). Khāravela is described to be an Aiḷa or Aiḷa, that is, of the Lunar House as opposed to the Solar. Pargiter holds that the kings of the Aiḷa stock held the Ganges and the Jumna valleys from the Siwālik Hills to Magadha, the country between the Rājputāna desert and the Beṛār, with the Pañjāb and Peshāwar in the north and East Bihār and Bengal proper in the east. The town and country of Vidarbha is generally recognised to be the modern Beṛār.

17. Māhārāj-ābhisechanam.—The regular abhishēka of a Chakravartin Monarch (called the Aindra-mahābhishēka in the Satapatha and Aitarēya Brāhmaṇas).³

18. Padhame.—In this dialect tha becomes dha in the majority of cases, e.g., Goradha = Goratha, radha = ratha, Bharadhavasa = Bharathavasa and Madhuraṁ for Muthuraṁ. The change is well-known and probably it is an influence of Dravidian origin.⁴

19. Kaliṅga-nagara.—The capital of the Kaliṅga country, very likely now represented by Kaliṅgapatanam in the Ganjām district. The ancient capital of Kaliṅga, according to the tradition prevalent in the Chicacole taluk of the Ganjām district, was swallowed up by the sea. Fragments of bas-reliefs of the Maurya period with the well-known protuberance on the head-dress have been, however, discovered by RDB. in the temples of Mukhalīṅgēśvara and Kūṛṇēśvara in the locality. The coast from Chhatrapuram to Masulipatam is subject to great cyclones during the north-eastern monsoon and the majority of ancient sites on this coast are buried in drift sand.

20. Khibira-isi-tāla.—We have examined these two words very carefully on the rock, estampages and casts. The reading is perfectly clear but no explanation seems to be possible unless Khibira is taken to be a proper name of a Rishi who excavated the tank or lake or after whom it was named. In that case, the phrase will have to be taken as referring to a particular tank while taṭāga and pūṭiyo will refer to artificial excavations.

21. Pāṇḍulēṇa=Śkt. Pālīh.—Perhaps the same as the Polhuya of Western India, cf. Pāṇḍulēṇa cave No. 10, inscription No. 10, l. 3.¹

22. Sātakaṁṇim.—Evidently Śrī Śātakarṇi, the third king of the Sātavāhana dynasty, the husband of queen Nāvanikā of the Nānāghāt inscriptions in the Junnar taluk of the Poona district.² [As to the Śātakarṇi whose architect Vāsēthiputra Ānanda gave a tōraṇa to stūpa No. I at Sāñchi see J. B. O. R. S., XVI, p. 254.—K. P. J.]

23. Kaṇha-beṇṇā—the Sanskrit Kṛishṇavēṇī or the modern Kṛishṇā which rises near Dhom in the Sātārā district. The river flows through the Sātārā, Belgaum and Bijāpur districts and the Kolhāpur and Hyderābād States into the Bay of Bengal through the Kṛishṇā district of the Madras Presidency. It forms the boundary of the Nizam's State from Alampur near Karnūl to Nandigāma in the Kistna district. The rise of the Kṛishṇā and its particular sanctity are described in the Pātāla-khaṇḍa of the Podmapurāṇa.³ The earliest epigraphical reference is to be found in this inscription and the second in the Nāsik inscription in cave No. 10 of the Pāṇḍulēṇa group where it is called Karabeṇā.⁴ In mediæval inscriptions it is called Kṛishṇa-Vēṇṇā.⁵ There is no doubt about the fact that Khāravela reached the Kṛishṇā somewhere in the long and erratic course of that river. It is possible that he went westwards because the term pachhima-disaṁ is expressly mentioned. But it is uncertain as to where he reached the Kṛishṇā.

24. Musika-nagara.—The Mūshikas are a people of Southern India as in the Mahābhārata they are mentioned along with the Vanavāsas.⁶ In the Nāṭya-śāstra of Bharata they are probably coupled with the Tōśalas and the Kōśalas under the name Mōśalas.⁷ In the Vishṇu-Purāṇa the Mūsika country comes with the Strī-rājya. According to the commentary Jaya-maṅgalā on the Kāmasūtra of Vātsyāyana, the latter was a kingdom in the western part of the Vindhya country.⁸ There is a river Mūsī which joins the Kṛishṇā about the Naigonda and the Kṛishṇā districts. It is mentioned under the same name in the inscription of the Rāshṭrakūṭa

Gōvinda II of the Śaka year 692=769 A.D.¹ It is quite probable that the Musika city stood on this river.²

25. Kalin̄ga-puṇa-rāja.—The reading is absolutely certain and the phrase should be read with reference to tatiye Kalin̄ga-rāja-vaṁse.

26. Raṭhika-Bhojake stand for the Mahārathis and Mahābhōjas of Sātavāhana inscriptions and the minor inscriptions of the same period at Kānhēri, Kuḍā and Bēḍsā. The Raṭhikas are mentioned as Risṭikas in the Girnār, Raṭhikas in the Shāhbāzgaṛhī and Raṭhakas in the Mānsēhrā version of the 5th edict of Aśoka. The Dhauli version supplies the analogous form in Laṭhika. In the 13th edict we find the Bhojakas mentioned with the Pitinakas in Shāhbāzgaṛhī, Mānsēhrā and Kālsī versions. In the Kānhēri cave inscription of the time of Viṇhukaḍa Chuṭukulānanda a Mahābhōja is also called a Mahārāja showing that Bhoja probably was a title. Mahābhōjas or Mahābhōjis are mentioned in five votive inscriptions in the Kuḍā cave. In later periods a Bhojaka is mentioned in the copper-plate inscription of the Pallava king Śivaskandavarman.³

27. Nanda-rāja.—King Nanda is mentioned in two places in this inscription, once in l. 6 and again in l. 12. The date in this line apparently refers to an era founded by King Nanda.⁴ His mention in connection with Magadha fixes his identity with the Magadhan Nanda dynasty.

28. Rājasūyam.—The reading is perfectly clear on the rock.

29. sam̄ādēna.—The form of the first letter seems to be a sa of the same type as that which we find in Bahasatimitam in l. 12.

30. vipamuchitu.—It seems more probable that the reading is *vipamu[m?]*chitu not vipamuchitum.

31. Yavana-rāja-Dimita.—The word Yavana-rāja was read by KPJ. for the first time in 1919. After that the second syllable of the proper name is distinct. The first and the third can be read with great difficulty. KPJ. proposed to read the first syllable as Di but RDB. proposed that it is Di in which the broad back of the letter is turned towards the right and not the left. In Aśoka's inscriptions both varieties are found but in this inscription the other variety, with the broad back to the proper left, is used in all other cases. The Greek King Demetrios calls himself Dime[tra] in his Kharōshthī coin legends.⁵

32. ag̃nathiyā.—The reading is certain and legible on the rock only. The decay of the stone makes good impressions impossible. Both of us have examined the place carefully and repeatedly. The meaning of the term is also uncertain. It may mean some form of Vedic sacrifice and the original form in Sanskrit might have been Agn-ishṭi. What had been read as sa before this word is uncertain.

33. Ava-rāja was previously read as pūva-rāja. It appears that that particular form of a in which the left lower curve is much shorter than the upper is also used in this inscription. Therefore the shorter arm of the long u may be taken to be the lower left curve of a. Ava as a dynasty is given by the Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, and the Vishṇu equates it with the Āndhras. Ptolemy mentions a people called Avarni or Aruarni near the Kṛishṇā. It is quite possible that the city of Pithumḍa mentioned by Ptolemy as Pitundra (Ind. Ant., Vol. LV, p. 145), was founded by these people (J. B. O. R. S., Vol. XIV, pp. 15 f.).

² I am of opinion that Khāravela reached the Mahārāshtra country and touched the river Krishnā near its source where it flows directly north to south instead of touching it at any other place, because to reach the Krishnā at any other place he would have had to travel almost due south instead of west. Moreover, I put more reliance on the Mahābhārata than on any of the later texts. As the Mūsikas are coupled with the Vanavāsikas it is more probable that they lived on the western coast below Banavāsī (Sirsi taluk of the North Kanara district of Bombay). In my opinion Muziris, a famous port on the western coast, should be identified with Musikanagara of this inscription. (Rt. D. B.) [See J. R. A. S., 1922, pp. 165 ff., and Ind. Ant., 1923, p. 138.—Ed.]

34. Pithumḍa.—According to Ptolemy, a city in the upper part of the Coromandal coast. This city has perhaps to be taken as the capital of the Ava or Avarni.

35. Tramira or Tamira is the equivalent of Tamila just as Aira represents Aiḷa. It has been pointed out that Tamil is the origin of Draviḍa and of Dramila.¹ Tramila would thus be a perfectly correct substitute for Dramila.

36. Māgadham.—We have examined the rock very carefully. The cast of the inscription in the Patna Museum shows that the word cannot be Mariya as proposed by Dr. F. W. Thomas.² The chisel-cuts of the letters are still clear though the decay of the rock surface has made impressions of this part of the inscription smudged.

37. Bahasatimitam.—The sa in the word is of the later 2nd century B.C. type in which a clear right-angle has been formed in the right limb of the letter and therefore it looks more like pa than sa. The reading is absolutely certain.

38. Kāliṅga-Jina perhaps means Śīṭalanātha who was born at Bhadalapura, which is the same as Bhadrapura³ or Bhadrāchalam in the Gōḍāvari district of the Madras Presidency.

39. paḍihārehi stands for pratihāraiḥ.—The ḍa denotes its difference from parihāra in l. 9.

40. Aṅga-Magadha.—The mention of these two provinces indicates that the campaign of the 12th year was specially directed against South Bihār which now includes the ancient provinces of Aṅga (Bhāgalpur and Monghyr districts) and Magadha (Patna, Gayā and part of Hazāribāgh districts).

41. sata-visikanam.—The reading is not doubtful though it was read slightly differently before. The reference seems to be to architects (vaiśmikas).

42. hathi-nivāsa-parisaram.—This reading of the second word of the phrase is more reliable than the previous one (hathi-nāvana-paripuram). nivāsa=nirvāsa.⁴ The reference seems to be to elephant preserves or some original form of kheḍā arrangement, invented by Khāravela. The elephants of Kāliṅga were very famous in ancient India. The strength of Khāravela probably lay in elephants. He took the fort of Pāṭaliputra with the help of elephants.

43. Pamḍa-rājā.—For the form cf. rañi in l. 15. The Sanskritized version of the name of the great Dravidian clan is Pāṇḍya and is derived from Pāṇḍu by a special rule of early grammarians. In the inscriptions of Aśoka also the vowel in the first syllable is long.

44. Pa-khiṇḍa-samsitehi.—The reading seems to be tolerably certain on the rock, though it looks doubtful in the impressions. Pa-khiṇḍa=prakṣhiṇḍa, *samsit*⁵=*samsru*⁵.

45. Yāpa-ñavakehi.—The first part of the compound cannot be satisfactorily explained by us though the reading is absolutely certain.⁵

46. vāsā-sitāni.—The medial vowels except that on the first syllable are somewhat uncertain. It may also be taken to be -satāni. It was previously read as vasāsītāni.

47. Uvāsaga-Khāravela previously read as Uvāsa-Khāravela. The gā and kha are indistinct.

48. saṃghayanam.—The reading is certain except of the vowel value on gh. Certain improvements have been effected, e.g., ñaninam which makes the purport of this term fairly certain.

49. Simdhulāya.—The recognition of the cerebral la is due to a suggestion of Prof. H. Lüders. In other cases the cerebral la is changed into ra in the dialect used in this inscription.

50. sota-sahasehi.—This reading was fully established by us when we examined the rock jointly in November 1919. This reading along with the reading of the passage Amga^o, etc. brings to a close the long controversy about the existence of a date in the Maurya era in this inscription.

51. [The reading Rājasi-Vasū-kula^o has been corrected by me (from -vasa-kula) after Mr. Banerji's death. King Vasu of Chēdi is known to the Purāṇas (see J. R. A. S., 1910, p. 22; MBh., I. ch. 3). Cheti-rā a^o in l. 1 refers to King V. su. The inscription here confirms the Purāṇic genealogy. The Jaina Harivaṃśa Purāṇa also gives Vasu in the Chēdi list (Ch. VII) and as an Aliēva. J. B. O. R. S., Vol. XV, p. 277.—K. P. J.]

52. vinisrito.—This is the only instance of the use of the palatal śa in this record. The form is certain both on the rock and impressions.

TRANSLATION.

(Line 1) Salutation to the Arhats (Arihats=lit. 'Conquerors of Enemies,' i.e., Jinas). Salutation to all the Siddhas. By illustrious Khāravela, the Aira (Aiḷa), the Great King, the descendant of Mahāmāghavāhana, the increaser (of the glory) of the Cheti (Chēdi) dynasty, (endowed) with excellent and auspicious marks and features, possessed of virtues which have reached (the ends of) the four quarters, overlord¹ of Kaliṅga,

(L. 2) for fifteen years, with a body ruddy and handsome were played youthsomeness sports; after that (by him who) had mastered (royal) correspondence, currency, finance, civil and religious laws (and) who had become well-versed in all (branches) of learning, for nine years (the office of) *Yuvarāja*² (heir apparent) was administered. Having completed the twenty-fourth year,³ at that time, (he) who had been prosperous (vardhamāna) since his infancy (?) and who (was destined) to have wide conquests as those of Vena,

(L. 3) then in the state of manhood,⁴ obtains the imperial (māhārāja) coronation in the dynasty of Kaliṅga. As soon as he is anointed, in the first (regnal) year (he) causes repairs of the gates, the walls and the buildings (of the city), (which had been) damaged by storm; in the city of Kaliṅga (he) causes the erection of the embankments of the lake (called after) Khībira Rishi, (and) of (other) tanks and cisterns, (also) the restoration of all the gardens (he) causes to be

(L. 4) done at (the cost of) thirty-five-hundred-thousands,⁵ and (he) gratifies the People. And in the second year (he), disregarding Sātakarṇi, despatches to the western regions an

¹ In Kaliṅg-adhipati, adhipati like adhirāja of the inscriptions, would literally denote an 'overlord.' The chief queen of Khāravela in the Mañchapuri record calls her husband a Kaliṅga emperor (Kaliṅga-chakavati). In our record he is expressly described as belonging to the Kaliṅga dynasty. The expression 'overlord' would not indicate that he was the overlord of Kaliṅga, but an overlord or an emperor belonging to Kaliṅga.

² A member of the ministry (Hindu Polity, Pt. II, pp. 124, 136). According to the Divyāvadāna, Samprati, grandson of Aśoka, was the yuvarāja, while his father Kuṇāla was a viceroy at Takshaśilā. Yuvarāja was generally, but not necessarily, the Crown Prince.

³ Evidently the throne had been vacant and Khāravela ascended it after completing his 24th year. According to the Bṛihaspati-sūtra, for a prince playing and learning were enjoined up to the 25th year and after that age, politics.

⁴ Purisa-yuge.—This has a reference to the 25th year, see the note above.

⁵ The meaning given above is in consonance with the use of similar figures in lines 10 and 16 (Mahāvijayaṃ pāsādam kārṇvati athasāyā satī-sahasehi, and pānatariya, etc.). The instrumental case before pakatiyo may equally be taken to denote the number of the subjects (see Siddhāntakāumudī of Bhaṭṭoji Dikṣita on Pāṇini, II, 3, 23, and II, 3, 46). RDB. would connect the figure with the sentence beginning with pakatiyo in the sense that by the expenditure indicated by the figure the king pleased his subjects (see J. B. O. R. S., Vol. IV, p. 315).

¹ In Sindh this term is found in modern vernacular applied to a village-performance by a row of men who move on cutting antics. Drava in Sanskrit, meaning a dance, is connected with motion or running.

² On its meaning as a theatrical performance, see Ind. Ant., Vol. XLVIII, p. 235.

³ (Makuta).—Crowns or coronets according to the Nāṭya-śāstra (XXI, 118). The Raṭhikas and Bhojakas were non-monarchical communities (Hindu Polity, Vol. I, p. 89).

⁴ Bilma in the Yajur-vēda, XVI, 35, comes in the company of kavacha (coat-of-mail or breast-plate).

⁶ Tanasuliya-vāṭā means 'from the road of Tanasuli' or it might have been the name of the canal. Vāṭā also means an enclosure.

⁷ The opinion of Luders (List No. 1345) and Konow (Acta Orientalia, Vol. I, p. 26) is in favour of interpreting tiṣṣa-sata as 103 years and not 300 years. This is acceptable in preference to 300 on considerations of chronological and historical data of the inscription discussed elsewhere (J. B. O. R. S., Vol. XIII, pp. 237-238). Such uses of numbers are not unknown in Vedic Sanskrit. The natural explanation is 'the year one hundred and three of King Nanda'. On a Nanda era, see Yeḍarāve inscription of Chālukya Vikramāditya VI (Bombay Gazetteer, Vol. I, Pt. ii, p. 43) and on an era beginning in 458 B. C. current in the time of Alberuni, the discussion on the subject in the Journal of the Bihar and Orissa Research Society (Vol. XIII, pp. 237-241).

⁸ Anugaha.—Consult Hindu Polity, II, 93; Kautiliya Artha-śāstra, 19, XIII, 171.

⁹ Pora = Paura.—See the discussion on the subject in Hindu Polity, II, Ch. 27, and the next note below.

¹¹ It is an ancient royal mannerism to refer to different queens by the name of the country of their origin of., Kausalyā, Kaikēyī, etc. The custom still continues in the present ruling families where rāṇīs are so referred to. For instance, a princess of the Udaipur family, if married in the Jodhpur family, would be styled Sisodia mahal.

¹² Upapīḍāpayati means presses down, inflicts pain (Manu, VI, 62; XII, 80). With the meaning 'devastating, laying waste', which the dictionaries give, the word may mean 'he sacks', but as it is contrasted with ghātāpṛaṇitā ('sacked') we take it that Khāravela only laid siege to the fortress of Rājagriha.

(L. 9) Kalpa¹ (wish-fulfilling) trees, elephants, chariots with their drivers, houses, residences and rest-houses. And to make all these acceptable (he) gives at a fire sacrifice (?) exemption (from taxes) to the caste of Brāhmaṇas. Of Arhat.....

And a wonderful and marvellous enclosure of stockade¹⁰ for driving in the elephants (he) and horses, elephants, jewels and rubies as well as numerous pearls in hundreds (he) causes to be brought here from the Pāṇḍya King.

(L. 14) (he) subjugates. In the thirteenth year, on the Kumārī Hill where the Wheel of Conquest had been well-revolved¹¹ (i.e., the religion of Jina had been ¹ Giving of Kalpa trees was one of the Mahādānas or great gifts according to Hēmadri (Chaturvarga-chintāmani, dāna-khanda). The tree was made of solid gold.

² Prithu-aṇḍa 'the big egg', probably had its origin in the physical feature of the situation of the city.

³ In the Jaina book Āvaśyakavṛtti, Hāribhadri, (pp. 685-87) and Hēmachandra's Vīracaritra (pp. 170-71) it is stated that Koṇika ploughed Vaiśālī with ploughs drawn by asses. (J. B. O. R. S., Vol. XIII, p. 231n.)

⁴ saṅghāta.—According to Pāṇini (III, 3, 76, 86; V. 1, 59; and Hindu Polity, I, p. 27) the form should be here saṅgha and not saṅghāta. Evidently this distinction of Sanskrit grammar is not followed by Jaina writers of the time and the regular form saṅghāta is used probably owing to the religious significance already attaching to the term saṅgha amongst them.

⁵ Perasa-vasa-satikam.—We take it to mean 113 years, not 1,300 years old in conformity with the interpretation of ti-vasa-sata above.

⁶ [Bhāvana=Skt. bhāpana (cf. 'bhāpayate' in the Siddhāntakaumudī on Pāṇ. 1, 3, 68). I am adopting the former reading janapada. The other reading will also yield nearly the same meaning.—K. P. J.]

⁷ As the record distinguishes Utarāpatha from Bharadvasa it should be taken to refer to that part of the country of which Takshasilā was the capital as in the Divyāvadāna (p. 407). Cf., Kāvya-mīmāṃsā, p. 94.

⁸ Sugāṅga Palace is mentioned in the Mudrārākṣasa (Act III) as the palace of Chandragupta Maurya. This must have been near or on the Ganges. Khāravēla's entry by means of elephants implies that it was a fortified palace.

¹⁰ nivāsa-parisaram = nirvāsa-parisaram. Compare the Kāmandakiya on nirvāsa of elephants (XV, 7). parisara is enclosure or stockade.

¹¹ supavata-vijaya-chakra: Skt. supravṛtta-vijaya-chakra, cf., pavata-chako in l. 17; vijaya-chaka, 'the wheel of conquest'. Evidently this was a term common to Buddhism and Jainism. That Varddhamaṇa Mahāvira preached Jainism in Kalinga is attested by the tradition contained in Jaina literature (J. B. O. R. S., Vol. XIII, p. 223). The Hāribhadrīya-vṛtti says that Mahāvira went to Kalinga where his father's friend was ruling.

No. 8.—KAP COPPER-PLATE OF KELADI SADASIIVA-NAYAKA; SAKA 1479.

BY N. LAKSHMINARAYAN RAO, M.A.

This copper-plate was secured by the Assistant Archæological Superintendent for Epigraphy, Southern Circle, Madras, from Kāp a village in the South Kanara district of the Madras Presidency in 1921 and has been noticed in the Annual Report on South Indian Epigraphy for that year as No. 8 of Appendix A.

² China-vatāni = chīrna-rastrāni or Chīna-rastrāni. The latter gives a more reasonable meaning.

³ vāsā-sitāni.—This was formerly read as rasā-sitāni. It would be the earliest reference to the white clothes later on connected with the Śvētāmbara sect.

⁴ samsita = Skt. samsṛiti.

⁵ Nāvaka = Skt. Jñāpaka.—Yāpa in yāpa-nāvakehi may be interpreted in view of its use in Charaka as "mitigating pain", or as "supporting life" according to the Mahābhārata. [The translation given above is adopted now from the Jaina texts. See above p. 85, n. 5—K. P. J.]

⁶ The Jainas raised symbolical graves of saints and Nishidhi or Nishidhi was the name given to them. (Cf. Ante, Vol. II, p. 274; Ind. Ant., Vol. XII, p. 99).

⁷ Soul and body: these relate to the Jaina philosophy wherein the topic is very prominent (Stevenson, Heart of Jainism, Ch. VII).

⁸ Saṃghayana = assemblage.

⁹ pābhāre = prāg-bharē.

¹⁰ nisayāni = Skt. niśrayāni.

¹¹ Amga is a technical term meaning the sacred canon of the Jainas. If we read Amga-satika-turiyam instead of Amgasatikam turiyam then we may translate it as "the Amgas (in collections of) 7 and 4". According to the Jaina tradition the Amgas, eleven in number, were discovered after their loss.

¹² turiyam = tuṛitām, "expeditiously", or turiyam, "four-fold". Jaina authors maintain that the Jaina Canon is covered by 64 letters; see Gōmāṭasāstra, Jīva-khaṇḍa (Sacred Books of the Jains, Vol. V, 1627 edition by J. L. Jaini, Introduction, p. 13).

"The plate which is rectangular in shape is 16·4" long and 11·5" broad. At the top of the plate, just in the centre, there is a flat projection 1·4" broad and 1" high shaped into the form of an arch. There is a small hole in the arch through which passes an ordinary copper ring 1·75" in diameter. The plate has suffered a slight damage at its proper right corner at the top. But the writing on either side is in a good state of preservation. The plate with the ring weighs 230 tolas."

The language of the inscription is partly Sanskrit and partly Kannaḍa. The first six verses are in Sanskrit and the next six in Kannaḍa, the rest being in Kannaḍa prose. The Kannaḍa verses are defective both in diction and in prosody. The record is written in Kannaḍa alphabet and is rather indifferently inscribed. The letter va is often written like ra and it is not easy to distinguish pa from ru (as in Tirumārāsa in line 17). The aspirates are generally distinguished by means of the vertical stroke at the bottom except in the case of dha. The secondary form of va is sometimes used (vulla in l. 36 and vūrolage in l. 37). With respect to orthography: (i) the consonants are invariably doubled when they are preceded by rēpha; (ii) the nasal is generally changed into an anuvāra before consonants of the same class; (iii) the consonants are freely used in place of vowels (e.g., ye for e in l. 21 and vo for o in l. 14); (iv) the letter sa is sometimes wrongly used for sha (ll. 8 and 42); and (v) double na is used for ṇa as in arnnava (l. 9).

The object of the inscription is to register a grant of land made by Madda-Heggade, the chief of Kāp with (the consent) of the assembly (nāḷinavarū)¹, communal and professional guilds (gaṇa-paṇa) and subordinate officers,² for offerings to Dharmmarāṭha, the 15th Jina Tirthaṅkara. The gift was made at the instance of the Jaina teacher Dēvachandradēva for the spiritual welfare of his guru Munichandradēva, the disciple of Abhinava ēvakīrttidēva.

The date of the record is Śālivāhana-Śaka 1479, the cyclic year Naḷa, the first tithi of the bright half of Kārttika, and Sunday. According to L. D. Swamikannu Pillai's Ephemeris the details correspond regularly to A.D. 1556, October 4, Sunday.

The inscription opens with an obeisance to Dharmmarāṭha which is followed by a verse in praise of the Jina-doctrine (śāsana). It then invokes Vardhamāna (Mahāvira), the 24th Jina. Verses 3 to 6 describe the high spiritual attainments of a Jaina sage named Bhūnu who belonged to Tintriṇī-gachchha, Kāpūr-gaṇa and Mūla-saṃgha. The Kannaḍa verses, which follow, extol the donor Madda-Heggade but tell us nothing material except that he belonged to the Paṅguḷa line (baḷi) and that he was the administrator of the beautiful town of Kāp. (Vv. 7-12.) The inscription then states that Rāmarājayya, though he was the lieutenant of king Sadāśivarāya, was ruling the (Vijayanagara) empire (ll. 18-21) and that Sadāśiva-Nāyaka (of Ikkēri) was the ruler of the districts of Bārakūru and Maṅgalūru. Next comes an eulogy of Madda-Heggade in an elaborate prose passage which tells us that he was administering the chief town of Kāp with (the help of) the assembly, communal and professional associations and subordinate officers. Then follows the formal portion of the grant. The lands granted were ¹ nāḷinavarū is the corrupt form of nāḷinavarū which comes from nāḷu meaning assembly.

² gaṇa 'is an aggregate of kulas' kulānām hi saṃghas = tu gaṇaḥ saṃprakīrtitaḥ (Kātyāyana, Vīramitrōdaya, p. 426; quoted by Dr. Pran Nath in his "Economic condition of Ancient India", p. 54); and paṇa is a sectarian division. Eighteen paṇas are referred to in an inscription of the 17th century, viz., Vyāvahārikas, pāṇchāias (five seats of alms), tumbhālikas (potters), tantutāyins (weavers), vastra-bhēdakas (cloth dyers?), tila-ghātakas (oil-millers), kuraṇṭakas (kuraṇṭakas? : shoe-makers), vastra-rakshakas (tailors), dēvāṅgas, parikeliti (parikeliti = keepers of pack-bullocks), gō-rakshakas (cow-herds), kirātas (bunters), rajakas (washer-men) and kshau-rakas (barbers). These formed a recognised part of the local assemblies. (Annual Report on South-Indian Epigraphy for 1918, part II, paragraphs 84 and 85.)

situated in the village of Mallāru and yielded an income of 80 varāhas.¹ This income, it states, was to be utilized for the daily rice offering, for the hālu-dhāre (milk-bath?) and for feeding the assembly (of sages) on the 17th and 25th days of every month. Provision was also made for extra expenses to be incurred when either of these days happened to be a Maṅgalā(ā)-t-ayōdaśī. Muni Charaṇavijayaaji from Poona has kindly pointed out that, according to the colophon of the Digambara Jaina work Yasōdharachariyā, Maṅgalā-trayōdaśī is the 13th day of the dark fortnight of Āśvina.

Sadāsiva-Nāyaka of the record was the first prominent chief of the Ikkēri-Keladi family which held sway over the whole of South Kanara and parts of the Mysore State from the 16th to the 18th century A. D.² Since very little is known about him, a short account of his career may be given here. He was the elder of the two sons of Chauḍappa, the governor of Mallādēsa, the younger being Bhadrappa. Soon after Sadāsiva succeeded his father, his first act was to reduce to submission by the order of Rāmarājayya, who was the de facto ruler of Vijayanagara, the kings of Bijāpur and Kalyāṇa. Immensely pleased with this achievement of Sadāsiva, the emperor appointed him governor of Chandragutti, Bārakūru and Maṅgalūru, besides bestowing on him the title of *Kōṭe-kōlāhala*³ (disturber of forts) and the privilege of affixing the term of honour rāya-nāyaka to his name. Sadāsiva's next expedition was against the rebellious chiefs of Chandragutti and Bidar and in recognition of his achievements he got the biruda of Satru-saptāṅgaharaṇa. He next put down the chiefs of Tuḷu and Kēraḷa and set up a pillar of victory. Shortly afterwards, he punished the defection of two chiefs named Yeḍava and Murārī in the country of Jālibāḷu and received as a reward the title of Yeḍava-Murārī from the emperor. Sometime later, he marched against Mādarasa of Baṅkāpura and took him prisoner. By this time Sadāsiva's younger brother Bhadrappa who had gone on a pilgrimage came back. After governing the provinces conjointly with his brother for sometime, Sadāsiva nominated him as his successor with the surname Immaḍi Sadāsiva-Nāyaka and retired to the forest.⁴

The date of Sadāsiva-Nāyaka may now be ascertained. Our grant is dated in Śaka 1479 (A.D. 1556). The latest date available for him, viz., Śaka 1486, Dundubhi⁵ (A.D. 1562) is furnished by a record at Maṇigārakēri near Bārakūr. And Śaka 1473, Sādhāraṇa⁶ (A.D. 1550) is the earliest date that we have for him from his inscriptions. In śaka 1488, Kshaya⁷ (A.D. 1566) Immaḍi Sadāsiva-Nāyaka is known to have been ruling. Sadāsiva-Nāyaka must, therefore, have ceased to rule sometime between A.D. 1562 and A.D. 1566. So the period in which he flourished may be taken to be A. D. 1550-1562. The date assigned to him by Rice, viz., A. D. 1513-1545 is, therefore, not correct.⁸ Here it is necessary to say a word about Immaḍi Sadāsiva-Nāyaka's place in the genealogy of the Keladi family. Though a number

¹ A varāha is equal to 3½ rupees. But the expression used here is doḍḍa-(big) varāha, the exact significance of which is not clear.

² For an account of this family see A. S. R. for 1911-12, pp. 196 ff; and Rice's Mysore and Coorg from Inscriptions, pp. 156 ff.

³ This title as well as others that follow are found in most of the inscriptions of the Nāyakas of Ikkēri.

⁴ This account is based on Kallōlas 2-5, Taranga V of the Sanskrit Encyclopaedia Śivatattvaratnākara edited by Messrs. B. Rama Rao, M.A., LL.B. and Vidvān P. Sundara Śāstri.

⁵ No. 168 of 1901, Annual Report on South-Indian Epigraphy, 1901.

⁶ Ep. Carn., Vol. VIII, Nagar 77.

⁷ Ibid., Nagar 1.

⁸ Mysore and Coorg from Inscriptions, table on p. 157.

of his inscriptions¹ has been discovered he has not been included in the table² of the house published by Rice, perhaps, because his relationship to other members of the dynasty was not known to that scholar. Now the work Śivatatvaratnākara enables us to say that Immaḍi Sadāśiva-Nāyaka was the younger brother and successor of Sadāśiva.

The sage Bhānu, who has been highly eulogised in the record, must have been one of the Jaina teachers of that name who were replaced by Lalitakīrti in about Śaka 1286.³ Nothing is known about Dēvachandradēva at whose instance the grant was made, his guru Munichandra-dēva and his guru Abhinavadēvakīrttidēva.

With regard to the geographical names occurring in the inscription, the village Mallāru may be identified with Mallūru in the Uḍipi Taluk; Beḷugūḷa is the well-known Śravana Beḷgoḷa in the Mysore State; Kopaṇa is Kopaḷ, a famous place of pilgrimage of the Jains in the Nizām's Dominions; Parvata is probably identical with Śrīśailam in the Kurnool District, which is one of the twelve great centres of Śaiva worship.⁴ Gōkarṇa is the village of that name in North Kanara; Tirumale is the celebrated Tirupati in the Chittoor District. Ūjjantagiri, which appears as Ūrjayat-giri in the Junāgaḍh inscription of Rudradāman,⁵ is the Mount Girnar on which there is an ancient temple of Nēminātha.

TRANSLATION.

L. 1. Obeisance to Dharmmanātha !

V. 1. For the translation of this verse see above, Vol. XIII, p. 22.

V. 2. Hail ! The illustrious Vardhamāna, the lord of Jinas, who adorns the seat (symbolic) of universal sovereignty of all knowledge and who brightens the Syādvāda school.

Vv. 3 and 4. Bhānu, the lord of sages, the ray of enlightenment of the moon to the Tim-triṇi-gachchha ocean, the swan in the lake of pure faith (i.e., Jainism), a lion to the elephant of religious disputants, the dispeller of the darkness of ignorance, the elephant among ascetics, shines in the sky of Kāpūr-gaṇa.

V. 5. The sage Bhānu who broke asunder the multitude of arrows of Cupid by his arrows, the five practices (*āchāras*²) is the lord of the ever prosperous Goddess of Penance

V. 6. The illustrious Bhānu, the lord of sages, the reducer of the masses of darkness to dust by hundred fresh rays of knowledge, stands victorious in the heavens of Syādvāda religion fostering eternal prosperity among the assemblage of lotuses in the (lake of) the pure Mūla-saṃgha and immersing sages, the herds of lovely kōkas, in the ocean of happiness.

V. 7. Madda-Heggaḍe, the ruler of the city of Kāp—be he ever radiant on the earth like the shining pendant worn by the king, in the form of the Tuḷu country.

V. 8. (This) jewel of the community of kings, the lord of the territory adorned by golden pinnacles, born in the Paṅguḷa lineage, a bee at the lotus feet of Jina the conqueror of Cupid, is being praised in assemblies (of great and learned men).

V. 9. The city known as Kāpu is the mirror of the goddess Earth ; therein shines the Jinapa Dharmmanātha honoured by the world.

V. 10. The lord of that city and the favourite of Fortune, king Tirumarasa, the ornament of the goddess Earth, gave himself up with one mind and with great zeal to (the service of) the Goddess of Final emancipation.

V. 11. How shall I describe (him) ? Madda-Heggaḍe is the wish-giving gem (chintāratna) for the four kinds of gifts, the abode of all virtues and the vanquisher of enemy kings who have haughty demeanour.

V. 12. King Tirumarasa possessed of firm faith in dharma granted a Jaina-śāsana (endowment) with one mind and with great devotion to his spiritual preceptor and got an inscription written (to that effect).

Ll. 18f. Hail ! Prosperity ! In the prosperous Śālivāhana Śaka year 1479 expired (corresponding to) the cyclic year Naḷa, on the 1st (day) of the bright half of Kārttika, on Sunday,

Ll. 19ff. when Rāmarājayya, who was, as it were, the Goddess of Fortune on the right side of the Mahārājādhirāja, the Paramēśvara, ocean of Truth, and adamant cage for those who seek refuge, the lord of the four oceans, the emperor of Kaliyuga, Virapratāpa-Sadāśivarāya, was protecting the kingdom under one umbrella and while Sadāśiva-Nāyaka was ruling (as viceroy) the (provinces of) Bārakūru and Maṅgalūru,

² The five āchāras are : 1. Darśan-āchāra (to induce steady faith), 2. Jñān-āchāra (to increase knowledge), 3. Charitr-āchāra (to improve one's daily life), 4. Tapa-āchāra (to become a great ascetic) and 5. Viry-āchāra (to increase the power of one's inner self). (Śravaṇa-Belgoḷa Inscriptions, Translations p. 54, f. n. 2).

Ll. 23ff. and while Madda-Heggaḍe who had the name Tirumalarasa, an ornament to the lotus face of the damsel the Tuḷuva country, the young sun (emerging from) the eastern mountain. viz., the throne of Kāp which is from time immemorial famous in all directions, (the incarnation as it were of) all the ancients like Bharata¹ radiant with the rays of multitudes of ornaments of fresh gems, the collection of many virtues, which were possessed by no other man of royal descent, viz., friendliness, generosity, prowess, sweetness, profundity, policy, politeness, truth and purity, etc., was ruling the chieftdom of Kāp assisted by his assembly, communal and professional guilds and his subordinate officers;

Ll. 28ff. hail! 'Munichandradēva, the disciple of Abhinavadēvakīrtidēva, the āchārya of the circle of royal preceptors, the lord of great disputants, emperor of all learned men, resplendant with several such biradas, the foremost (follower) of the Kāṇūr-gaṇa;

Ll. 31ff. his disciple Dēvachandradēva requested Tirumalarasa alias Madda-Heggaḍe, his assembly, communal and professional guilds and his officers to grant a piece of land with the help of several (people) of Kāp, with the intention of instituting a charity at Kāp for the final beatitude of his guru Munichandradēva;

Ll. 36ff. and as they were of a charitable temperament, they, out of devotion to their preceptor, granted, with pouring of water, on the western side of the village of Mallāru (situated) within their province, in the place called Kaḷantōpatina-bālke, on the inner side of the trench, one *beṭṭu*² land requiring seed (for sowing) of 2 mūḍe of paddy calculated at 30 *baḷla*³ (for each mūḍe) and outside the trench one wet land called Pāpinadi requiring 4 mūḍe calculated at 30 baḷla and a bāgila land requiring seed of 4 mūḍe calculated at 30 baḷla; (in all) three wet lands requiring seed of 10 mūḍe, with the properties attached to them, viz., kare, mure, house, well, jack-trees, mango-trees, sumbe, nikkil, urkkamrddē, crop, water and stone; (and Dēvachandradēva) received 80 big varāhas—in words eighty—(being the money income of the said lands).

Ll. 44ff. From this gold (was to be purchased), at both crops, 24 mūḍe of rice calculated at 50 baḷla of the standard prevalent in the bazaar. The (following are the) details of the charities to be managed with this rice:

Ll. 46ff. 10 mūḍe of rice for the rice offering at noon at the rate of one baḷla each day and for the hālu-dhāre, conducted in the name of Munichandradēva to Dharmanātha-Tirthamkara in the lower storey of the temple at Kāp; 12 mūḍe of rice for feeding Jain ascetics (samudāya) on 2 days in the month, viz., the 17th and 25th day. If either of these days happened to be a Mamgalā-trayōdaśī, 2 mūḍe of rice were provided for the extra expenses that would have to be incurred to celebrate that Mamgalā-trayōdaśī. Thus the total is 24 mūḍe.

Ll. 53f. In this place of charity the taxes *anāya*⁴ and *sanāya*⁵ were not to be levied by the *Ballālas*⁶; the Vokkalu had no *biṭṭi*⁷ and *biḍāra*⁸ and the fees kāṇike, dese and appaṇe could not be raised.

Ll. 55ff. (This is) the copper-plate inscription recording the sarvamānya gift caused to be written and granted by Tirumalarasa alias Madda-Heggaḍe, his assembly, communal and professional guilds and subordinate officers out of their own free will and devotion to their guru.

¹ Bharata was the brother of Bāhubali or Gommaṭa and son of Ādinātha, the first Tirthankara. (Above, Vol. VII, p. 108 and Mysore Arch. Rep. for 1913, p. 5).

² beṭṭu is a wet land capable of yielding one crop annually.

³ baḷla is equal to 2 seers generally.

⁴ āya generally means income but the import of anāya is not clear.

⁵ sanāya is perhaps a mistake for senāya, i.e., tax paid towards the maintenance of an army.

⁶ Ballālas are like the Heggaḍes, a sect of the Bant class (South Canara Manual, Vol. I, p. 159).

⁷ biṭṭi generally means free labour.

⁸ biḍāra is perhaps a mistake for birāḍa, a tax. (See S. I. I., Vol. IV, Nos. 255 and 275).

Ll. 58ff. The witnesses for this (transaction) are : Atikāri (Adhikārī) Kāmṭa-seṭṭi. Chaṭa Bika-seṭṭi, Sāmaṇi Saṃkara-seṭṭi Rāja-seṭṭi. Baḡge-seṭṭi's nephew Kēsaṇa. Mūlūra Beḷile, Birumāla Dugga and Baṃḍāri Birusāṃṇi. With the consent of all these. Saṃkayī-Sēṇabhōva of Maṃgalūr wrote this. Prosperity and good fortune to this charity deed !

Ll. 62ff. Imprecatory verses.

Ll. 65ff. Any one who violates this charity, if he is a Jaina, shall incur the sin of breaking the images of Gummatanātha of Belagūla, Chandranātha of Kopaṇa and Nēṃśvara of Ūjjan-tagiri and other Jaina idols ; if a Śaiva, he shall incur the sin of breaking a crore of liṅgas at Parvata, Gōkarṇa etc. ; if a Vaiṣṇava, he shall incur the sin of breaking a crore of images of Viṣṇu in (holy) places like Tirumale. May there be prosperity to the Jina-śāsana (doctrine). Fortune !

No. 9.—SAMOLI INSCRIPTION OF THE TIME OF SILADITYA ; [VIKRAMA-SAMVAT] 703.

BY R. R. HALDER, RAJPUTANA MUSEUM, AJMER.

This short inscription was found at Sāmōlī in the district of Bhōmaṭ in Mewār and is now preserved in the Rājputāna Museum at Ajmēr. Prof. D. R. Bhandarkar has already noticed it.¹ It consists of twelve well-engraved lines of writing, covering a space of about $9\frac{1}{2}'' \times 10\frac{1}{2}''$. The stone being slightly broken at the lower right corner, a portion of the inscription is missing. A few letters here and there are also indistinct. The average size of the letters is about $\frac{2}{5}''$. On account of its importance as the earliest inscription of the Guhila family of Mewār, a detailed notice of it is given below.

The characters belong to the northern class of alphabets of the acute-angled type. They are almost similar to those of the Udaipur inscription of Aparājita ² of V. S. 718 (A. C. 661) though the mātrās of the vowels ā, i, ī, u and ū have different forms. The language is incorrect Sanskrit and the inscription is written very carelessly. As a result, the metres employed do not always stand scanning, and the meaning is also not quite clear in a few places. As regards orthography, the following points may be noted :—n is used for ṇ in ripūnāṇi (l. 4), and ṇ for n in -jaṇānamndī- (l. 5) and -vāsiṇyā (l. 9) ; the anusvāra is used for m in -saṃbādham (l. 8) and is redundant in -jaṇānamndī- (l. 5) and -uṇtāditanim=āraṇya- (l. 7) ; the visarga is omitted in Harē (l. 2), -narapati (l. 5) etc., while it is redundant in -bhayāḥ (l. 2), -mahatarah (l. 10) and -janivaḥ (l. 4) etc. ; sandhi is not observed in *-jīvanam āgara*² (l. 6), -āgata ashtādaśa- (l. 7) and other places, while it is wrongly used in -nivaham mavālōkya (l. 3). Other mistakes and irregularities are pointed out in the text and the footnotes thereto.

The contents of the inscription may be summed up as follows :—After the invocation of the goddess Chaṇḍikā (ll. 1-4), the epigraph praises Śilāditya as the conqueror of his foes (ll. 4-5). Ll. 5-7 record that a Mahājana (community) headed by Jē[nta*]ka who had migrated from Vaṭa-nagara, started an āgara (? Skt ākara, a mine) in Āraṇyakūpagiri which became a source of livelihood for the people. In the next two lines it is said that the Mahatara (Mahattara) Jēntaka, at the command of the Mahājana, founded at the place a temple (dēvakula) of Arāṇyavāsini (Durgā), which was noted for its eighteen vautālikas (bards), hailing from different parts of the country and was always crowded with rich and wealthy people. The sense of the last two lines is not very clear, the inscription being broken at the corner. It appears, however, that the Mahatara Jēntaka, having seen the approach of the messengers of Yama entered fire (?) or committed suicide at the holy place of Dēbuvaka. The record ends with the date 703 Katika (Ārttika) di (?). Evidently the year belongs to the Mālava-Vikrama era and corresponds to 646 A.C.

As regards the personages mentioned in the inscription it would appear that Śilāditya was a scion of the Guhila family of Mewār. This inference is supported by the documents which have already been published—e.g., the Ātapura¹ inscription of Śaktikumāra, the inscription of Chitōr,² dated V. S. 1331, the Mt. Ābū³ inscription of Samarasimha. As has been pointed out by Prof. D. R. Bhandarkar,⁴ the name Śila in the Ātapura inscription stands for Śilāditya who was succeeded by Aparājita⁵ whose inscription, dated V. S. 718 (A. C. 661), has been alluded to above. Nothing of importance is recorded about the Mahatara Jēntaka.

Vaṭanagara of the inscription is evidently the same as Vaṭa⁶ (Vaṭapura) which has been identified with Vasantagaḍh⁷ in Sirōhī State and is about 16 miles from Sāmōlī, where the inscription was found.

This inscription is of special interest, as it enables us to rectify a mistake made in connection with the pedigree of Gōha. Col. Tod supposed that Gōha (Guhila, Guhadatta, Guhāditya, etc., the founder of the Guhila family of Mewār, to which Śilāditya of this inscription belongs) descended from the last Śilāditya (Śilāditya VI) of Valabhīpura.⁸ The Alinā copper-plate inscription⁹ of the last Śilāditya of Valabhīpura dated in Gupta Samvat 447 (A. C. 766-67), would show that he was the ruler of the Valabhī kingdom at least up to the date of his inscription, i.e., the latter half of the eighth century A. C.¹⁰ As the date of Śilāditya of the present inscription is Samvat 703 (A. C. 646), that of Gōha or Guhila, the fifth¹¹ predecessor from him, should fall in the latter half of the sixth century A. C., if an average reign of twenty years be assigned to each of the rulers preceding Śilāditya (of Mewār). Thus there is a difference of about two centuries between the reigns of Gōha (Guhila) of Mewār and the last Śilāditya of Valabhīpura. In other words, we might say that Gōha (Guhila) had established his rule in Mewār about two centuries prior to the break up of the Valabhī kingdom. Therefore Gōha could not have been the descendant of the last Śilāditya (Śilāditya VI) of Valabhīpura.¹²

⁹ C. I. I., Vol. III, pp. 171 ff. Dr. Fleet assigns the inscription to Śilāditya VII. In fact, Śilāditya II of his book (vide p. 41, introduction) did not actually reign at Valabhī (Ind. Ant., Vol. V, p. 208 and Duff's Chronology, p. 308). Hence Śilāditya VII ought to be Śilāditya VI. [This is a matter of opinion only; cf. Kielhorn's Northern List No. 487, footnote 5.—Ed.]

No. 10.—PATNA MUSEUM PLATES OF RANABHANJA—THE YEAR 22.

By R. D. BANERJI, M.A., BENARES.

These plates were sent to the late Dr. D. B. Spooner by Mr. L. E. B. Cadden-Ramsay, I.C.S., Political Agent, Orissa Feudatory States, in 1915-16.¹ A summary of the contents of the inscription they bear, as drawn by the late Rao Bahadur H. Krishna Sastri, was published in the Annual Progress Report of the Eastern Circle for that year.²

The plates are three in number and are joined together by a copper ring to which is attached a seal ($1\frac{7}{8}'' \times 1\frac{3}{8}''$) which is ellipsoid in shape and bears the legend Śrī-Raṇabhañjadēvasya. They are identical in size and measure $7\frac{1}{4}''$ by $4\frac{1}{2}''$ each. The first plate is inscribed on the inner side only while the remaining two bear inscription on both the faces. There are altogether fifty-seven lines of writing on these three plates, which are distributed as follows : the first plate has eleven lines, the second, eleven lines on each side ; and the third, twelve lines on each side. The writing on the whole is neat and clear but each line abounds in mistakes due both to the composer and the engraver.

The record is written in incorrect Sanskrit. The first eleven lines of it are in verse. They contain four stanzas of which the first three are already known from the two Baudh plates of the same prince.³ These verses contain an invocation to Śiva and the genealogy of the donor. This grant mentions two ancestors of Raṇabhañja, namely, Śilābhāñja and Śatrubhañja, while the Baudh grant (B) names only one, i.e., Śatrubhañja, his father. The object of the inscription is to record the grant of the village of Vāhiravādā which stood on the banks of the Mahānadī and was included in Dakṣiṇapali and the Khiṇjali-maṇḍala, to the god Vijaśara (Vijayēśvara), by Mahādēvi Vijyā (Vidyā) who was the daughter of the illustrious Rāṇaka Niyānāma. The god Vijaśara is evidently a Śiva-linga and the donor, the wife of Raṇabhañja himself. The document describes Raṇabhañja as a devout worshipper of Viṣṇu, the tilaka of the spotless Bhañja race and master of both the Khiṇjalis, who had obtained the five great 'śabdas' whose feet were worshipped by the Mahāsāmantas and who had obtained the blessing of the goddess Stambhēśvari.

Mahānadī is evidently the well-known river of that name in Orissa. Khiṇjali is mentioned in several Bhañja grants which have already been published. I am unable to identify the village Vāhiravādā.

The date of the inscription is, apparently, regular and is given in a half chronogram as Indu-vāk-viśanti varisē (= Indu-vāk-vimśati-varshē).⁴ Ordinarily this expression would denote the year 2011 of some era but the Baudh plates (B) which are written in the same script as this inscription would show that it stands for 22, vāk being taken in the sense of 1.⁴

I edit the inscription from the original plates which were kindly placed at my disposal by Sir Edward Gait, I.C.S., K.C.I.E., the then Lieutenant-Governor of Bihār and Orissa.

² P. 4, para. 5.

³ Above, Volume XII, pp. 323-28.

⁴ [But vāk (vāch) does not mean 'one' though it might stand for 'four' as it is supposed to have four stages, namely Parā, Paṭyanti, Madhyamā and Vaikhari.—The reading, however, is not certain.—Ed.]

No. 11.—THE KADAMBAPADRAKA GRANT OF NARAVARMAN—V.S. 1167.

By R. D. BANERJI, M.A.¹

The inscription edited below is incised on two thick plates of copper which weigh 15 lbs. 7 oz. and now belong to Mr. J. J. Gardar of Nepean Sea Road, Bombay, who purchased them at some place in Central India, and lent to me in November, 1920, for publication. There are two holes in each of these plates through which they appear to have been once tied together by means of two rings like many of the Valabhī plates which have now been published. There is no seal attached to them but a kneeling figure of Garuḍa, holding a snake in each hand, is incised at the proper right corner of the second plate, as is seen in the Dharampurī plates² of Vākpatirāja of V.S. 1031, the Ujjain plates³ of Bhōjadēva of V.S. 1078 and the Māndhātā plates⁴ of Jayasimha I of V.S. 1112. The plates measure $12\frac{1}{8}$ " by 8" each and are incised on one side only. In all, there are twenty-nine lines of writing on them, seventeen being incised on the first plate and twelve on the second. The average height of letters is $\frac{3}{8}$ ".

The language of the inscription is Sanskrit. With the exception of two verses at the beginning, two in the middle and five imprecatory stanzas at the end, the record is written in prose. It refers itself to the reign of the Paramabhaṭṭāraka-Mahārājādhirāja-Paramēśvara, the illustrious Naravarmadēva, who meditated on the feet of the P. M. P., the illustrious Udayādityadēva, who meditated on the feet of the P. M. P., the illustrious Bhōjadēva, who meditated on the feet of the P. M. P., Sindhurājadēva.

The object of the charter is to register the grant of certain pieces of land given on different occasions to a Brāhmaṇa named Dvivēda Āsā(śā)dhara, son of Nārāyaṇa of the Kātyāyana-gōtra and Mādhyandina-śākhā. The gift-land consisted of twenty nivarttanās given by the king Naravarmadēva himself on the 12th day of the bright half of Māgha in the year 1167 (=Thursday, the 3rd February, 1110 A.D.) when this grant was issued. The charter also refers to a previous grant of twenty halas of land, out of which ten halas were given by the Mahāmaṇḍalika Rājadēva on the 15th day of the bright half of Kārttika in the year 1154, four halas by his daughter-in-law,⁵ the illustrious Mahādēvī, probably on the same date, and six halas by the king himself, on the 15th day of the bright half of Pausa in the year 1159 on the occasion of the Bhūtaraprana (Bhūtarātri ?)-parvan.⁶ Thus, three different dates are mentioned in the inscription, probably, with a view to bringing together all the grants of land made to the donee up to the time when the present charter was issued. The gift-land lay in the village of Kadambapadraka which was in possession of the Mahāmaṇḍalika Rājya(ja)dēva and was situated in the pratijāgarāṇaka of Mandāraka in the Upēndrapura-maṇḍala. The measurement was called a plough measure (hala) which was of ninety-six rods (daṇḍas). The length of the daṇḍa in Mālwā at this period is unknown. A town named Upēndrapura is mentioned in the Ranod inscription⁷ of the Mattamayūra ascetics which seems to have given its name to the maṇḍala. I am unable to identify either Kadambapadraka or Mandāraka. The grant was issued under the sign manual of the Mahārāja Naravarmadēva and the Dūtaka of the charter was Ṭhakkura Kēsava.

Om Hail ! (May there be) prosperity, victory and success. Let that Vyōmakēśa (Śiva), who, for the sake of the creation, holds on his head the crescent of the moon which has a form like the shoot from the seed of the Universe, be victorious (1). P.* the illustrious Udayādityadēva, who meditated on the feet of the P. M. P. the illustrious Sindhurājadēva, being in good health, informs the various officers, Brāhmaṇas and others, Paṭṭakilas and inhabitants of towns, assembled in the village of Kadambapadraka which is being enjoyed by the Mahāmaṇḍalika śrī-Rājadēva (and which is situated) in the prati-jāgarāṇaka of Mandāraka of the Upēndrapura-maṇḍala. Let it be known to you that while residing at Dhārā, having bathed and worshipped Bhagavān (Śiva) the ruler of the world and the lord of Bhavānī and having perceived the worthlessness of the world—as it is said, “This ownership of the earth is (as transient) as clouds moved by the wind, the enjoyment of property is sweet only for the time being, lives (of men) are (as unstable) as drops of water on the points (of blades) of grass, Dharma is the only friend in the journey to the other world (3). Those who, having obtained this fortune which is as unstable as the sharp edge of the moving wheel of the world, do not give it (to the needy or the deserving), for them the only result will be great repentance afterwards (4). So, having ascertained the transient nature of the world and having agreed to the result of fate, with great devotion, twenty nivartanas of land, measured by the rod of ninety-six parvas in length (?) and forty-two in breadth (?) from the above-mentioned village² are given by us, to last as long as the sun, the moon, the earth and the sea, to the Brāhmaṇa Dvivēda Āśādhara, son of Dikshita Dēvaśarman and grandson of Dvivēda Nārāyaṇa, who was an immigrant from Śringapura, situated in the Middle-country (Madhyadēśa), who belonged to the Kātyāyana-gōtra with the three pravaras Kātyāyana, Kapila and Viśvāmitra, (and) who was a student of the Mādhyandina-sākhā. Also³ twenty plough measures of land were given by the Mahāmaṇḍalika, the illustrious Rājadēva on the 15th day of the bright half of Kārtika, in the year 1154, from land being enjoyed by him and therefore retailed (? vaddhā-pita); also ten plough measures given by the illustrious Mahādēvī, the daughter-in-law of the Mahāmaṇḍalika, the illustrious Rājadēva. So also four plough measures given in a previous kalpa; so also six plough measures given by us on the occasion of the festival of Bhūtaraprana(?) on the 15th day of the bright half of Pausa, in the year 1159. Thus, the twenty plough measures of land, in its regular order, with its boundaries, with rights of grass, yūti and pasturage, with rights of mining gold, of shares and easements with additional taxes and with all other income is given for the increase of the merit and fame of our own self and of our father and mother, by means of a (copper)-plate after a previous libation of water. Having regard to this, all shares, easements, taxes, rights of gold mining, etc., hitherto given by the Paṭṭakilas and the townsmen inhabiting the place, are to be given to him (the donee). ¹ [The passage may be translated as ‘twenty nivartanas of land from the abovementioned village out of the forty-two (nivartanas) measured by the rod of ninety-six parvas,’ etc.—N. P. C.]

² [The meaning of the word kalpita as used in the text is not certain. This term also occurs in the grants of Bhōjadēva of V.S. 1078 (*Ind. No. 12.—TWO SINDA INSCRIPTIONS FROM BENACHAMATTI, SAKA 1088 AND SAKA 1109.

BY R. S. PANCHAMUKHI, M.A., OOTACAMUND.

These two records are engraved on a stone tablet lying in front of the temple of Īśvara at Benachamatti in the Gajēndragāḍ State which is included in the Ron taluk of the Dhārwar district. They are edited here for the first time from the estampages secured by me under the orders of the Government Epigraphist for India in the year 1927-28.¹ The first inscription covers an area of 2' 9½" by 2' 3½", the size of each letter being about ½" in height. The area occupied by the second inscription is 2' 3½" by 6½" and the size of each letter is roughly ½". The latter is the continuation of the former. I am calling them A and B respectively for the sake of convenience. They are in a fairly good state of preservation excepting that some letters of B are lost at the right corner of the lower edge where the stone is broken.

Both the inscriptions are Kannaḍa records of the twelfth century of the Christian era. In A the long ī is distinguished from the short one by an inside coil at the top as in pāḥina (l. 1), Chāṇḍalādēvi (l. 19), etc.; the u-sign at times has a short downward bend by the side of the letter with which it is connected as, for example, in Chāvūṇḍa (l. 10), sudhā (l. 11), etc.; the ai-sign is represented, in some cases, by a horizontal line at the bottom of the letter concerned with a curve on the left side and, in others, by a cursive upward stroke shooting from the bottom to the right end, as in Mandara-dhairyaṃ (l. 18), sainyaṃ (l. 26); the letters m, y and v have very often been represented by their special cursive forms as in baḷiyiṃ (l. 6), y-aḷiyāṃ (l. 7), and dēv-āyatanamumaṃ (l. 37) respectively; the anusāra is written by the side of the letter connected therewith in four places, i.e., in yenisidam (l. 19), kulaṃgaḷiṃ (l. 29), dēv-āyatanamumaṃ (l. 37) and gāmbhīrya (l. 42). The Orthography is generally free from errors. It may be noted that in A the engraver has filled up the space left at the end of lines 3, 6, 10, 12, 13, 20, 24, 35, 38, 41, 46, 49, 51 and 52 by the addition of a superfluous mark resembling the English letter S. In B the consonant ḷa is, in several places, wrongly used for ḷa, as in pāḷa (ll. 3, 5 and 6), kaḷagaḷoḷu (l. 5), etc., and the letter te in Nōhilana teradi (l. 4) is written like ḷe.

Excepting the first verse which is in Sanskrit, A is written in Kannaḍa poetry interspersed with prose in ll. 8, 10, 31, 32, 36-38 and 44-54. B is also composed in Kannaḍa poetry with a prose passage in ll. 10-16.

After the usual invocation to Śambhu (i.e., Śiva), A describes the ocean (ll. 2-3), the Jambūdvīpa and the Mēru mountain (ll. 3-4), the Kumtala country and its past kings (ll. 4-5) and the reigning sovereign Kaḷachurya Bijjaṇa who is stated to have wrested the royal glory from the (Western) Chāḷukyas (ll. 5-7). It then introduces Bijjaṇa's son-in-law Chāvūṇḍa-nṛipa of the Sinda family whose pedigree is given in lines 8-29. Further it tells us that, of the seven brothers—namely Ācharasa, Nāka, Siriga, Dāsa, Dāvāṇa, Chāvūṇḍa and Chāva—Chāvūṇḍa was a powerful warrior and that to Ācharasa was born Bammarasa, a moon to the ocean of the Sinda family. His brother was the renowned Ācharasa (II), son of Siriga (or Singa). To him were born Perma by queen Mahadēvi and Chāvūṇḍa (II) by queen Chāṇḍalādēvi. Of Chāvūṇḍa it is recorded that when the Hoysala king met him with a huge army, the Sinda prince destroyed its general together with other opponents and captured his elephants in large numbers. Again when the Pāṇḍya chieftain Kāmanṛipa waged a war against Chāvūṇḍa with a view to conquer him, he met with a crushing defeat and had to flee away for life in the forest. When Chāvūṇḍa was ruling his territory from his capital at Erambarage (which is compared in lines 28-31 to the celestial Amarāvati, Ayōdhyā, Mathurā and Ujjayinī), the Fifty Families of Telligas extolled in ll. 32-36 constructed the temple of Telligēśvara in the south-east quarter of that town and made certain gifts to it after laving the feet of Chāṇḍramauḷi-vratin of the Lākūḷa sect, the āchārya of Simhēśvara-maṭha,¹ on the day specified in ll. 46-47 during the reign of the Kaḷachurya king Tribhuvanamalla Bijjaṇadēva (ll. 44-45). Lines 38-44 give the genealogy of the Āchārya Chāṇḍramauḷi-vratin as follows :—Vigrahēśvara-vratin, his disciple Yogēśvara-yati and his disciple Chāṇḍramauḷi-yati.

Inscription B introduces, after prayer to the god Telligēśvara, mentioned above, Vira-Bijjaḷa and Vira-Vikrama as sons of Chāvuṇḍa by Sridēvi and describes the elder of the two, namely Vira-Bijjaḷa, as a great devotee of Śiva like Nāmbi² and Ohila³ and a scholar like Bāṇa (ll. 1-4). His wife was Tripurādēvi (l. 5). His brother Vikrama was a munificent donor and an invincible warrior looking majestic as if he was a Chakravartin (ll. 6-9). In lines 10-12, the two brothers are mentioned with the usual titles, Mahāmaṇḍalēśvara, Sāhasōttuṅga, etc., as ruling over Kisukāḍu-70, Bāgaḍage-70, Keḷavaḍi-300, Nareyaṅgal-12 and Kariviḍi-3[0]. At the request of the Fifty Telligas and a certain Murhaya-Sāhaṇi they are stated to have granted some land to the temple of Telligēśvara (ll. 13-16) on the date specified in lines 12 and 13.

The details of the date given in A are :—Śaka 1088, Vyaya, Pushya amāvāsyā, Monday, Uttarāyaṇa-saṁkrānti and vyatipāta. They are not quite regular. The Pushya amāvāsyā ended on Sunday at '95 and the Makara (Uttarāyaṇa)-saṁkrānti had occurred on Mārgaśīrsha ba. 30, Saturday (24th December). The date intended probably was Monday, 23rd January, A.D. 1167 which was a day of Kumbha-saṁkrānti in Uttarāyaṇa.

The details of the date given in inscription B are :—Śaka 1109, the cyclic year Plavaṅga, chaturdaśi, Monday, Saṁkrānti. According to Swamikannu Pillai's Ephe-meris, chaturdaśi combined with a saṁkrānti did not fall on Monday in any of the months of Plavaṅga. But, for Chaitra śu. 14 which was a day of Mēsha-saṁkramaṇa, the details would be correct except for the week day which was a Tuesday. The nearest equivalent would, therefore, be 24th March, A.D. 1187.

The two inscriptions under publication are important inasmuch as they furnish in unambiguous phraseology the genealogy of the Sinda princes of Erambarage from Āchugi I down to Vira-Bijjaṇa and Vira-Vikramāditya, sons of Chāvuṇḍa II. Inscription A reveals for the first time that Perma and Chāvuṇḍa were the sons of Ācharasa II from different mothers, viz., Mahādēvi and Chāṇḍaladēvi respectively and thus supplements the information contained in the Ron record⁴ of A.D. 1180, where they are represented apparently as full brothers. The genealogy given in A is in perfect agreement with the one gathered from the published records⁵ of the family, although an ambiguous verse in the Paṭṭadakal inscription⁶ "ātana tammaṁ Siṁga-maḥi-taḷa-patiy=ātan=ātmajātām bhuvana-khyātām.....negal=Ācharasaṁ" had led Fleet⁷ to introduce another Siṁgi (II) and make him the father of Āchugi (II). Dr. Barnett

² Nāmbi probably refers to Sundaramūrti-Nayanār who was known as Nāmbi-Ārūrār. See Tamil Lexicon S. V.

³ Ohila was a great devotee of the god Sōmanātha in Saurāshtra. The story of his guileless devotion is narrated in the 43rd and 44th chapters of the Basava-Purāṇam of Bhimakavi.

⁵ So far, only eight records of the Erambarage branch of the Sinda princes are critically edited : J. B. R. A. S., Vol. XI, pp. 224-30 ; 239-42 ; 247-49 ; 253-55 ; 259-66 ; 274-75 (re-edited in Ind. Ant., Vol. IX, p. 96) and above Vols. XV, p. 109 and XIX, p. 227.

⁶ J. B. R. A. S., Vol. XI, p. 257.

who has written an excellent note on the Sinda chiefs in this journal¹, evidently followed Fleet in this respect; but, while editing the Sūdi inscription of the Kaḷachurya king Saṁka-madēva, he felt the incongruity of this interpretation and remarked "it seems to confuse Āchugi's brother Siṅgi I with the former's son Siṅghi II."² Since the Ron record edited by the same scholar states clearly that Ācharasa II was the son of Siṅga, a brother of Āchugi I, he has recognised this difference as being only a variant version of the pedigree recorded in the Sūdi inscription mentioned above. But it may be remarked that all the epigraphs, if understood properly with the aid of A, yield the same genealogy. The verse in praise of Āchugi II in A runs as follows :—

ātan=anujātan=avani-khyātaṁ śrī-Siṁha-jātan=ūddhata-ripu-saṁghāta-hati-niratan= enisidan=ātata-tējaṁ pratāpadimḍ=Ācharasaṁ (ll. 13-14)

meaning that his (i.e., Bammarasa's) brother was the powerful Ācharasa who was the son of Siṁha. This statement is fully borne out by the relevant portion in the Sūdi inscription, viz.,³ vistarīsidud=alli Siṁgarasaṁ=ātmajan=Āchugimaṇḍalēśvaraṁ (l. 24), i.e., among them (alli) Siṁgarasa's son was Āchugimaṇḍalēśvara. As Ācharasa II is thus described in unmistakable terms to be the son of Siṁha without introducing any prince of the latter name before, excepting Āchugi (I)'s brother Siṅga, there is no other alternative but to suppose that he was the son of this Siṅga and consequently a cousin of Bammarasa I. The expression 'ātana tammam' must, therefore, be taken to mean his brother, i.e., the brother of Āchugi I.

We know from inscriptions at Arasibiḍi⁴ and Kaṭgēri⁵ that Chāvunḍa had married three queens, namely, Dēmaladēvi, Lakshmādēvi and Siriyādēvi, of whom the last two were the daughters of the Kaḷachurya King Bijjala. He begot on Dēmaladēvi, Āchugi III and Permaḍi III and on Siriyādēvi, Vira-Vijjaṇa and Vira-Vikrama, the donors of inscription B. Vira-Vijjaṇa's queen was Tripurādēvi. The portion containing the name of Vikrama's wife is unfortunately broken off.

The Sinda chiefs who played an important part in the mediaeval history of Kaṇṇāṭaka began their political career as feudatories of the Western Chāḷukyas of Kalyāṇi during the last quarter of the 11th century A. D. The first prince of the family was Āchugi I who is described in the Sūdi and Niḍgundi⁶ inscriptions with the significant epithet "āḍimaṇḍalika," thereby indicating that with him came into being the rule of the Sinda princes of Erambarage. From the fact that he is extolled as *Vikramādityana kaṭṭid-alagu*⁷ (a sharpened sword-edge of Vikramāditya VI) and that his son Bammarasa was, according to an epigraph at Savaḍi,⁸ ruling Kisukāḍu and other provinces in the Chāḷukya Vikrama year 7 (A. D. 1083), the origin of the family as a ruling power may be placed in or about A. D. 1076, the year of Vikramāditya's accession to the throne. It is therefore not possible that the Mahāmaṇḍalēśvara Singappa-dēva of a Niḍgundi inscription⁹ who was governing Kisukāḍu-70 in A. D. 1076 under Bhuvanaikamaliadēva, could be identical with the Sinda prince Siṅga I as originally suggested by Fleet¹⁰ and still accepted by Dr. Barnett in his note referred to above. There is no evidence to show that Āchugi's brother Siṅga ruled at all whereas it can be definitely inferred from inscription A that Bammarasa, the son and successor of Āchugi I was succeeded by Āchugi II, the son of Simha to whom there is only a passing reference.¹ Bammarasa had, according to the Pattadakal record, won the favour of the reigning sovereign, i.e., Vikramāditya VI and received from him a position of honour and rank in the State. His territory comprised Kisukāḍu-70 and Narayaṅgal-12.² He appears to have died without issue as, otherwise, the Sinda throne would not have passed to the descendants of his uncle Simha. From an inscription at Arasibīdi³ which states that Mahāmaṇḍalēśvara [Ava]rarasa was administering under Vikramāditya VI, Kisukāḍu-70 and Karivīdi-30 in A.D. 1087, it may be surmised that at the time of Bammarasa's death, Āchugi II was either a minor or not powerful enough to assert the rights of his family. Subsequently, however, he appears to have acquired possession of his hereditary provinces through the favour of Vikramāditya, which, thereafter, continued in his line till the end. Only three dates⁴, viz., 1113-14, 1121-22 and 1125-26 are known for Āchugi II who defeated, for his master Vikramāditya VI, the Pāṇḍya, Hoysaḷa and other rebels. Thus it may be stated that the three chiefs from Āchugi I to Āchugi II were the feudatories of the Western Chālukya emperor Vikramāditya VI and took a prominent part in the conquests of their overlord.

After Āchugi II, the two brothers Permāḍi⁵ and Chāvūṇḍa II held the Sinda territory as subordinates of Perma-Jagadēkamalla and Trailōkyamalla Taila III, respectively. It was during the latter's reign that the Chālukya dominions were usurped by Kaḷachurya Bijjaḷa who is described in A as having dragged by force the lady of the Chālukya sovereignty. Permāḍi is stated in his inscriptions to have vanquished Kuḷaśēkhara, besieged and decapitated Chatta pursued Jayakēśi and seized the royal power of Hoysaḷa Vishnuvardhana.⁶ The Ron inscription adds that he "captured the Hoysaḷa king's elephants as well as his treasure-waggon." In the present record (A), however, the defeat of the Hoysaḷa king's army and the capture of his elephants are attributed to Chāvūṇḍa II for whom we have several dates ranging from A. D. 1151⁷ to 1160-70. Besides, he is credited with having put to flight a certain Pāṇḍya chieftain named Kāmadēva. These events must be different from those noticed above⁸. For, it is natural that the Hoysaḷa prince should again have risen in vengeance against the declining power of the Chālukyas and tried to assert independence and that the Sindas, as faithful servants of the Chālukyas, should have checked his aggression on the battle-field. And Kāmadēva, evidently Kāmadēva of Uchchangi, otherwise known as Vijayapāṇḍyadēva, who succeeded his brother Vira-Pāṇḍya sometime after A.D. 1148⁹ and lived on up to at least A.D. 1189¹⁰, was for a longer period a contemporary of Chāvūṇḍa II than of his elder brother Permāḍi. It is worth noticing that Chāvūṇḍa, who had abstained from acknowledging the Kaḷachurya suzerainty in his earlier records dated before A. D. 1163,¹¹

¹ Not a single known inscription has described Simha independently except as the father of Ācharasa II. This would suggest that he never enjoyed any power.

² Savaḍi inscription referred to above.

⁵ An inscription at Kōḍikop bearing an impossible date in Śaka 872 introduces this prince as a feudatory of Vikramāditya VI. Since we know that his father Āchugi was living in A. D. 1125-26, the last year of Vikramāditya, it may be presumed that he ruled conjointly with his father or his father must have died in that year so that Permāḍi, who succeeded him, could become Vikramāditya's feudal chief.

though it was well established by then, had begun to recognise it by A. D. 1167, as is evident from the preamble to the grant portion of inscription A. It appears that he was holding the reins of government in conjunction with his sons Āchugi and Permādi in A. D. 1163 when the Pattadakal inscription was engraved. It is not known under what circumstances the Sinda chiefdom passed to the sons of Siriyādēvi after the death of Chāvūṇḍa II.

Chāvūṇḍa's rule must have ended in A. D. 1169-70, for we find his sons Vira-Bijjaṇa and Vira-Vikrama ruling over Kisukāḍu-70, Bāgaḍage-70, and Keḷavaḍi-300 in A. D. 1170 as recorded in the Aihole inscription¹ dated in Virōdhin, corresponding to the 94th year of the Chāḷukya Vikrama era, whereas an epigraph from Hirēmaṇṇūr² bearing the date Śaka 1091 (A.D. 1169) introduces Chāvūṇḍa as a donor of some gift. Further the Harti inscription³ of Vira-Bijjaṇa dated in the cyclic year Vijaya falling in his 7th year fixes the date of his accession sometime in Virōdhin. Vira-Bijjaṇa and Vira-Vikrama appear to have ruled conjointly as is shown by the preamble to inscription B which states that both the princes were ruling together from their capital at Erambarage. This is corroborated by other inscriptions also.⁴ There are, however, a few epigraphs⁵ which were issued by the two brothers independently of each other. But this does not vitiate the above conclusion inasmuch as joint rulers could make donations separately as well. There are reasons to hold that the two princes were very young when they were invested with power. Two inscriptions at Nidgundi⁶ with dates in Śaka 1094 (A. D. 1172) and Śaka 1096 (A. D. 1174) style them as kumāras and introduce paṭṭamahādēvi Siriyādēvi as making some gifts in conjunction with her two children. This seems to indicate that their mother Siriyādēvi was actually governing the Sinda territory as regent during their minority.⁷ That they were children then, as said above, is rendered quite probable by a record⁸ of A. D. 1220 in which year Vikramāditya was still holding the Sinda dominions under the Yādava Siṃgaṇaḍēva, after a rule of not less than fifty years.

It is significant to note that inscription B does not mention any overlord but proceeds to describe the two brothers straightaway as if they were independent rulers. After the Kaḷachurya usurpation which lasted for twenty years, the Sindas retransferred their allegiance to the Chāḷukyas under Sōmēśvara IV, who revived his ancestral sovereignty in A. D. 1183. Sometime after this date, the Chāḷukya territory appears to have again become a prey to the constant attacks of the Yādavas of Dēvagiri on the north and the Hoysaḷas of Dvārasa-mudra on the south. During this period of turmoil, the Sinda princes must have declared independence. This is indicated by the expression "Chakravarti-padavi-patiy=inn=itan=enal=esevan=urvi-khyāta-yasam Vira-Vikramāvanipālām" in inscription B which means that the powerful Vikrama was then the fit person to bear the title of Chakravartin. But this independence did not continue long, for we find from the Amnigere and Gadag inscriptions of Yādava Bhillamaḍēva, dated respectively in A. D. 1189 and 1191, that the Yādava king held the country south of the Malaprabhā and Kṛishṇā as well as the northern provinces,⁹ thus precluding the possibility of the Sindas remaining free and unassailed. Since Jaitugi counts his reign from the latter date, Bhillama must have died in that year probably in an encounter with Vira-Ballāḷa. This is proved by the existence of Vira-Ballāḷa's record at Gadag itself dated in A. D. 1192 and by the statements contained in his Anṇigere inscription¹ of A. D. 1202 representing Bhīllama as having been killed in the fight. The Harihar inscription of his son Narasimha II adds to his father's conquests the capture of all the strongholds between Soratūr, Erambarage, Kurugōḍ, Gutti, Bellittage, etc.² From this it is evident that Vira-Ballāḷa had successfully wrested from the Yādava king some portion of the territory which the latter had taken from Sōmēśvara IV, subjugated the Sindas of Erambarage and made them pay homage to his banner. The Yādavas, however, were not keeping quiet all this while. They were biding time to reclaim the lost country. Jaitugi's son Siṃgaṇadēva who carried his conquests far and wide led an expedition against the Hoysaḷas during the last days of Vira-Ballāḷa and snatched back from him the portion of land lying to the south of the Kṛishṇā and Malaprabhā and even extended his arms farther south as is proved by his inscription at Baḷagāṃve³ in Mysore, dated in A. D. 1215. This event must have taken place in or about A. D. 1210 for, an epigraph at Dōṇi⁴ states that the sixteenth year of Siṃgaṇadēva's entry into that tract corresponded to the cyclic year Vijaya (A. D. 1226). This statement proves that the Yādavas were once again in possession of the territory under contest which must have included Kisukāḍu-70 of the Sindas. That the Sinda chiefs became their subordinates and continued to acknowledge their suzerainty till the end is clear from a stone record at Kaḷakappanagudda⁵ in which the Sinda Vikramāditya figures as a feudatory of Siṃgaṇadēva in the latter's 21st regnal year falling in Vikrama, i.e., A. D. 1220. Nine years later, we find Mahāpradhāna Vāsudēva-Nāyaka ruling under the orders of Siṃhaṇa, Erambarage "which had caused itself to be called the capital of Kisukāḍu-70"⁶. Presumably the Sinda prince Vikrama had passed away between A.D. 1220 and 1229 and his territory was then annexed to the Yādava kingdom, thus ending the rule of the Sinda chiefs after a glorious career of about 150 years.

From the facts set forth in the foregoing pages, a revised genealogy of the Sinda princes with dates is reconstructed below for the sake of ready reference.

The following places and subdivisions are mentioned in the two records :—the celestial Amarāvati, Āyōdhye, Madhure, Ujjayini, Erambarāpuram, Kallūru, Kisukādu-70, Bāgaḍage-70, Keḷavaḍi-300, Nareyaṃgal-12 and Kariviḍi-30. Of these Kallūru is the modern village of that name near Mushigēri in the Ron taluk of the Dhārwar district. On Kisukādu-70 and Kariviḍi-30 see Fleet's exhaustive note in Indian Antiquary, Vol. XXX, pp. 259 ff. Bāgaḍage-70 comprised a portion of the modern Bāgalkot taluk in the Bijāpur district with Bāgaḍage, i.e., Bāgalkot as its chief town. Keḷavaḍi-300 derived its name from its chief place Keḷavaḍi which is at present a small village in the Bādāmi taluk of the Bijāpur district. Nareyaṃgal-12 was a small circle of villages with its headquarters at Nareyaṃgal, i.e., the modern Naregal in the Ron taluk of the Dhārwar district. The remaining places are too well known to require any remarks.

lady, the land of Kumtala by resorting to strength of arms, after conquering the refractory (chiefs) so as to be highly praised by the whole circle of Earth.

V. 6. The son-in-law of the emperor was the well-behaved prince Chāvunḍa of white fame, a tough warrior, renowned on earth as a Gandharva of the Kali age. As regards the genealogy of that high-souled (hero) :

V. 7. King Āchugi's brothers, viz., prince Nāka, Śiṃga, the chief of kings, the famous Dāsarasa endowed with valour befitting his rank, the valiant Dāvana, king Chāvunḍarasa, a handsome lover of victory and prosperity and the virtuous prince Chāva were (powerful) like a thunderbolt to mountains, the kings of uncomparable prowess. Among them

V. 8. the brave king Chaunḍa, born of the Sinda family, ever praiseworthy shines on earth with the splendour of fortune and fame unsullied like the nectar-rayed (moon), looting and crushing the foes in furious rage when the confederacy of hostile armies met him in fight.

V. 9. Among them, to Ācharasa was born Bammarasa, a moon to increase the ocean, the Sinda (lin. age), brilliant with fame, a repository of great prowess and endeared to victory and wealth.

V. 10. His younger brother was Ācharasa of exceeding splendour who, born of the illustrious Simha and renowned on earth was, on account of his valour, (known to be) ever engaged in killing the hosts of haughty foes.

V. 11. The wife of Ācha-bhūpa, thus described, was known by (lit. shore with) the name Mahādēvi and was of noble family, prudent, extremely calm in disposition, kind and possessed of good fortune.

V. 12. To king Acha and the beautiful Mahādēvi was born the powerful prince Perma, famed like a Gandharva, exceedingly brave, pleasing in conduct, who rendered the battlefields impure with pure and rolling tears proceeding from the eyes of the young wives (lit. girls) of the collection of enemy kings who rose in battle.

V. 13. The younger brother of that Perma-bhūpa was the renowned chief Chāvunḍa a Cupid in form, possessed of a number of excellent qualities and who was a woe to the trembling hearts of the enemy kings.

V. 14. Chāvunḍa, son of Charṇadaladēvi, courageous like Mount Mandara and expert in playing with the rows of balls, the heads of the groups of hostile kings, attained fame glowing like the clear moon.

V. 15. The king Chāvunḍa was, when exasperated, a storm to disperse the gathering of clouds, the formidable hostile kings, a brilliant ray of the moon to remove the enveloping and dense darkness, the sins of the Kali age, with fame encompassing the oceans. (A bestower) of magnificent gifts he shone like a bolt to tear asunder the mountains, the vanities of groups of scholars.

V. 16. When the army of the Hoysala king who had prepared himself for battle met him bravely with a united front, prince Chāvunḍa, the moon in the ocean of the Sinda family stepping forth valiantly (lit. with valorous steps) rushed through, burning like the sun, killed its general and other opponents and, further, captured groups of fierce and intoxicated elephants.

V. 17. What hero, indeed, would equal the ornament of the Sinda family who was the master of valiant marauders that stimulated themselves by twisting their moustaches after destroying completely brave warriors, feeling disgusted to fight and kill those that were timid, those that sought his protection, those that cast away their garment through fear and stood (helpless) and those that got down on earth from horse (back) ?

V. 18. Puffed up at (the strength of) his fourfold army and itching with the might of his arms the Pāṇḍya chieftain started immediately and met king Chāvunḍa with force to conquer him (Chāvunda) conquered (his) army single-handed. Seeing it king Kāma threw off his garment and losing (hopes of) victory fled by the forest track turning his back.

V. 19. Just as Amarāvati looked ever beautiful with Indra who was bowed to (by all), Ayōdhyā with the descendant of Raghu (i.e., Rāmachandra), the lovely Mathurā with Gōvinda, Ujjayini with Gutta and Hastināpura with the son of Marut (i.e., Bhīmasēna), so also Eranbarāpura attained much gracefulness with the Sinda chief Chāvunda.

V. 20. Eranbarāpura shines greatly on the face of this charming earth with temples, numerous palaces containing groups of maidens, houses of gods on earth, i.e., Brāhmaṇas, and of the hosts of Vaiśyas who resembled Kubēra (in wealth) and with the hermitages of ascetics in sacred groves of penance.

V. 21. There, Fifty Families of Telligas (i.e., oilmen), endowed with pleasing virtues and possessing brilliant fame (bright) as white clouds, were like bees on the pure and full-blown lotuses, the two feet of Śiva.

V. 22. Further, the bright Earth is ever pleased with the deserving Fifty Families and praises them high saying "they are like the ocean capable of protecting the mountains, the refugees, like the intensely furious conflagration powerful enough to burn away the forests, the turbulent foes and chief villains, and like the handsome bees humming in the lotuses, the beautiful feet of Śambhu.

V. 23. Groups of (their) relatives extol with gestures of hands the Fifty Families so as to be well appreciated by the whole world saying, "They are worthy of praise by the good, avowedly truthful, armoured with piety and inestimable conduct, gladdened in their pure hearts at the innumerable delights of their wives and are ever busy in the worship of the lotus feet of gods and of devījas".

Lines 36-38. The Fifty Families, thus praised, assembled and performed the installation of god Telligēśvara in the north-east quarter of Eranbarāpura and also constructed a temple for the deity. To describe the succession in the family of the preceptor of Charādramaulidēva, the āchārya of that temple :—

V. 24. There was an ornament of ascetics named Vighrēśvara of much extolled intellect, who was greatly praised in (his) respectable family¹, an abode of refugees, and was known as Lakulīśa born in the Kali age.

V. 25. The meditator on his lotus feet was the righteous Yōgēśvarayati of blameless conduct, a bolt lifted up at the mountain, the Cupid, a sun to the lily of Lākulāgama (i.e., works of the Lākuja sect).

Vv. 26 and 27. The disciple of that excellent muni was the best yati called Charādramauli, the sole resort of learned men, who has conquered the rising Kali; his generosity surpassed the group of desire-yielding trees, his vow of (subsisting on) roots, the praiseworthy son of Vāyu (i.e., Hanūmān), his truthfulness, the unblamable Satyatapa, his serenity, the ocean and his fame pervading the three worlds, the lustre of the moon.

Ll. 44-46. Hail ! When the victorious reign of the illustrious Tribhuvanarnalla Bijjandēva, an asylum of the whole world, Lord of Fortune and Earth, possessed of all the laudatory titles like Mahārājadhirāja, Paramēśvara, Paramahatthāraka, a sun to the lotus of the Kalmachuriya family, terrible in fight, was advancing in the course of continuously increasing prosperity as long as the sun and the moon last,

¹ Mannega may also be taken to mean a particular sub-division of the teacher's lineage.

Ll. 46-48. On Monday, the new-moon day of Pushya, which was the day of Uttarāyana-samkrānti and Vyatipāta in the cyclic year Vyaya corresponding to the Śaka year 1088, the Fifty Families of Telligas met together and granted the following income with the pouring of water to the glorious god Telligēśvara after laving the feet of Chandramauli-dēva, the āchārya of Simhēśvara-maṭha.

Ll. 44-52. Each family in Cantonment and Town (should) each day measure out two soḷasa of oil for an oilmill; in the family (maintaining) the god's oil mill, oil measuring one soḷasa (should be received); five viśas on an oil mill for (the offering of) chaitra and pavitra; and five viśas from every one of those that press the mill; one koḷaga of jwarry per month from each family for conducting the feeding of people (i.e., guests) that come to the maṭha; one mattar of garden situated at.....west of the path leading to Kallūru; on the sacred occasion of Dīpāvali, one māna of oil from each family (should be received).

Ll. 52-54. The income granted by the Five hundred svāmins in (their) storehouse: for every gold coin, one areca-nut from sellers and one from buyers; one areca-nut from the counting officers each time (they count). The income granted by the dealers in betel-leaves: a hundred leaves for one cartload, a hundred for a bullock-load, fifty for a man's load and two shops in front of the temple.

B.

Verse 1. May the glorious and famous god Telligēśvara grant with kindness the prosperity of kingdom to the world-renowned Bijjaladēva and king Vīra-Vikrama.

V. 2. There were born to king Chāvuṇḍa of reputed virtues and to Siridēvi (two) sons namely, king Bijjala and king Vīra-Vikrama as if they were the (two) eyes or (two) goals of life (of their parents).

V. 3. Of them, the elder was prince Bijjala, a Cupid in form, a bee in the lotus feet of Śiva, with fame sung by all and an ocean of polity.

V. 4. King Vīra-Bijjaṇa trusted Śiva like Nambi and was like Ōhila, a devotee who did not observe any religious rites—what more—he was learned like Bāṇa.

V. 5. This prince Vīra-Bijjala of increasing fame, a shaft in the hearts of his foes and an expert, forsooth, in the sixty-four arts was the husband of Tripurādēvi.

V. 6. King Vīra-Vikrama looks majestic with fame extolled on earth as if he was then the (proper) lord (to bear) the title of Chakravartin.

V. 7. If (the name of) a tiger is taken (to compare his valour with) he would mock at it, he would.....host of serpents, oppose in a fitting manner.....and cow down the Death God. O! God!! Vīra-Vikrama is indeed a veritable warrior.

V. 8. Who, indeed, can survive.....(after witnessing) the force of the prowess of his arms? Who does not shrink in power? Who does not run away helpless after opposing (him) in battle? Who does not tremble or be perturbed in mind and will not.....offer everything of his own? What person is there that does not stretch his hands for the gifts of the renowned Vīra-Vikrama?

V. 9. The powerful chief Vīra-Vikrama gives (gifts) to one that praises him; protects if one seeks his shelter and is a beautiful swan to the lotus plant.....dēvi who equalled Lakṣmī.

Lines 10-12. Hail! When the illustrious Mahāmaṇḍalēśvara, Sāhasōttuṅga, Bhujabala....king.....ladēva and Vīra-Vikramadēva, possessed of all the laudatory birudas, were ruling in their capital Erambarage, with the diversion of pleasant conversation, Kisukāḍu-70, Bāgaḍage-70, Kelavaḍi-300, Nareyaṅgal-12 and Kariviḍi-3[o].

Ll. 12-16. On Monday, the auspicious day of Samkrānti, the fourteenth day.....in the cyclic year Plavaṅga, corresponding to the Śaka year 1109, Bijjaladēva and Vīra-Vikramadēva.....granted at the request of the Fifty Families as sarva-namasya, with the pouring of water and with immunity from all claims, twelve matar of land field by the pole (measuring) twenty-seven (?) spans, on the north of the land of god Jagatēśvara, to god Telligōśvara of Eranbarage, the fortunate town existing from times immemorial (anādi-paṭṭana), and at the request of Murnjaya-Sāhaṇi, one matar of paddy land to the west.....

No. 13.— DABOK INSCRIPTION OF THE TIME OF DHAVALAPPADEVA; [HARSHA—] SAMVAT 207.

By

R. R. HALDER, RAJPUTANA MUSEUM, AJMER.

This inscription was found engraved on a large stone lying in a field at the village of Dabōk, eight miles to the east of Udaipur in Mewār. It was removed to the Udaipur Museum by Rai Bahadur Gaurishankar H. Ojha, and I edit it from the ink-impression, which he so kindly placed at my disposal.¹ Dr. D. R. Bhandarkar has noticed it in this journal.²

The record contains fifteen lines of writing covering a space of about 3 ft. 6 ins. × 1 ft. 7 ins. The average size of the letters is $\frac{3}{4}$ in. The characters belong to the northern class of alphabets, commonly known as Kuṣiṭa lipi. They are almost similar to the Jodhpur Inscription³ of Pratihāra Bāuka. Palaeographically, the inscription is important, as the date given in it contains the letter-symbol of 200, which is worth noting. The language is incorrect Sanskrit and, excepting the two imprecatory verses, the whole record is in prose. In respect of orthography, the following points may be noted—consonants are doubled after r, as in Durgādēvyā (l. 4), -mārgga (l. 9), etc.; and before r, as in -puttra (l. 2), kshētram (l. 5), etc.; s is written for ś, as in °svarasya and sāradya (l. 4), and for sh, as in °sēdhyō- (l. 13), -aṭavīsv-a- (l. 14), etc.; the anusvāra is used for n in asmim- (l. 1), -chandrārka- (l. 11), etc., and is redundant in -vridhyartham (l. 11), and haram- (l. 15); m is written for ṃ in -nimī (l. 3), etc.; rules of sandhi are, as a rule, violated in almost all the lines. The upadhmāniya is used in punar=ādadita (l. 14). Other mistakes and irregularities are pointed out in the footnotes accompanying the text.

The inscription is of the time of Śrī-Dhavalappadēva, who, as shown by the titles Parama-bhaṭṭāraka, Mahārājādhirāja, Paramēśvara, appears to have been a paramount chief. The record is dated in the eighth day of the bright fortnight of Bhādrapada of the Samvat 207. The object of the inscription is to record the grant of some fields and, probably, shops, too, by Vaidya Giyaka, son of Nāgadāman, a resident of Dhavagartā (the present town of Dhōṛ in the Jahāzpur district of the Udaipur State) to the temples of the god Mahāmahēśvara and the goddess Durgā called Ghaṭṭavāsini.

As the era to which the year belongs has not been specified, the date cannot be ascertained with certainty. The characters, however, are of a period not earlier than the 8th or 9th century A. D. In consideration of this fact, the date can be referred to the Harsha era, in which several other inscriptions⁴ of Rājputānā are dated. In that case the date would correspond to Monday, the 8th August A.D. 813. The family to which Dhavalappadēva belonged is not mentioned in this inscription. From the Dhanōp inscription⁵ of Chachcha, dated Samvat 1063

¹ The impression is not very clear. Consequently the reading is not free from doubt in several places.

⁵ Ind. Ant., Vol. XI, p. 174

(A.D. 1006), we know that the Rāshtrakūṭas were ruling over Rājputānā in the eleventh century A.D. We also know from the Sirūr inscription¹ of the Rāshtrakūṭa king Amōghavarsha I that Gōvindarāja III conquered Kērala, Mālava, Gurjara, etc., as far as Chitrakūṭa (Chitōr in Mewār). This would show that the Rāshtrakūṭas of the Deccan held their sway over some parts of Rājputānā in the beginning of the ninth century A.D. Possibly the Rāshtrakūṭas of Dhanōp, which is near Mewār, were related to the Rāshtrakūṭas of the Deccan, and Dhavalappadēva may also have been related to them. His name seems to be of South-Indian² origin.

The epigraph under notice describes Dhanika as the son of Guhila, who then ruled over Dhavagartā (l. 2). The Chāṭsū inscription³ of Bālāditya mentions a Dhanika as the son of Guhila. One Dhanika figures as a local ruler in the inscription⁴ dated Saṃvat 887 (A.D. 830), recently discovered at Nāsūn in the Kharwā estate in Ajmer-Merwara, but, there, he is described as the father of Īśānabhaṭa. The Dhanika of the Chāṭsū inscription was the great-grand-son of Īśānabhaṭa. Consequently there must have been two Dhanikas and two Īśānabhaṭas.

The contents of the inscription may be summed up as follows:—

After making an obeisance to the god Śiva and giving the date as the eighth day of the bright fortnight of Bhādrapada of the saṃvat 207 (200 in letter-symbol and 7 in figure), the first five lines state that, during the reign of Paramabhaṭṭāraka Mahārājādhirāja Paramēśvara Śrī-Dhavalappadēva, Vaidya Gīyaka, son of Nāgadāman of the Kāyastha family and an inhabitant of Dhavagartā, which was being ruled over by Dhanika, a Guhilot, made permanent endowments of some śāradyagraishmika fields (the fields that can be tilled in autumn as well as in summer) to two temples—one of Mahāmahēśvara established by him (Gīyaka) and the other of Durgādēvī previously established by Vaidya Yaśōdēva. Lines 4-5 inform us that the above fields were in the share or inheritance of Chachcha (probably one of the sons of the donor). In lines 5-10 are given the boundaries of the fields and of the two shops. Lines 10-11 tell us that the fields were granted for the increase of religious merit and fame of the donor and his parents, as also for the repairs and maintenance of the above temples. In lines 12-13, the allotment of the fields and the share of their produce is made. The fifteenth or the last line tells us that the inscription was engraved by Vṛiddhināga, son of Vaidya Gīyaka.

No. 14.—FOUR CHANDELLA COPPER-PLATE INSCRIPTIONS.

BY RAI BAHADUR HIRALAL.

Impressions of the four inscriptions, edited below, were forwarded to me by Dr. Hirananda Sastri, Government Epigraphist for India, who received the plates from the Ruling Chief of Charkhāri State, Bundelkhand, Central India, through the Director General of Archæology in India. No details as to their provenance were available from the State office records. For the sake of convenience, I am here noticing the inscriptions in their chronological order.

A.—CHARKHARI PLATE OF DEVAVARMADEVA : [VIKRAMA-]SAMVAT 1108.

This charter is incised on a large copper-plate, 18½" by 12½", with its corners rounded off and weighing 360½ tolas. The plate is surmounted by a copper-hook, 2½" long, which is rivetted to it and holds a ring 2½" in diameter. Just below this is carved the figure of the four-armed goddess Lakshmi with an elephant on each side pouring water on her head with raised trunk. Under her seat is inscribed the sign-manual Śrīmad-Dēvavarmmadēvaḥ sva-hastāḥ in two lines. The figure occupies a space, 4 inches long and 3 inches high, just in the middle of the first 6 lines. Each complete line is on the average 16" long.

The inscription is engraved in Nāgarī characters, their average size being ⅜". The language is Sanskrit. But there are numerous mistakes in spelling, etc., some of which appear to be due to the oversight of the engraver. There is a palpable instance of the latter being influenced by local patois, viz., the Bundelkhandi Hindī in which jē is still used for the Sanskrit yē, of which it is an exact equivalent. In line 21 the engraver had used the correct form but in the next line the more familiar vernacular word asserted itself. The orthographical peculiarities are similar to those which the late Dr. Kielhorn pointed out in editing another copper-plate charter of the same king issued a year before the present one.⁷ The latter was issued on the occasion of the anniversary of his mother's death, while the present record was issued on the occasion of a lunar eclipse for the religious benefit of himself and his parents. The date of this record is Samvat 1108 Mārgasīra śudi 15, Sōma-dina.¹ On this day the Chandēlla king Dēvavarmadēva, Lord of Kālīnjara, meditating on the feet of Vijayapālādēva who meditated on the feet of Vidyādhara-dēva, offered water to the names of his ancestors, worshipped Śūlapāni or Śiva and gave the village Bhūtapallikā, situated on the bank of the Yamunā river in the vishaya of Nava-rāshṭra-maṇḍala, to Paṇḍita Kikkana of the Krishnātrēya-gōtra with 3 pravaras whose ancestors had emigrated from Kumbhaṭibhaṭagrāma. This Brāhmaṇa was ever ready to expound the Vēdas, the Vēdāṅgas, Itihāsa, the Purāṇas and Mīmāṃsā and was devoted to śaṭ-karma (śaṭ-karm-ābhirata), the prominent mention of which leads me to infer that he practised Yōga,² which is more awe-inspiring than the ordinary six³ duties of a Brāhmaṇa.

The localities mentioned in this record have not yet been identified, excepting Kālīnjara, whence the record was issued, and the Yamunā river on whose bank the village of Bhūtapallikā was situated. Both of them, viz., the fort of Kālīnjara and the river Yamunā or Jumnā are too well known to require identification. The mention of the latter indicates sufficiently the locality of the village and the district in which it was included. Dēvavarmadēva was the 12th king of the Chandēlla dynasty and, if this record shows anything in regard to his capital and extent of his dominions, it indicates that he lived in the Kālīnjara fort and that his rāj extended at least up to the Jumnā in the north. But almost the same conclusion is derivable from his other record referred to before and those of his predecessors, an account of which has been given by the late Dr. V. A. Smith in his exhaustive essay on the history and coinage of the Chandēlla dynasty.⁴ But it may be noted here that in his zeal to show the great antiquity of the Chandēlla dynasty and its kingdom Jējākabhukti—the designation was later on changed to Jajhauti and taken as given after Jējāka or Jayaśakti, the third king of the line—he has fallen into a blunder, to which enthusiasts, howsoever great, are sometimes liable. In his article he has attempted to prove that Chih-chi-t'o, visited and described by Yuan Chwang in 641 or 642 A.D., was no other than Jijhōti. This would mean that the country was named after a king, who was born about 200 years later, as according to him⁵ Jējāka ascended the throne about 860 A.D.

¹ This date is irregular. According to Swamikannu Pillai's Indian Ephemeris, V. S. 1108, Mārgasīra śu, 15 fell on Wednesday, the 20th November of A.D. 1051, with no lunar eclipse on that date. The date in V, 8, 1109 would correspond to Tuesday, the 8th December, A.D. 1052, when there was a lunar eclipse.

B.—CHARKHARI PLATES OF PARAMARDDIDEVA : [VIKRAMA-]SAMVAT 1236.

These are two copper-plates having raised rims ($\frac{3}{8}$ " high) rivetted to them. Each plate weighs 180 $\frac{1}{2}$ tolas, but their sizes differ a little, the first measuring 14 $\frac{1}{2}$ " by 11 $\frac{1}{2}$ " and the second 14 $\frac{1}{2}$ " by 10 $\frac{1}{2}$ ". The former contains 18 lines of writing against 14 of the latter. On the first plate there is a figure of Lakshmi in the middle of the first three lines, and at the bottom, a round hole in the middle of the last line. In the second plate space was left for a hole, but it was never made and hence the plates were not strung together as was originally intended. The size of the letters in the first plate is $\frac{1}{2}$ ". They are smaller and more beautiful than those in the second plate, to cover the whole of which the engraver Pālhaṇa, a skilful artisan, as he calls himself, had had to raise the size to $\frac{5}{8}$ ". In the case of the Mahōbā plates of Samvat 1230,⁴ I remarked how Pālhaṇa worked up his way from the position of a pīṭalahāra to that of a vijñānin, and this time, sic., six years later, he raised himself to the position of a *vaidagdhī-vīśvakarman*⁵ (l. 32). Despite this, there is hardly any improvement in his engraving. The fact remains that the letters va, dha, cha and ra have been so formed as to cause confusion with one another, for instance, in l. 4 Paramarddidēvō has been engraved as Paramarddidērō. Ba has not been at all distinguished from va and the symbol for the medial u has been sometimes so broadened as to give the appearance of a ta, e.g., bhūtā (l. 17). In the text letters or their parts are, in some cases, omitted in consequence of which the sense is also affected. The anuvāra and the rēpha have been in many cases omitted through sheer inattention, cf. śaṭ-tri[m]śa²* (l. 8) and Prithivīva[r]mma°* (l. 3). On the whole the record is well written. The language is Sanskrit and the text is similar to the one found in other records of the same king. The composer of the record or rather the adopter of the prescribed form, with necessary changes, was one Śubhānamda Vāstavya, who was probably a relative of Prithvīdhara Vāstavya, the writer of some of the previous records of Paramarddidēva.

This charter was issued from Vilāsapura and records the grant of Sagaudō village situated in the district of Kirāyīḍa to a number of Brāhmaṇas, whose forefathers had immigrated from Mutāutha-Bhaṭṭāgrahāra, by the P. M. P. Paramamāhēśvara Paramarddidēva, meditating on the feet of the P. M. P. Madanavarmadēva, who meditated on the feet of the P. M. P. Prithvīvarmadēva, descended from the heroes Jayaśakti and Vijayaśakti of the Chandrātrēya (Chandēlla) lineage. The grant was made for the increase of the religious merit of the donor and his parents on Monday, the seventh day of the bright fortnight of Chaitra in the Vikrama-Samvat 1236¹ which regularly corresponds to Monday, the 27th March 1178 A.D. The record does not supply any new information worth being mentioned and which is not given in the numerous inscriptions² of this king which have already been found. [It is interesting to observe here that in the gift-village exception was made of the five halas of land gifted to Buddha (l. 14) for that would show that a Buddhist monastery was in existence there and was endowed with that land.—Ed.]

Of the localities mentioned in it, Kālāñjara is too well known to require identification. Kirāyīḍa may be Kirāḍi, 5 miles from Mahōbā. I have not been able to trace Vilāsapura, Sagaudō and Mutāutha villages.

² [Plural should be used.—Ed.]

³ Āṭavika I took to be "wild tribes", see above, Vol. XVI, p. 14, n. 1, but it indicates a Government Officer, viz., one in charge of the forest and wild tribes. This finds a mention even in Kaṭṭya's Arthaśāstra. See Dr. Sharma Sastri's Sanskrit Text, p. 254.

C.—CHARKHARI PLATE OF VIRAVARMADĒVA : [VIKRAMA-]SAMVAT 1311.

The present charter is the earliest record of the Chandēlla king Viravarmadēva yet found. The copper-plate on which it is engraved measures 15½" by 11½" and weighs 230½ tolas. It has a raised rim, ½" in height, rivetted with nails all round it. In the middle of the first six lines there is a seated figure of the four-armed goddess Lakshmi, holding lotus flowers in the two upper, and water pots in the two lower, hands. Over her head is a semi-circular hole apparently meant for a ring, which is wanting. There are 19 lines of writing with well formed letters the size of which is ½" on an average.

The language is Sanskrit and the orthographical peculiarities are the same as found in other Chandēlla records published before. The record is not free from spelling and other mistakes, but they are comparatively fewer than in other similar records of the family.

The charter was issued from Vilāsapura by the P. M. P. Viravarmadēva the devout worshipper of Mahēśvara, and the Lord of Kālāñjara, son of the P. M. P. Trailōkyavarman, son of the P. M. P. Paramarddidēva, son of the P. M. P. Madanavarmadēva, descended from Jayaśakti and Vijayaśakti, the famous heroes belonging to the Chandrātrēya (Chandēlla) lineage. It records the grant of Ṭumuṭumā village in the Ḍāhī viśhaya to Rāūta Abhi, son of Rāūta Haripāla, son of Rāūta Jagadēva, son of Rāūta Dēvashamū of the Kāśyapa-gōtra belonging to the family of Chandrēśvara, on Āśvina śudi 8, Sōmavāra, Samvat 1311, which regularly corresponds to Monday, the 21st September 1254 A.D. The grantee is stated to have performed a deed of valour in a tussle with Dabhyuhaḍavarman in the battle of Sōndhī, as a recognition whereof this grant appears to have been made in spite of the fact that the purpose has been recorded as one for increasing the religious merit of the grantor Viravarmadēva and his parents. In the present case the grantee does not appear to have been a Brāhmaṇa, as the omission of his pravaras indicates. Moreover, the family name Chandrēśvara and the title Rāūta point to the same conclusion. Apparently Sōndhī is identical with Seondhā fort, now called Kanhārgaḍh, lying on the banks of the Sind river in the Datia State, whence it took its name. It is stated in the State Gazetteer (Luard's, p. 129) that "Seondhā is certainly an old town as the remains of the earlier settlement can be traced close to the present town. It has been suggested as the Sarua fort taken by Mahmud of Gazni in 1018 when in pursuit of Chand Rai". Our record refers to a battle a little more than a hundred years later, apparently between members of the same lineage, viz., the Chandēllas, if the termination of the opponent's name Dabhyuhaḍavarman would indicate anything to that effect. It must have been a battle of some importance to have been referred to as saṅgrāma or war. That was the time of disturbance as Viravarmadēva's grandfather Paramarddidēva had been defeated by Prithvīrāja Chāhamāna in 1182 A.D. In fact the late Dr. V. A. Smith remarks that "the history of the Chandēlla dynasty as one of the powers of Northern India ends in 1203 A.D. with the death of Parmāl (Paramarddidēva) and the capture of Kālāñjara and Mahōbā by the Muhammadan invaders. Trailōkyavarman succeeded his father Parmāl as a local chieftain holding the eastern part of the ancestral kingdom and in due course was succeeded by Viravarman and Bhōjavarman".

The other villages referred to in this record have not been traced yet.

D.—CHARKHARI PLATE OF HAMMIRAVARMADEVA : [VIKRAMA-]SAMVAT

This is the first copper-plate charter of the Chandēlla king Hammiravarmadēva, whom I brought to notice, a decade ago, in my Damoh Dipaka, the Hindī Gazetteer of the Damoh district in the Central Provinces, from a satī record which I found in the village Bamhni of that district.¹ When I visited the Ajayagadh fort, I came upon another satī stone record² mentioning his name, which I included in the new account³ of the Ajayagadh fort inscriptions revised since the visit of General Sir Alexander Cunningham as detailed in his Survey Report, Vol. XXI. It appears to me that the Hamirpur district of the United Provinces, in which Mahōbā, the civil capital of the Chandēllas, is included, derives its name from this Chandēlla king. Of course, this district which borders on the Charkhārī State, took its name from the town of Hamirpur, which is situated on the confluence of the Jumnā and the Betwā, 110 miles north-west of Allahābād.

The record is engraved on a copper-plate 11½" long and 8½" broad, with a raised rim ½" in height running all round the plate and secured on the latter by nails. Its weight is 48 tolas only. In the middle of the first four lines of writing there is a figure of the four-armed goddess Lakshmi holding lotuses and water pots. On the top of the figure there is a hole for a ring which was either not put in or has been taken off and lost. The plate shows signs of corroding without serious damage to letters, which are rather small, their average size being ¼". The engraving is badly executed.

The language of the record is Sanskrit, the style being in the prescribed form used by the Chandēllas; but, from what little the writer composed, it is clear that he was no Sanskritist, as he has committed many spelling as well as grammatical mistakes. The insertion of the title Sāhi against the names of all the kings mentioned indicates the growing Muhammadan influence, which finally ousted the Chandēllas, apparently during the reign of the grantor of this very charter. Hammiravarmadēva, who styled himself as the Paramabhāṭāraka Sāhi Rāj.

āvali-tray-ōpēta,¹ Lord of Kālāñjara, meditating on the feet of the P. M. P. Sāhi Mahārāja Viravarmadēva, who meditated on the feet of the P. M. P. Sāhi Mahārāja Trailōkyavarmadēva, who meditated on the feet of the P. M. P. Sāhi Mahārāja Paramarddidēva, announced the grant of Kō(or Kī?)kaḍagrāma in the Vēdēsaitha-vishaya to two Brāhmaṇas who were apparently brothers, on Sunday, the twelfth day of the dark fortnight of Bhādrapada and the Pushya-nakshatra in the Vikrama Samvat 1346, corresponding to Sunday, the 11th September, 1289 A.D.² It will be noticed that in his own case Hammiravarmadēva has left out the grandiloquent title of the Mahārājādhirāja Paramēśvara, which he duly attached to his elders. This indicates that either he was fully conscious of his reduced position, which induced him to be content with a humbler title, or that he was never recognised as the Mahārāja while his elder brother Bhōjavarmadēva was on the throne. In the Ajayagaḍh fort there is a satī record of Samvat 1346, which refers to the reign of Bhōjavarman.³ This copper-plate dated in the same year would therefore point to a usurpation of the throne, unless Bhōjavarman died in the same year before the month of Bhādrapada, when the grant under publication was made.

The document was written by Paṁ[ḍita*] Raum(Rāma)pāla.

The localities mentioned in the record are not traceable.
